TRIBUNE GETS TEXT OF PACT ON SUBMARINES

5 Powers Agree to Humanize War.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, April 5.—THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE is privileged tonight to present herewith the official text of the first of the series of five power agreements negotiated at the London naval conference. This agreement, approved by the American, British, French, Italian and Japanese delegations, and scheduled for formal adoption by the conference next week, is designed to humanize submarine warfare.

It prohibits sinking merchant ships without warning, and other forms of ruthless submarine warfare. It legalizes, however, setting adrift passengers and crews of captured merchant ships in open boats when the circumstances assure their safety. Whether submarine commanders are to be the judge of these circumstances the agreement does not state.

Text of Agreement.

The text of the agreement follows:

"The undersigned, duly authorized to that effect on behalf of their respective governments, hereby make the following declaration:

"The following are accepted as established rules of international law:

"1. In their action with regard to merchant ships, submarines must conform to the rules of international law to which surface war vessels are subject.

"2. In particular, except in case of a persistent refusal to halt on being duly summoned, or active resistance to visit or search, a warship, whether a surface vessel or a submarine, may not sink or render incapable for navigation a merchant vessel without having first placed the passengers, crew and ship's papers in a place of safety.

World Invited to Join.

"For this purpose a ship's boats are not regarded as a place of safety, unless the safety of the passengers and crew are assured in the existing sea and weather conditions by the proximity of land or the presence of another vessel which is in a position to take them aboard.

"The signatory governments invite all other governments to express their assent to these rules by means of a notification addressed to the government of ——."

The name of the government to which acceptance of this agreement is to be sent, not only by the five powers represented here but by all other countries, will be filled in by the conference meeting as the committee of the whole next Tuesday.

Envoys Survey Situation.

When Prime Minister MacDonald sat down to luncheon with American Secretary of State Stimson and Ambassador Morrow at the American headquarters today, the submarine rules were the only agreement ready for formal adoption by the conference which has been in session ten weeks.

The American and British leaders surveyed the situation over whitebait and muffins and decided to make a final supreme effort during the coming week for a five power naval limitation treaty. Then, if the differences among Great Britain, France and Italy prove impossible of adjustment, Great Britain, America and Japan will proceed with the conclusion of a three power treaty.

Mr. Stimson's hope, however, that the American delegation will be able to sail home on the Leviathan on April 22 is waning. It looks now more like the Americans cannot leave before the first week in May at the earliest.

May Not Require Ratification.

The submarine agreement has been cast in the form of a declaration instead of a treaty. The Washington conference of 1922 evolved a plan for the humanization of submarine warfare in the form of a treaty which all the powers signed, but which never became effective by virtue of the failure of France to ratify it. Whether a ratification of this new agreement is to be required will be decided by the conference.

The Washington treaty, drawn up by Elihu Root, outlawed absolutely the use of submarines as commerce destroyers and provided that submarine officers and crews violating the prohibition could be punished as pirates by any power within whose jurisdiction they might be found. France refused to ratify the Root treaty because she was not willing to accept these two provisions.

GETTING HIM READY FOR THE NEXT RACE?

BUTCHER SLAIN IN GUN BATTLE WITH BANDITS

Anton Rokos, 40 years old, a butcher, was shot fatally last night by one of two gunmen with whom he exchanged shots in his butcher shop at 1259 South Karlov avenue, after they had robbed him of several hundred dollars. Rokos' wife, May, 35 years old, and Mrs. Rose Kohout, who lives over the butcher shop, watched the gun battle from the Rokos living quarters in the rear of the store.

The two gunmen entered the store while Rokos was waiting on Mrs. Kohout. While one of them marched the butcher and the woman to the rear, the other took the day's receipts from the cash register. As the two bandits started for the door, Rokos grabbed up a gun in his living room and ran after them, firing five shots. The bandits backed through the door toward an automobile they had parked in front of the shop, firing a half dozen shots. One bullet hit Rokos in the heart. He died on the way to St. Anthony's hospital.

As Sergt. James Clancy and his detective squad were racing to the scene, their automobile struck another driven by Edward Cavert, 32 years old, 2029 Wilson avenue, at 5th avenue and Sacramento boulevard, and both cars turned over. Cavert suffered a possible skull fracture and his wife, Hilda, 32 years old, suffered a concussion of the brain. Detective Edward Gannon was slightly injured, the others escaping with bruises.

DR. HUTTON TO TREAT GLANDS OF I. C. EMPLOYES

The appointment of Dr. James H. Hutton, president elect of the Chicago Medical society, as consulting endocrinologist of the Illinois Central railroad to keep the ductless glands of 60,000 employes of the railroad functioning properly, was announced yesterday by Dr. G. G. Dowdall, chief surgeon of the railroad. The appointment is believed to be the first of its kind in the history of industrial medicine.

Hope of increasing the efficiency of the railroad employes prompted the appointment of Dr. Hutton to its staff. The endocrine or ductless glands, which include the thyroid, adrenal, and pituitary glands, exert a tremendous influence over growth, blood pressure, loss or increase in weight, and health in general, and correction of any defects caused by these glands is expected to reduce the time lost by railroad employes because of illness.

8 Chicago Lads to See Arctic with M'Millan

Eight young Chicagoans, from 10 to 18 years old, will sail this summer on an expedition into the arctic with Commander Donald B. MacMillan, including the exploration of areas along the Greenland coast.

William Thomas, 10 years old, son of Dr. William A. Thomas, 5630 Kimbark avenue, is the youngest boy to go on the expedition. His father, who accompanied Commander MacMillan on a trip to Greenland and Baffin Land in 1926, will ship out as both mate and physician.

Will Leave in June.

Commander MacMillan's sturdy little schooner, the Bowdoin, which for several years has made its way among the ice of the arctic safely, will set out with the party June 21 from Wiscasset, Me., according to present plans.

The other Chicago boys, sons of wealthy families, who were chosen for their knowledge of seamanship or radio, are:

John Post, 17 years old, son of Dr. Wilber E. Post, 5811 Dorchester avenue; Edward Hoffmann, 18 years old, son of Mrs. Max Hoffmann, 202 East Walton place; Frank Elliott, 17 years old, son of Dr. Charles A. Elliott, 5537 Woodlawn avenue; Clifford G. Grulee Jr., 18 years old, son of Dr. Grulee, 1410 Asbury avenue, Evanston; Robert Morse Potter, 16 years old, son of Dr. Hollis E. Potter, 449 Barry avenue; Paul H. Davis Jr. of Winnetka, son of Paul H. Davis, broker, and James Markham, 16 years old, son of Herbert I. Markham, 5605 Woodlawn avenue.

Student of Radio.

Paul Davis, a student in Culver Military academy, Culver, Ind., was chosen for his expert radio knowledge. The Potter boy, a student in the Chicago Latin school, qualified through his experience in racing his own yacht, according to his mother, Frank Elliott, a student of University High school, has had considerable training in seamanship through maneuvering his sailboat.

The boys expect to do real work on the trip, according to Mrs. Potter. "Of course, it is rather hard on the mothers, but we have to be good sports about it. Our boys, never, never would forgive us if we didn't let them go. Naturally the part that thrills them most is the sailing through the icy wastes of the east coast of Greenland—and that is the part that frightens the mothers," she said.

Guests of Celebration.

During the three and one-half months they are gone the boys and their commander will be guests at the millennial celebration of the founding of the first parliamentary government—that of Iceland, in 930.

In addition to enjoying the festivities there they will visit Greenland, Baffin Land, and Labrador. According to Dr. Thomas, there have been no successful explorations of areas of the east coast of Greenland. A German expedition in the nineteenth century ended in catastrophe, the ships being crushed in the ice, he said. While the exploration would be a hazardous one in any ship less strong than the Bowdoin, that schooner has proved itself admirably fit for the occasion, Dr. Thomas said.

2 FOUND GUILTY, ACCUSE SEVEN AS BURGLARY RING

Information volunteered to the state's attorney's office by James Miller and John Hanley, each 28 years old, following their conviction on a robbery charge last week, resulted last night in the arrest of four alleged burglars and their three alleged fences, members of a band who had plundered stores of at least $200,000 in the last year, according to Police Sergeant Joseph Healy and his squad.

The alleged fences are Thomas Krueger, 40 years old, 5433 Kimbark avenue and the Warshawsky brothers, Arthur and Charles, who denied relationship to Abraham Warshawsky, well known west side junk dealer, although they gave as an address the number of the Warshawsky plant at 3220 Ogden avenue.

The others in custody are Frank Bell, 35, of 1901 South Wabash avenue; Thomas Maloney, 28, and Harry Stagg, 30, both of the Tyler hotel, 2130 South Michigan avenue, and Joseph [Red] De Ruse, 30 years old, 121 East 18th street. The two convicted men also named Thomas and James Diav, owners of a silk shop, who had prosecuted them on the robbery charge. The Diavs were also fences for the gang, according to Miller and Hanley.

BOMBS IN GARDEN OF GETHSEMANE STIR HOLY CITY

JERUSALEM, April 5.—(AP)—Five bombs were discovered today in a corner of the Garden of Gethsemane.

The dicovery gave rise to alarmists' reports in the city. The Arabs in particular tried to connect it with the fact that the Nebi Musa procession, one of the biggest Moslem feasts of the year, which takes place soon, passes along a route skirting the garden, and intimate the bombs were placed there by Jews.

CANDIDATES END CAMPAIGNS FOR LOCAL OFFICES

Turn to Final Jobs of Organizing.

BY PARKE BROWN.

The Cook county campaign for nominations for local offices closed yesterday as it began—with the organizations pressing hard on detailed work and the rival candidates striving to build their own fences without going after their opponents.

Old timers say that in future years this primary may become known as the campaign of silence because of the absence of fervid oratory and public appeal for cherished places on the November election ballot for county, sanitary district, and municipal court offices.

The characteristics are ascribed by observers to the fact that attention has been concentrated in the Republican primary on the top and the bottom of the ticket—the United States senatorship and the county committee—and there has been no serious contest on the Democratic side.

Little Noise in Loop.

For the first time in many years there has been little political noise in the loop. In past campaigns there have been at least two county factions holding rival noon meetings in the theaters. This time these gatherings have been limited to the Deneen and McCormick meetings, with some of the Deneen candidates speaking from the same platform as the senator. But the Snow-city hall organization has not held a single loop theater meeting for its local candidates.

The campaign is considered closed now because the political managers themselves admit that the die is cast, that there will be few votes changed by the few meetings and radio speeches still to come or even by the activity in and around hundreds of churches this morning upon which some of the candidates count materially.

Several county candidates for major offices said yesterday that they have nothing more for the press, that they consider their operations are over except for the finishing touches to organization operations.

Guard Against Deals.

Even that handful that intermittently stirred things up by sailing into their opponents during the last two or three weeks became mute, with only an exception or two. These included no more than half a dozen in their number at any time during their campaign, but even they indicate now that they will devote their remaining time to their ward units, to guarding against deals and trades that would hurt them and possibly to making a friendly arrangement here and there for help from an outside camp.

Opinions vary among politicians concerning the relative importance of the local officials elected in presidential years and those chosen in the off year, of which this is an example. But the general opinion is that this year is much more important to the taxpayer than the presidential year, so far as these offices are concerned.

In addition to choosing a sheriff, a county treasurer, a county clerk, and a county judge—all of whom have big office forces—the entire personnel of the county board for the next two years is to be elected. And this year complete control of the sanitary district—because of two vacancies through death—is at stake in the choosing of five of the board of nine trustees. There also are other county places to be filled. A chief justice and fourteen associate justices of the Municipal court, and the clerk and bailiff of the court are to be elected.

Rivals Heard by Voters.

Rival Deneen and Snow-city hall candidates for all these places have been heard in ward and sectional meetings throughout the city, but their speeches were pronounced chiefly routine in nature. Two independent organizations, the Elmore group of drainage board candidates, and the Lonnquist group for the county board, also have been active.

Three candidates for the presidency of the county commissioners, Arthur F. Albert (Deneen), Otto F. Reich (Snow-city hall), and Axel Lonnquist, have done most of their shooting at the Democratic incumbent, A. J. Cermak, but Albert also has attacked Reich as a city hall candidate.

But Albert and Lonnquist both say they have been robbed of the chance to show up Republicans now on the county board as responsible for present conditions because Chairman Snow of the county committee refused to slate any of the city commissioners and accepted

RIVAL FORECASTS MADE IN RACE FOR SENATORSHIP

The following election claims were made on behalf of Senator Deneen and Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick yesterday:

W. R. James, manager for Mrs. McCormick—Mrs. McCormick will lead Senator Deneen in Cook county by a minimum of 75,000 votes. Information from city wards and country towns indicates a rapidly improving sentiment toward Mrs. McCormick's candidacy, and I expect it will be necessary to revise these figures before election day. The vote outside of Cook county will substantially increase the advantage of Mrs. McCormick.

Roy O. West, Deneen manager—In 1924 Senator Deneen carried 67 of our 102 counties. He carried the city of Chicago by about 23,000 votes. These results were obtained against a powerful federal and state organization, reinforced by a strong Cook county organization. Now we have the precincts and counties of the state organized with active men and women, and we expect him to carry a minimum of 80 counties and the city of Chicago by a large majority. In my judgment, he will be nominated by a decisive vote.

Gandhi Defies Britain; Makes Salt in India

BULLETIN.

JALALPUR, India, April 6.—(AP)—Mahatma Gandhi manufactured salt from sea water here this morning, thereby breaking the British law establishing a monopoly on salt manufacture.

JALALPUR, India, April 5.—(AP)—Tomorrow is the long awaited day for the leaders of the civil disobedience campaign in India. At 6:30 o'clock in the morning Mahatma Gandhi and a group of his faithful planned to wade into the waters of the Gulf of Cambay at Dandi, near here, and begin the manufacture of salt in opposition to the government monopoly.

Nearly a month has passed since the mahatma and a little party of followers left Ahmadabad for the 165 mile march to the sea. The party stopped in villages at nights and at each one the venerable Nationalist leader, whose title means "the holy one," gained supporters and obtained resignations by village headmen.

Will Evaporate Brine.

At Dandi tonight they were preparing for the first definite act of civil disobedience. As the first step they will wade into the waters of the tidal marshes and fill pots with salt water. These will be placed in the sun for evaporation of the water, and the residue of salt will be removed for sale.

The first sales will be made in the street of Ahmadabad, with members of the all-Indian congress committee directing the hawking. The salt is said to be unedible, but the mere manufacture and sale of it constitutes a breach of law and fulfills Gandhi's aim.

The attitude of the government has not been announced. Viceroy Lord Irwin is understood to be avoiding measures that would provoke disturbances.

Disobedience to Spread.

If the Nationalists succeed in their first action of the plan for noncooperation with governmental agencies, they intend to follow in time with nonpayment of taxes and resignation of native officials.

Salt is, of course, an article of universal consumption and its manufacture in India is controlled by the government exclusively. The tax on salt is less than one farthing a pound, but revenue from this source last year was more than £5,000,000 [about $25,000,000].

Bombay Strikers Aid Gandhi.

LONDON, April 5.—(AP)—England tonight awaited with keen expectancy news from the little seaside village of Dandi in India, where tomorrow morning Mahatma Gandhi planned to defy British rule.

From Bombay came a report that strikers on the Great Indian Peninsular railway would help Gandhi's civil disobedience campaign in their own special fashion, it being their intention to lie on the railway tracks in groups and thus hold up trains.

DRAMATIC G.O.P. BATTLE SURGES TO FIERY FINISH

World Court Issue Put to Voters.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The Republican senatorship battle between Ruth Hanna McCormick and Senator Charles S. Deneen is surging to its finish for Tuesday's primaries with phases that make it a national spectacle. Last night found the two leading contenders accusing each other of being "political acrobats" and "flipflop artists." On the radio and on the platform they compared each other's record in congress and cast up an inventory of the issues.

Historically, it is the first time a woman has made a serious race for a seat in the United States senate. The world court has been the predominant issue. It gives Washington an extra interest in the contest inasmuch as President Hoover has announced he will at a convenient time submit the new world court protocol to the senate for ratification.

A Colorful Campaign.

Prominence of the two leading figures adds color. Senator Deneen has twice been governor and for a generation has been in Chicago and Illinois politics. Mrs. McCormick is generally regarded as the leading woman in American politics. But it's not a feminist movement nor a feminine appeal, for throughout the state a stereotyped remark of politicians has been, "Mrs. McCormick plays politics just like a man."

Dramatic human interest values, too, are present. Mrs. McCormick is the daughter of the late Senator Mark Hanna of Ohio and the widow of the late Senator Medill McCormick. She is running against Senator Deneen, who defeated Senator McCormick in 1924. Senator Deneen has been in politics since 1892 when he went to the legislature, and Mrs. McCormick got her first taste of politics on the back platform of her father's train in the rousing days of 1896 when Mark Hanna was electing McKinley President over Bryan.

Both Sides Claim Victory.

By both sides it has been heralded as a "bunkless" campaign. Both camps express confidence as the polls approach.

Roy O. West, national committeeman and Deneen manager, in his forecast last night predicted Deneen will carry "a minimum of 80 counties and Chicago by a large majority."

W. R. James, president of the west parks and McCormick county manager, estimates Mrs. McCormick will carry Cook county "by at least 75,000." This, too, is the estimate of the local anti-Deneen factional groups who are fighting over county offices. Mr. James also forecast Mrs. McCormick would lead downstate.

Reports rolling in from all quarters indicate the state is divided into four segments: Egypt, with the four southern congressional districts, where Deneen has always been strong, his family having lived there for 113 years; central Illinois, where it is give and take; northern Illinois with its heavy Republican counties, where Mrs. McCormick is reported to be strong, and Cook county, where the battle is most furious.

Jenkins an Unknown Factor.

A third candidate, Newton Jenkins is in the offing, an "X" quantity to the politicians. Six years ago Jenkins got 115,000 votes, carried three counties and ran second in eight others. The Jenkins vote was regarded as having enabled Deneen to beat McCormick—he won by 5,994 plurality. Mr. Jenkins in his forecast says this time the race lies between Mrs. McCormick and Jenkins. There are two other candidates.

On the Democratic side looms the figure of James Hamilton Lewis, former United States senator, who was defeated by Medill McCormick in 1918. At the primaries he has four opponents and a walkaway. Mr. Lewis is wet. Both Senator Deneen and Mrs. McCormick are drys, and one matter raised during the campaign has been the Deneen vote for the Jones 5 and 10 law.

Appeal to Women.

Both Mrs. McCormick and Senator Deneen yesterday concentrated on the women's vote at downtown meetings. Today the campaign will resound over Chicago. Activity in churches will be a phase of the day.

The world court was still protruberant last night as the leading contenders analyzed the progress of the issues. What has made it outstanding in the campaign is the vote cast for the world court by Senator Deneen in January, 1926. The same issue was raised four years ago against the late Senator William B. McKinley, who also voted for the court, and was held most largely responsible for his defeat that year by Frank L. Smith.

The Deneen camp points out that McKinley did not make a strong platform defense, while Deneen has upheld his vote and has probably made his world court address more than 100 times during the campaign. Mrs. McCormick, who started sooner, has probably delivered her attack on the world court as the "front porch" of the league of nations at more than 150 meetings.

A McCormick Statement.

McCormick headquarters, in a review issued last night, said:

"The first speech made by Mrs. McCormick placed her in possession of a definite issue against Senator Deneen, as she announctd that she believed the United States should not ratify the new protocol and statutes of the so-called world court.

"She based this opinion on the contention that the court is as definitely a part of the league of nations as it was when it was created by the league in 1920. She argued that the Root formula, which is now offered as a substitute for the fifth senate reservation, makes adherence to the court even less desirable now than it was in 1926, when the senate consented to adherence with five carefully worded conditions or reservations.

"Mrs. McCormick has maintained that the league court is not essential for the purpose of arbitrating our differences with other nations, as there is still available for that purpose the older Hague tribunal, which we have successfully used for years. Therefore, Mrs. McCormick has contended that while she, like all other true Americans, is in favor of arbitration as a substitute for the resort to arms in the settlement of the international disputes, she sees no merit in the demand that we use a part of the league of nations instead of the other tribunal.

The Farm Problem.

"Mrs. McCormick has for years been a farmer, and quite naturally has taken a deep interest in the national farm problem. She voted for the farm marketing act, and also actively supported the administration's effort to frame a tariff bill which would adequately protect farm products as pledged by the party platform and by Mr. Hoover in 1928.

"Mrs. McCormick is in favor of maintaining our national defense at a standard which will be second to no other nation and at the same time she is heartily in sympathy with the effort to bring about a limitation of armament rather than the continuation of competitive armament programs by the nations.

"It has been pointed out in Mrs. McCormick's speeches that Senator Deneen, during his five years in the United States senate, has never addressed the senate on the subject of the waterways, the farm bill, the Kellogg peace treaties, the 15 cruiser bill, immigration, disabled veterans' legislation, or the league of nations court. She has called attention to the fact that no bill bearing Senator Deneen's name has been introduced since he went to Washington five years ago."

The Deneen Summary.

Senator Deneen put forth what he called "an inventory of the issues Mrs. McCormick has presented." It said:

"First Mrs. McCormick was against the world court. After she had discussed this matter for two months a letter from her to Rudolph Witte was published which was dated Jan. 30, 1928, in which she said: 'The outlawry of war calls for a world court, and this sort of court I do support.'

"Then she shifted her position and declared for arbitration only for settling disputes among nations. In this position Mrs. McCormick is out of harmony with messages of Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft, Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover, and also against declarations of the Republican national platforms since 1912.

"Mrs. McCormick states she is opposed to the world court because she alleges it is an annex to the league of nations. The senate reservations say membership in the court shall involve no legal relation with the league of nations. I am the only candidate at the Republican primaries on record against the United States entering the league of nations.

"This last week Mrs. McCormick has stated she is against the world court with or without reservations. She thus takes the stand against applying international law through international courts to international disputes which relate to the interpretation of treaties and agreements between sovereign nations, and by the same token is against the world-wide movement for world peace."

Makes a Comparison.

The Deneen comparison of records in congress says:

"Roll calls show Mrs. McCormick was present 10 days in a 34 day special session when the house was active, and only 2 days up to March 1 of the 72 days of the regular session.

"The records show she did not raise her voice during the farm debate and that the only speech in the Congressional Record by her was inserted April 26, 1929, by Congressman Kahn, a speech on agricultural relief which Mrs. McCormick made in Chicago April 26.

"Senator Deneen has been absent from sessions only a few days. In four congresses he has introduced 247 bills, 76 of which were enacted, 104 of which were not passed, and 67 now pending. As a member of the senate finance committee, Senator Deneen was in Washington all summer on the tariff."

PRECINCT UNDER FIRE

Arthur Burrage Farwell has called the attention of the election authorities to the thirty-fourth precinct of the First ward, indicated by arrow in above map. Although the precinct is only a half block in area—bounded by Eighth, Ninth, and State streets and Holden court—660 names appear on its polling lists, almost all of them registered from three addresses, one of which, according to the current property directory, is a vacant lot.

sheet reporting that the rivers and harbors committee yesterday approved unanimously the request which Senator Deneen made to the war department for a survey of the upper reaches of the Illinois river, part of the program for federal aid for completion of the Illinois waterway.

Tells Her Peace Stand.

In her meetings and radio addresses yesterday Mrs. McCormick asserted that propaganda is being circulated against her among church people to the effect that she is opposed to world peace because she is against the world court of the league of nations. She referred to an editorial in a church magazine in which such statements were included.

"I am a Quaker," she said. "You know what that means. And in my congressional campaign two years ago, I was the only candidate in the whole country that dared to come out and stand flatly for the outlawry of war. That editorial is based on wrong contention. I am most emphatically for peace. But if you want America to preserve her freedom and independence, vote against the world court. It will surely involve us in European wars."

Jenkins Claims Gains.

Newton Jenkins in his speeches yesterday declared: "The people are turning to me.

"I expect to be nominated for United States senator," said Mr. Jenkins. "My two rivals, Deneen and Mrs. McCormick, have allowed their campaign to descend to a bitter personal quarrel and ignore all the big economic issues confronting our nation.

"Republicans throughout the city are disgusted with the spectacle they have made of themselves. I have taken no part in this mudslinging which has characterized their campaign, and as a result the people are turning to me both in the city and state, so reports to me indicate.

"Republicans have a clear cut choice between two brands of Republicanism. The reactionaries are represented by Deneen and Mrs. McCormick. The progressives have one candidate, and with the reactionaries split as they are enough votes should swing to me to give me the nomination."

500 CHICAGOANS CAST ABSENTEE PRIMARY VOTES

Officials Are Among the Voters.

A throng of voters filed into the polls in the offices of the board of election commissioners yesterday to cast their primary ballots. During the week more than 500 persons, a third of them women, exercised the right provided by the law which permits voting prior to the primary day by those who will be absent on election day.

Among the first to appear yesterday to cast absentee ballots were a bride and bridegroom. The couple left the Marriage court in the county building to pause at the polls before setting out on their honeymoon. They offered an interlude in the routine of the voting of porters, butchers, salesmen, and mechanics, when they tried to enter the same booth. Election officials smilingly explained that such procedure is against the law.

Porters Head the List.

Porters were ahead of salesmen in the list of occupations represented by the voters, with housewives a close third. The list included manicurists, unemployed, plumbers, lawyers, doctors, politicians, executives, barbers, architects, and laborers. All were given applications so that their ballots may be sent to their respective precincts on Tuesday, the primary day.

Col. Albert A. Sprague, wholesale grocer, marked his ballot before setting out for White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., just before Leroy Clark, 4534 Vincennes avenue, a race horse trainer, bound for Jamaica, cast his vote. Ald. B. A. Cronson [4th] followed. He is going to San Francisco.

Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder dropped in on his way to Washington. Joseph T. Mason, secretary to Senator Deneen, and his wife, Mary T. Mason, and Congressman Elliott W. Sproul completed the Washington contingent. Attorney Henry P. Chandler cast his vote before leaving for Santa Barbara, Cal.

Other Absentee Voters.

Other voters included Horace James Bridges, author and lecturer, 472 Deming place; William O. Batcheider, manager of the General Electric company; Djane Lavoie Herz, concert singer, 75 East Elm street; Jacob L. Kesner, real estate dealer; Louis Manierre, real estate dealer; Harry C. Moir, president of the Morrison hotel; Edward Charles Agnew, student at the University of Notre Dame; Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Bemis; J. De Forest Richards, vice president of the Boulevard Bridge bank; and Carlos E. Black, adjutant general of Illinois.

CITIZEN GROUP TO BE WATCHERS AT POLLS TUESDAY

Officials Act to Insure Honest Election.

Several thousand citizens, banded together by the Voters Nonpartisan association, will act as volunteer watchers at the polls Tuesday. Officials of the association yesterday announced completion of their plans to insure an honest election.

Extensive precautions against fraud and violence on primary day were being planned also by County Judge Jarecki, the election commissioners, Police Commissioner Russell, and forces of State's Attorney Swanson.

Pleased with Conviction.

The state's attorney expressed pleasure yesterday over the conviction by a jury in Judge Walter P. Steffen's court of three men charged with election frauds. The men, who face a 1 to 5 year sentence in the penitentiary, are Fred Hrdlicka, Democratic candidate for state representative of the 23d district; Edward Kotek, a city hall precinct captain, and Edward Kerstein, an undertaker and a city hall follower.

Edward A. Grysh, 1624 North Oakley avenue, a judge of election in the 27th precinct of the 34th ward, was the chief state witness. He testified he was appointed through Kerstein, and that in the judical election last fall, while he and the other officials were counting the proposition ballots, the three defendants took the other ballots into a corner. He saw them marking the ballots with pencils, he said.

Seen as Example.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles Bellows, after the jury's verdict, said he believed the conviction would have an exemplary effect on any persons who might have planned to commit primary frauds. Hrdlicka had protested his innocence and demanded that the trial be completed before the primary, in the belief that he would be acquitted and so aided in his candidacy.

Arthur Burrage Farwell wrote letters to federal, county, and police authorities yesterday calling attention to a freak precinct, the Thirty-fourth, in the First ward. This precinct, the ward map shows, is only half a square block in area, being bounded by State, 8th, and 9th streets, and Holden court. Yet 660 names appear on the registry list of the precinct, with almost all of them registered from only three addresses, 805, 807, and 811 South State street.

Hotels Are Listed.

The current property directory shows 805 South State street listed as the Keystone hotel, 807 as a vacant lot, 809 as the State house, and 811 as the Acme hotel.

Mr. Farwell said the precinct has been notorious for many years as a nest of ballot frauds.

Most of the watchers assembled for duty at the polls by the Voters' Nonpartisan association are ex-service men, it was stated by C. B. Hopkins, secretary of the organization.

"This force of several thousand watchers will be augmented by volunteers secured through the Chicago Association of Commerce," Mr. Hopkins said. "The association has no interest in parties or candidates, but operates solely to protect the rights of the citizen who otherwise would not be represented at the polls. Until the formation of our association ballots were destroyed, mutilated, or manipulated with the result of absolutely nullifying the intent of the citizen who voted. Not a ballot box has been stolen since the association began operating in 1928."

A signed statement by State's Attorney Swanson said that the prosecution of vote frauds by the grand jury "was temporarily halted and probably will not be resumed until Wednesday or Thursday."

Plan Watchful Day.

"The work of investigation has not, however, been allowed to lag," Mr. Swanson said, "and precincts in which complaints have been made will be checked until late Monday night. The election frand department of my office has been requested to give special attention to violations of the law occurring on election day, and squads of police from my office, from the detective bureau, and the County court will be available in every ward in the city.

"It is the sincere desire of the state's attorney's office to render every possible assistance in preserving the integrity of the ballot, and to the end that an honest primary election may be held."

Russell Instructs Police.

John Rusch, chief clerk of the election board, said the board's plans for safeguarding the polls would be completed tomorrow. All complaints, he said, will be received at the office of the election commission. Commissioner Russell has issued instructions to all police captains directing that all policemen assigned to poll duty be ordered to stay on their post all day, notifying the election board by telephone in case of trouble.

3 MORE LEGISLATORS TELL DRY LAW VIEWS IN TRIBUNE'S POLL

Three more replies were received from candidates for the Illinois legislature indicating their views in THE TRIBUNE'S poll of all the candidates on the question of repealing the Illinois prohibition law.

Milford F. Henkel, Republican candidate for the senate in the 13th senatorial district, and F. B. Resag, a Republican running for the senate in the 23d district, both favor submitting the repeal of the law to a referendum vote of the people of Illinois. Matt Franz, a Democrat seeking reelection to the house from the 15th district, indicated in his vote that he favored the referendum, and that he also favored a direct repeal of the law by the legislature.

A complete list of all candidates for the legislature will be published in THE TRIBUNE tomorrow, indicating the stand taken by those who sent replies to the questionnaires, and naming those who failed or refused to vote.

PUT $24,820,000 UP TO VOTERS IN BOND PROPOSALS

13 Issues Would Be Used to Pay Judgments.

Recommendations

On April 2 The Tribune printed an editorial containing its recommendations on the small ballot propositions consisting of five bond issues totaling $24,820,000. Those recommendations are as follows:

Ashland avenue bonds; $8,715,000 to pay judgments only	Yes	X
	No
Western avenue bonds; $6,140,000 to pay judgments only	Yes	X
	No
La Salle street bonds; $4,115,000 to pay judgments only	Yes	X
	No
Ogden avenue bonds; $5,400,000 for construction of bridges and a trestle to extend Ogden avenue across Goose Island	Yes
	No	X
Municipal Airport bonds; $450,000 for improvements	Yes
	No	X

Five bond issues totaling $24,820,000 will be placed before the voters on the small ballot at Tuesday's primary. Four of the bond issues are to be used in connection with street improvements and the fifth is to finance improvements at the municipal airport at 63d street and Cicero avenue. The propositions to be voted upon are:

Ashland avenue	$ 8,715,000
Western avenue	6,140,000
La Salle street	4,115,000
Ogden avenue	5,400,000
Airport	450,000
Total	$24,820,000

Approval of the Ashland and Western avenue and the La Salle street improvement bonds has been urged by various organizations, including the Civic federation, the Citizens' association, and the Chicago Real Estate board. These bond issues are to be used entirely to pay judgments held against the city for years by property owners whose land was taken in the widening of those streets. The judgments draw 5 per cent interest.

The city will have to pay these judgments eventually, the organizations pointed out in their bulletins, and many of the property owners have suffered hardships through the long delay in payment.

The Tuesday primary will mark the fourth time that the voters have been asked to pass upon these three bond issues. They were voted down in April of 1927, and in the November elections of 1928 and 1929. Twice the city council has refused to put them on the ballot.

Two Bond Issues Opposed.

Defeat has been urged by the civic organizations for the $5,400,000 Ogden avenue bond issue and the $450,000 airport bonds. The Ogden avenue fund would be used to construct bridges and a trestle across Goose Island to connect up two sections of Ogden avenue. The airport bonds would be used for improvements which are criticized by the organizations as not being of a permanent nature.

In a statement on the Ogden avenue bonds the Citizens' association says:

"In view of the wholesale diversion of bond issue funds for the payment of so-called 'experts' under Mayor Thompson's administration by Michael J. Faherty, then as now president of the board of local improvements, the Citizens' association is of the opinion that the voters should not entrust those officials with the expenditure of any further bond moneys which may be wasted through favoritism."

Airport Proposal Criticized.

"The airport bond issue appears to be inadvisable at this time," says another Citizens' association bulletin, "because of the failure of the city to obtain from the board of education a transfer or long term lease of the school land now occupied by the airport and an adjoining tract of 400 acres of school land that will be needed to give adequate facilities. While the prospect that the school board will grant such a lease appears to be somewhat more favorable than heretofore, it seems obvious that it would be premature and unwise to sanction the bond issue before the necessary lease has actually been obtained.

"The bond issue proposal is also subject to criticism on the ground that the improvements for which much of the money would be expended are not of a permanent nature, so that the work should have been financed out of the city's corporate funds."

The airport bonds have also been disapproved by the legislation committee of the Chicago Real Estate board.

Commerce Association View.

George B. Foster, chairman of the aviation committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce, stated that the association is in favor of the airport bonds. He said that with the stage all set for the early conclusion of negotiations to enlarge the area it is urgent to get money to place the field in decent condition. The Chicago Aero commission also has indorsed the airport bonds.

In addition to the bond issues voters in the Ridge park district of Beverly Hills and Morgan Park will vote on the proposition of annexing about a mile square of new territory. The area, which has petitioned to be made a part of the park district, has an estimated population at 12,000. It is bounded by Ashland avenue, 87th street, 95th street, and on the east irregularly in the vicinity of Morgan and Throop streets, all in the Nineteenth ward.

Send Children 200,000 Tags for Cleanup Week

More than 200,000 tags, urging school children of Chicago to clean-up, paint-up, and plant-up, were sent out yesterday by the junior department of the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross. The tags were sent in connection with Clean-up week, April 21 to May 5, in coöperation with the Chicago Association of Commerce. They will be worn during Clean-up week.

YOUTH SEIZED IN LOOP CHASE.

James Taylor, Negro, 17 years old, 3531 Federal street, was captured in a stolen automobile yesterday at Wacker drive and Franklin street after a chase through rush hour traffic in which Traffic Policeman Glenn Martin fired several shots at the car.

EXTEND DEADLINE FOR CLAIMS OF DISABLED VETS

Extension of the dead line for veterans to file claims for disability compensation until midnight tomorrow has been authorized by Gen. Frank T. Hines, head of the United States Veterans' bureau at Washington, William R. Carroll, chief of contact for the U. Chicago office, was informed yesterday.

The dead line had been set at midnight yesterday. Dr. Hugh Scott, manager of the veterans' bureau, announced that the downtown office at 539 South Wells street would be open from 9:30 until 4:30 today and until midnight tomorrow. Claims also may be filed at the Edward Hines Jr. hospital near Maywood, where the new veterans' bureau headquarters are located.

The dead line on filing claims was extended from Jan. 2, 1930, by a recent congressional amendment to the world war adjusted compensation act.

AMES REPLIES TO SWANSON ON CIVIL SERVICE

Fewer 60 Day Appointees on Rolls, He Says.

Maj. Carlos Ames, president of the civil service commission, issued a statement yesterday and made public a letter written to him by the Chicago Civil Service Protective association, as an answer to the charges made on Friday by State's Attorney Swanson that the civil service law virtually has been nullified by city hall department heads with the sanction of the commission.

Maj. Ames, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff, points out in his statement that the pay roll records of the controller's office and the records of the civil service commission show fewer sixty day appointees than there were under the régime of the late William E. Dever as mayor.

Ames Quotes Letter.

"In a statement to the press relative to sixty day appointments," says Major Ames, "Mr. Swanson quotes the Civil Service Protective association estimates that between 4,000 and 5,000 employés are sixty day appointes. The Civil Service Protective association in a letter to me on Feb. 4 stated:

"'We note that you are a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff. During the last year, since your appointment as president of the civil service commission, a new era has dawned in this important branch of the city government. During your régime more examinations have been held than in any previous four year term, and the laws have been strictly adhered to, and the officers of our organization have received the utmost courtesy and consideration.

"'While we believe your elevation to a higher office would be a distinct loss to the civil service employés, it would nevertheless be a great boon to the community in general. The officers and members of the Chicago Civil Service Protective association wish you success in the coming campaign.'"

The letter is signed by Fred E. Weaver, president of the association, and Herman A. Hansen, secretary.

Cites Record of Examinations.

Maj. Ames in his statement points out that in the last year, since he took office, 169 examinations were held. He says more than 40,000 persons took these examinations and that more than 4,000 persons were certified to the eligible lists. He presents comparative figures on the number of 60 day oppointees to show that at the close of the Dever administration 5,915 temporary employés were on the rolls, as compared to 3,621 in February, 1930, the last month for which figures are available.

OUTLOOK BRIGHTENS FOR EARLY PROGRESS ON LOCAL POSTOFFICE

Washington, D. C., April 5.—[Special.]—John W. Philp, fourth assistant postmaster general completed his re-study of the plans and designs for the new Chicago posto office today. Although declining to discuss his findings Mr. Philp said he would submit them to Postmaster General Walter Brown prior to the conference Monday when treasury and post office department officials are scheduled to confer with the Chicago architects.

Treasury officials were optimistic today that an agreement can be reached Monday which will permit the immediate awarding of the contract for preparing the working drawings of the new federal building. At this meeting the complete designs prepared by Graham, Anderson, Probst & White of Chicago will be ready for inspection. It is understood that the latest completed plans incorporate certain alterations suggested by the postmaster general.

Post office officials were not satisfied with the original plans submitted to them and it was first thought that new plans would be called for. Later it was said it was possible alterations could be made which would satisfy the post office department. All the specifications and working arrangements in the new post office building have not been completed but it was said today that these details would not interfere with early completion of the working drawings on which construction contracts would be let.

CARVER HELD FOR TRIAL AS TRIPLE SLAYER

Sebring, Fla., April 5.—[U. P.]—The Highlands county grand jury tonight returned an indictment charging William R. Carver, 38 year old realtor, with the murder of his wife, Ruth; his son, Lee, 2; and Ben Whitehead, Negro servant.

Indictment of Carver was a complete reversal of a coroner's verdict rendered earlier in the week, which accepted his original version of the tragedy, that he killed the Negro after Whitehead had slain Mrs. Carver and the son when they detected Whitehead robbing the Carver home.

SWANSON DENIES LOESCH CHARGES IN CANAL INQUIRY

Says Special Prosecutor Was Not Forced Out.

State's Attorney Swanson yesterday issued a reply to the statement made last week by Attorney Frank J. Loesch, his former first assistant and special prosecutor in the vote fraud and sanitary district cases. The prosecutor denied that any political deal is involved in the sanitary district prosecutions or that Mr. Loesch was forced out of the investigation or prosecution of these cases.

As the prosecutor was releasing his denial of the Loesch charges William J. Connors, a Democratic leader in the 42d ward, and former chief investigator in the sanitary district law department, was filing his fourth and last demand for trial in Chief Justice D. J. Normoyle's Criminal court. Yesterday was the last day of the term of court, so Connors has now made his four demands required by law, and it is pointed out by attorneys that he is eligible for discharge without trial because of failure to obtain trial on indictments voted in May, 1929.

Connors Second to Take Action.

Connors is the second man to escape prosecution by the four term act. Thomas D. Garry escaped trial by this method several months ago. No mention of the Connors case is made in the statement issued replying to the Loesch charges. The statement in part is as follows:

"Mr. Frank J. Loesch was quoted a week ago as saying to a Washington newspaper correspondent, that after he had procured indictments on the sanitary district cases he was taken out of the picture by 'outside pressure.' Mr. Loesch was not taken or forced out of handling the sanitary district investigation, either by 'outside' or 'inside' pressure.

"When I first took office, Mr. Loesch wished to remain on my staff long enough to complete the 20th ward election cases, and that was clearly understood between us.

Sought Canal Quiz, Claim.

"A little later, he requested to undertake the investigation of sanitary affairs on the ground that he had an organization particularly fitted to do the work, and the means wherewith to finish it. Many witnesses were examined and called before the grand jury by them during the early part of 1929. Before the investigation had proceeded very far, he stated that he wished to secure indictments on the ground that 'public sentiment' demanded it and that he would indict and undertake to win a skirmish engagement. Reminded that the loss of a skirmish might mean the loss of the real battle to follow, he insisted that he could win the skirmish.

"Immediately upon the return of the indictments, his staff was wholly disorganized by resignation and withdrawal. Some time in May, 1929, Mr. Loesch and his staff conferred with me and members of my staff regarding the general situation. On that occasion Mr. Loesch signified his intention of voluntarily dropping out of the criminal investigation and a discussion ensued as to what member of my regular staff should be placed in charge. Just after this his staff disbanded.

"Furthermore, Mr. Loesch about that time said that he wished to direct his future activities solely to an effort to recover by chancery proceedings in the United States court money which had been obtained from the district by fraud. He did, in fact, commence such a proceeding. It was not long, however, before even this proceeding was abandoned by him. The query arises, Who forced him to drop that? What 'outside pressure' compelled it? No possible pretense can be made that I or any of my assistants had anything to do with it."

The prosecutor then goes on to say that the Loesch sanitary indictments were based on the charge that the "president's message" was printed at excess cost and paid for by $500 requisitions to evade the rules that all work over that amount should be let under advertised contracts. The McCormick road cinder path and lighting system is another item charged in the indictment.

Charges Lack of Evidence.

"The fact is, that none of the indictments in any of their counts charged fraud in connection with those jobs and evidence concerning them would therefore be inadmissible," continues the statement. "I do not think that a competent lawyer can be found anywhere who would agree with his proposition that the trustees could be convicted merely for making improvements in question without legal authority unless it should also appear that money had been misused in such way as to benefit them or some one in collusion with them. He had not gathered a particle of evidence to show that any of the money so expended did not actually go into the jobs. That was left for our investigation."

The prosecutor ends up his statement by saying that his investigation was held back at the request of the government because of income tax fraud investigations, and that he is not now nor has been swayed by politics with these cases.

G. O. P. TO PLACE ITS MANTLE ON ALL NOMINEES

Acting Chairman Soothes Radicals.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—[Special.]—Oil was poured on troubled Republican waters today when Senator Frederick Steiwer [Rep., Ore.], vice chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee, announced that the committee will not participate in the forthcoming primaries and will support the senatorial nominees of the party whether radical or regular.

Senator G. H. Moses [Rep., N. H.], chairman of the campaign committee, whose characterization of the radical Republican senators as "sons of the wild jackass" aroused widespread resentment and threatened to widen the split between the two elements in the party, sailed today with Mrs. Moses for a six weeks' or longer cruise in the Mediterranean.

Acts to Pacify Radicals.

The selection of Steiwar to conduct the campaign in the western states went far toward quieting the feeling provoked by Moses' remark and his announcement today was expected finally to pacify the radicals.

"I have made a survey of the duties which will fall to me as vice chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee," said the senator, "and have determined that in the western jurisdiction over which I shall have charge there will be nothing done at this time.

Will Accept Primary Results.

"The Republican committee will take no part in the primary elections and therefore there is nothing for the committee to do until after the nominations have been made. As far as my influence may prevail the committee will extend the fullest faith to the elective systems of the different states and will accept without question the action of the Republican party in the several states.

"After the party in each state has made its nomination the committee will render whatever assistance it can to the nominee selected and this will be done without raising any question as to whether the nominees are regular or irregular, conservative or progressive."

It started with a moderate gale Sunday morning and ended with a strong northeast gale Friday, accompanied by heavy rain, snow, sleet, and high seas. From noon Monday to noon Tuesday the veteran Atlantic greyhound only made 214 knots.

AUTO RUNS 59 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS.

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed 59 miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owners have already installed this new invention. They not only report amazing gas savings but are also surprised to find quicker pick-up, instant starting, smoother running motors and disappearance of carbon. E. Oliver, 999, 399 N. MANDEL BROTHERS MEN'S SHOPS

ILLINOIS HOLDS SPOTLIGHT WITH FIRST PRIMARY

Other State Ballot Tests Will Follow.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 5.—[Special.]—Political trends will be in evidence commencing this week, when Illinois stages the first of the 1930 senatorial and congressional primaries. The Illinois primary on Tuesday is the only one this month, but commencing in May there will be a constant succession of state primaries until the middle of September, when active campaigning for the November elections will get under way.

Reaction of the voters to issues advanced by primary candidates is expected to give an indication as to how they view the policies of President Hoover, the tariff bill, the farm relief act, prohibition, and other measures which have been under discussion in Washington during the present winter.

May Affect World Court.

The Illinois primary is expected to have significance from a national standpoint as showing sentiment toward the world court. If Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick should defeat Senator Charles S. Deneen for the Republican senatorial nomination, or if she should come close to defeating him, the result would give considerable encouragement to the group in the senate which is preparing to oppose acceptance of the modifications to the original world court reservations as favored by President Hoover. While prohibition is not involved in the Illinois senatorial contest the outcome of some of the fights over congressional nominations may show now the wind is blowing on that issue.

Thirty-five senators and all of the 435 members of the house are to be elected this fall. Thirty-one of the senators will be obliged to go through primaries while the other four will be nominated in conventions.

Pennsylvania Votes in May.

In May the primary on which chief interest will center is that in Pennsylvania where Secretary of Labor James J. Davis is a candidate for the Republican senatorial nomination against Senator Joseph R. Grundy [Rep., Pa.], who leaped into fame as a witness before the senatorial lobby investigating committee and subsequently was appointed by Gov. John S. Fisher to fill the Vare vacancy in the senate. The Pennsylvania primary is on May 20. Other senators who are seeking renomination in May primaries are William H. McMaster [Rep., S. D.] on May 6, and Charles L. McNary [Rep., Ore.] on May 16. Both are expected to be renominated without serious difficulty.

The June primaries include those in Iowa on June 2 where Senator Daniel F. Steck will win the Democratic nomination while the Republicans are fighting over the selection of his election opponent; in North Carolina on June 7 where Senator F. M. Simmons [Dem.], undisputed boss of his state for more than thirty years, is up against the fight of his life; in Maine on June 16 where Representative Wallace White and former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster are battling for the Republican nomination for the seat now held by Senator Arthur R. Gould [Rep.], who is not a candidate; in Minnesota on June 16 where Senator Thomas D. Schall is opposed by Gov. Theodore Christianson; and in New Jersey on June 17 where Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow will be opposed for the Republican nomination for the Edge seat by former Senator Joseph Frelinghuysen.

Three More in July.

In July there will be senatorial primaries in Montana, Texas and Oklahoma. Senator Thomas J. Walsh will seek renomination on the Democratic ticket in Montana on July 15; Senator Morris Sheppard will seek renomination on the Democratic ticket in Texas on July 26. Senator W. B. Pine will seek renomination on the Republican ticket in Oklahoma on July 29. All three are likely to have opposition.

The largest number of primaries will take place in August. The present senators in whose states primaries will be held are John M. Robison [Rep., Ky.], Aug. 2; Arthur Capper and Henry J. Allen [Rep., Kas.], Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], and Guy D. Goff [Rep., W. Va.], Aug. 5; William E. Brock [Dem., Tenn.], Aug. 7; J. Thomas Heflin [Dem., Ala.], Joseph T. Robinson [Dem., Ark.], George W. Norris [Rep., Neb.], and Roscoe C. McCulloch [Rep., O.], Aug. 12; Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.] and Patrick J. Sullivan [Rep., Wyo.], Aug. 19; and Coleman L. Blease [Dem., S. C.], Aug. 26. Senator Heflin has been ruled out of his primary and will be forced to run as an independent unless he wins in a court case. Senator Sullivan, who was appointed to fill the Warren vacancy, is not a candidate for reëlection. Outside of Senator Norris, whom the regular Republicans would like to beat, the others will probably have an easy time in the primaries.

Michigan's in September.

Senators whose seats are involved in primaries in September are James Couzens [Rep., Mich.], Sept. 2; Lawrence C. Phipps [Rep., Col.], Joseph E. Ransdell [Dem., La.] and Henry W. Keyes [Rep., N. H.], Sept. 9; and Frederick H. Gillett [Rep., Mass.]. Senators Phipps and Gillett are not candidates.

Senator William J. Harris [Dem., Ga.] will be renominated in a primary, the date of which is not fixed by law. Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho] will be renominated in a convention on Aug. 26. Senators Daniel O. Hastings [Rep., Del.], Sam G. Bratton [Dem., N. M.] and Jesse H. Metcalf [Rep., R. I.] will be renominated in conventions, dates of which have not been fixed.

Congressional primaries in which senatorships are not involved include those in Indiana on May 6, Florida on June 3, North Dakota on June 25, Missouri on Aug. 5, California on Aug. 26, Nevada on Sept. 2, Maryland, the middle of September, Arizona, Vermont and Washington on Sept. 9, Wisconsin and New York on Sept. 16.

Governors will be nominated in the primaries in South Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Iowa, Maine, Minnesota, North Dakota, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Tennessee, Alabama, Arkansas, Nebraska, Ohio, Wyoming, California, South Carolina, Michigan, Nevada, Maryland, Arizona, Colorado, New Hampshire, Vermont, Wisconsin, Massachusetts, New York, and Georgia. 2 Towns in Missouri Barely Dry.

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—Ten more cities in the Literary Digest's nationwide poll on prohibition have cast a majority of votes against enforcement, according to incomplete returns from thirteen additional cities, made public today. Two of the cities, each in Missouri, cast a majority of votes for enforcement. They were Webb City and Springfield.

Kinley Calls Poll a Prank.

Galesburg, Ill., April 5.—[Special.]—Characterizing the recent straw vote on prohibition at the University of Illinois as "horse play," President David Kinley in an article published here today charged that statements that a majority of men at the school drank is "unqualifiedly false." That any number of the students favor modification or a repeal of the dry law, he added, is a statement unsupported by any evidence.

President Kinley's views were revealed in a letter written to Fred R. Jelliff, editor of the Register-Mail here.

Dr. Eckener Tastes Near Beer and Shoves It Aside

Philadelphia, Pa., April 5.—[U. P.]—Dr. Hugo Eckner wants real beer or none at all. Dining with a friend at a restaurant here, the German Zeppelin commander ordered a glass of near beer, but shoved it aside after one sip. "Ach, that makes me sick," he said.

FIRE ENGINES AND TICKER TAPE UPSET BLASE ARMY MULES

New York, April 5.—(AP)—The army mule doubtless can bear a good deal, and with composure, but not—simultaneously—a fire engine and a ticker-taper snowstorm.

A dozen army mules, motive power for a supply train in the Army day parade up Fifth avenue today by which New York observed the eve of the thirteenth anniversary of entry of the United States into the world war, entirely lost their self-control over that combination and started to charge right into a crowd in front of the public library.

Police horses—accustomed to such things and, no doubt, feeling decidedly superior—helped to drive them back into the procession. Police stopped the ticker-tape snowstorm. Nobody was hurt.

12 YEAR OLD GIRL TORTURES CHILD OF 4 TO DEATH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAARBRUECKEN, Germany, April 5.—The murderer who tortured a 4 year old child to death and tortured four others who escaped has been revealed as a 12 year old girl. Kaethe Riefer, a quiet child, who had been carefully brought up by her mother, a respected member of the community.

After the police had woven a net of circumstantial evidence about her Kaethe admitted carrying off children to secluded places and sticking her thumbs into their eyes and ears and subjecting them to other cruelties. When her latest victim died she hid the body under a pile of scrap tinware.

She cannot be taken before a court because she is too young. She has been placed in a home for observation by alienists.

YOUNG WOMAN TAKES POISON.

Miss Lillian McCate, 26 years old, 317 South Throop street, collapsed in a chair in the employment office of the Illinois Bell Telephone company yesterday and announced that she had swallowed poison. After emergency treatment at the Iroquois hospital she was taken to the Psychopathic hospital for treatment.

BOARD OF TRADE SUED BY BROKER FOR $3,000,000

E. A. Hoyne Asks Damages for Expulsion.

Charging he was deprived of his membership in the Board of Trade through a conspiracy and in violation of the by-laws of that organization, Eugene M. Hoyne, former grain broker and brother of former State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne, yesterday filed suit against the board for $3,000,000 damages in the federal District court.

A similar suit against the Board of Trade was filed simultaneously in the Circuit court asking $600,000. The suit was begun in the federal court on the contention that membership in the Board of Trade carries the "right freely to engage in interstate commerce."

Mr. Hoyne, who purchased a membership on the board in November, 1918, claims that the board of directors declared his membership forfeited on May 4, 1920, an action amounting to expulsion. He says this action was taken by a vote of 7 to 6, although the constitution of the board provides that no member may be expelled by the directors without a vote of 12 to 1.

Tells Grounds for Ouster.

The action was taken against the plaintiff, according to the bill of complaint, because he was indebted to certain officers and members of the board of directors or to their respective business firms. Hoyne charges that those who voted against him had personal motives. He mentions the late Leslie F. Gates, then president of the board, as one of the members who voted against him, and states that Mr. Gates was a member of the Lamson company, to which the plaintiff was indebted. The first vote stood 6 to 6, the bill sets forth, and Mr. Gates then added the seventh adverse vote.

Just before his expulsion, Mr. Hoyne charges, he had stopped trading on the board "because of circumstances beyond his control." He explained in a statement that this alluded to the failure of his brokerage business.

Alleges Loss of $500,000.

The suit in federal court asks threefold damages, and charges that the lost membership, for which he paid only $250 twelve years ago, is now worth $100,000, that being deprived of its trading privileges has occasioned a loss of $500,000, and that the plaintiff has been obliged to spend $60,000 because of the expulsion.

Aside from the alleged conspiracy, the complaint charges that the directors contended Mr. Hoyne misrepresented his financial status when he petitioned for membership, claiming net assets of $50,000 to $75,000, whereas, they allege, he was indebted to the extent of $720,000.

DOUBTS TORSO IS THAT OF INDIANA GIRL

Sheriff Lawrence Doolittle of Lake county expressed doubt at Waukegan last night that the dismembered torso found March 8 in the ruins of a burned cottage at Deep Lake near Antioch was that of Alice Locey, missing since last November from her home at Lawrenceburg, Ind.

The sheriff pointed out that a post-mortem examination of the torso indicated the victim was a blonde above 25 years of age, while the Locey girl is described as 19 years old and a brunette. Deputy sheriffs submitted photographs of the Locey girl to storekeepers in and around Deep Lake, but none could remember having ever seen a girl resembling the photographs.

Miss Locey, who lived with her grandmother, Mrs. Nannie French, left Lawrenceburg around Thanksgiving day. The grandmother told newspaper correspondents she had heard nothing from the girl since, thereby exploding published statements that the girl had writen her from Lake Villa near Deep Lake shortly before discovery of the tragedy in the cottage.

BODY OF MISSING PRINTER FOUND ON MOUNTAIN

Conrad Neff, 68 years old, a veteran Chicago printer, was found dead yesterday lying beside a mountain trail near Hot Springs, Ark., where he had gone several weeks ago for his health. Neff had been missing from his hotel since Friday and Mrs. Neff, an invalid, said she feared he had been stricken with a heart attack. The body was found after an all night search by Boy Scouts and the police.

Neff was a native of Germany and had been employed in the composing room of the Chicago Abendpost for many years, retiring three years ago on a pension.

FIND REDUCTIONS IN 26TH WARD ON REASSESSMENT

Tax Figures Compared on So. Marshfield Ave.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

"Robbed by the Reformers" is the title of a campaign document devoted to the reassessment. It was written and circulated by the city hall group.

One of the supporters of Mayor Thompson is Ald. Frank Sloan of the Twenty-sixth ward. A stretch of South Marshfield avenue, the 1000 and the 1100 blocks, has been checked to ascertain how the property owners in the Twenty-sixth ward had been affected by the tax reassessment. Forty-three properties were investigated.

Valuations Compared.

The following table gives a comparison of the 1928 and 1927 tax valuations. The first column lists the South Marshfield street numbers, the next three columns are land, building and total valuations in 1928, and the last three columns are the 1927 valuation:

A comparison can be found in the Fourteenth ward, of which William R. O'Toole is the alderman. There are two frame cottages at 5302 and 5304 South Peoria street. Under the reassessment the valuation of the house and lot at 5302 South Peoria was reduced from $1,175 to $677, and the property at 5304 South Peoria was decreased from $875 to $645.

Comparison made from the tax books in ten parts of the city indicate that the 1928 assessment has generally reduced taxes.

Bootlegging of Portuguese Into U. S. Traced to Gang

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LISBON, April 5.—Existence of a band of international crooks, operating in Portugal and the United States, arranging for illicit immigration of the Portuguese to the United States with false passports and visas, was revealed in a letter published today in the newspaper Diario Noticias signed by a Portuguese named Dun. The letter, addressed to the American consul at Oporto, claims the band possesses a false American seal and is giving out visas for $300. The consul turned the letter over to the director of criminal police.

FINDS PARENTS BUT RETURNS TO FOSTER HOME

For all but seven weeks of the 23 years of his life Daniel Rothchild has been Walter Thoma, the adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Thoma, 3456 Janssen avenue. Then on Friday, after a search of several years, he found his real parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eli Rothchild, living at 91st street and Kedzie avenue, and proclaimed himself to them as their son.

But last night he was Walter Thoma again and will be for the rest of his life, he told his foster parents who have raised him from babyhood. He said he would never leave Mr. and Mrs. Thoma and would continue to regard them as his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Thoma found the boy in the Union hospital, where he had been left by his parents when he was seven weeks old, and adopted him through the Children's Home and Aid society. The parents made no effort to communicate with him after his adoption and when he learned his real name he started a search for his parents, finding them on Friday.

REPUBLICANS IN NEW YORK PLAN TO QUIT DRYS

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—The Republican party in this state heretofore generally referred to as "the dry party," will, at its convention next fall, adopt a platform which will include modification of the prohibition laws, it was learned today.

Just how far the party leaders will go in recommending modification is still a matter to be decided at conferences. It is known that one strong group in the organization, led by such men as Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler and Frederick R. Coudert Jr., advocates for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

That the Republicans as a unit will go as far as this seems doubtful. After all, there is that oft quoted up state rural dry vote which the party, according to some of its leaders, cannot afford to lose. Repeal of the Volstead act at this stage would seem to be about as far as the organization will go.

Virtually every New York City leader advocates some form of wet platform and also many of those upstate.

SOVIET RUSSIA BIDS FOR U. S. TOURISTS; DROPS $22 VISA FEE

MOSCOW, April 5.—(AP)—Soviet Russia intends this year to compete with other European countries for American tourist traffic. As its first move Moscow will abolish the $22 incoming visa fee for those who travel under the auspices of the official soviet tourist bureau.

The government has made arrangements to receive some 15,000 tourists this summer, who are expected to spend something like $10,000,000 on travel and purchases.

The government is enlarging and modernizing hotels in the principal cities, and is training 600 guides, who will know foreign languages and soviet history. "Tourist cabin" trips from New York to Moscow and return, including a fortnight's travel in Russia with all expenses paid, may be had for $350.

Indict Champaign Doctor in Death of U. of I. Girl

Urbana, Ill., April 5.—[Special.]—Two indictments charging murder were returned by the Champaign county grand jury today after hearing evidence against Dr. Thomas M. Eade, Champaign physician, in connection with the deaths last Monday of Miss Gladys Louise Anderson, 1707 North Linder avenue, Chicago, University of Illinois co-ed, and Miss Cleo Hinton, Fisher, Ill., stenographer in a local hospital. Dr. Eade is alleged to have performed criminal operations for abortion March 22 and March 24, respectively. Dr. Eade has been held in jail without bail since his arrest last Monday afternoon.

U. S. VISCOUNTESS ESCAPES IN PLANE FROM CANNIBALS

NAIROBI, Africa, April 5.—[U. P.]—The American viscountess of Sibour, who has sought and found thrills in wilderness and deserts, added another experience to her dangerous exploits when she and her husband made a forced landing in the midst of a cannibal tribe, but succeeded in starting her little moth-plane before she was captured.

The latest adventures of the viscountess, American born daughter of H. Gordon Selfridge, carried her over the battlefield of tribal fighting in Abyssinia, and to the court of the Emperor Ras Taffari of Ethiopia at Addis Ababa, the Abyssinian capital. The couple was accorded a magnificent reception by Ras Taffari, but he made their stay conditional upon selling the plane in which they arrived.

Accorded the privilege of flying anywhere in the black empire, the viscount, accompanied by the French aviator Maillet, commander-in-chief of the two airplanes belonging to the imperial military forces, flew over a remote territory where 30,000 of Ras Taffari's troops were quelling a revolt of tribesmen. Upon orders of the emperor the viscount dropped royal proclamations on the rebels, which Maillet followed up with a shower of bombs.

Dies from Gas Inhaled as He Sleeps; Wife Escapes

Carl Schillinger, 67 years old, 3327 Archer avenue, was asphyxiated by gas last night while asleep at his home. His wife, who was also asleep at the time, awoke, and found gas escaping from a stove in the room. She called the Maxwell street police, who took Schillinger to the county hospital, where he died.

GERMANY'S BEER DRINKERS REBEL AT BOOST IN TAX

Fight on 75% Raise Led by Bavarian.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 5.—Beer drinkers, especially those hailing from Bavaria, threw down the gauntlet to the new Bruening cabinet in no uncertain terms this afternoon, and threatened to overthrow the government in a formal declaration made by Dr. Horlacher before the reichstag committee on taxes.

Needless to say, Dr. Horlacher, who heads the beer rebellion, is from Bavaria, but he is also a member of the Bavarian People's party and supposedly one of the staunchest supporters of the Bruening government.

A 75 per cent increase in the present beer tax is the important feature of the financial reform plan, but the Bavarian People's party today called on all Bavarians, regardless of party or creed, to rebel against the government's intention to raise the beer tax and to "foil the attempted robbers' raid from the north."

"Beer Bavaria's Food."

"Beer," Dr. Horlacher stormed, "is the essential element of the Bavarian's nourishment. Get the money out of luxuries! Shiploads and trainloads of oranges, bananas, and such useless luxuries are imported into Germany upon the payment of only a small duty. Tax them heavily, but leave our beer alone!"

Dr. Horlacher warned the members of the Bruening cabinet that if the beer tax is put on they had better not show themselves in Bavaria or other parts of southern Germany.

The finance minister, Paul Moldenhauer, explained that the new beer tax meant, at the utmost, an increase of four cents on each quart of beer, which now costs 15 cents. He said he realized the beer tax was a special hardship on Bavaria.

To Get Largest Income.

"The government has taken this added burden into consideration," he explained. "In its new plans it has allotted Bavaria a greater share of the government's income than any other German state. But this even failed to soothe the Bavarian People's party."

Beer brewers, beer sellers, and beer drinkers are indorsing the Bavarian People's party attitude.

In view of the beer rebellion Chancellor Bruening again circulated the word that a dissolution order for the reichstag is still in his brief case and that he is ready to use it if the parties fail to come across with their approval of his financial plans.

Minor Racketeer Shot; He Says "A Boy Did It"

A gunman with a grudge, or a careless boy—the police suspect it was the former—sent Eddie Courtney, minor racketeer and once accused as a jury fixer in the bribery trial of former Gov. Small, to the German Deaconess hospital last night with a flesh wound in his neck. The hospital authorities notified Stockyards police, who took Courtney in custody. The prisoner said that "some kid fooling with a pistol winged me as I was walking on 47th street near Union avenue." The police held him for further questioning.

BROOKS IS REMOVED FROM PRESIDENCY OF MISSOURI UNIVERSITY

Columbia, Mo., April 5.—[U.P.]—President Stratton D. Brooks, of the University of Missouri was removed by the school's board of curators late today, climaxing what was termed a reign of "mental terror and faculty unrest" by his critics.

Dr. Brooks will be succeeded as president by Dean Walter Williams for more than a score of years head of the Missouri School of Journalism, which he founded as the first of its kind in the world.

Although university sources have repudiated statements that Brooks' dismissal was the direct result of his part in the disciplining of two faculty members for circulation of the now famous "sex questionnaire" among men and women students of the school a year ago, the public and direct attacks against Brooks dated from that incident.

Persons close to university affairs, however, asserted a movement to dismiss Brooks on charges of incompetency had been afoot previous to the sex questionnaire episode and his opponents charged his disciplinary actions against the professors involved were inspired by a desire to rally state support against his own impending removal.

The elevation of Dean Williams to the presidency puts a man long well known in journalistic circles of the world but himself not a college graduate at the head of the university. He was born at Boonville, Mo., almost within the shadow of the school.

COOLIDGE'S NEW HOME IS VIEWED BY 14 REPORTERS

Souvenir Hunters Kept Away by Troopers.

Northampton, Mass., April 5.—[Special.]—Fourteen newspaper representatives who filed past a state trooper on guard at the Beeches, the newly acquired home of former President Coolidge, were the first and probably will be the last of the general public permitted to inspect the estate, purchased from Mrs. Morris L. Comey.

State troopers will remain at the place until the Coolidges move in, May 15, to keep crowds of curious from trampling over the place and carrying off souvenirs.

The newspaper representatives were the guests of Mrs. Comey, her purpose being to give the public all the information they would care to have about the place so that the Coolidges would not be annoyed when they moved in.

An Air of Gentility.

The future Coolidge home in its present status has an air of gentility and orderliness, not to speak of its enduring beauty within and about its grounds, that could only have been created by one who has given her whole spirit to the task of making a home.

Mrs. Comey first led her guests into the main hall. The red birch trim, carefully matched as to grain and color, is harmonized with a wallpaper of Japanese tile design in two tones of dull green. Mrs. Comey next displayed the library of 5,000 book capacity that will be Mr. Coolidge's, with its entire side walls filled with red birch shelves and cupboards. A Caen stone fireplace was all set for kindling. The picture was one of cozy seclusion.

The living room is the real achievement of the house. It is eighteen feet wide, low-ceilinged, and about thirty feet long. This room is trimmed in rich old ivory enamel, with walls done in Japanese grass paper of steel blue design. At the southwest end is a rich Caen stone fireplace and mantel, and in niches are window seats for three persons, from which the broad sweep of meadowland and distant Mount Holyoke are visible in all their beauty.

Nestles Beneath Huge Elms.

An inclosed sun porch that is an integral part of the living room gives further opportunity for observing the view. It nestles beneath huge elms and beeches.

The ivory enamel trim is carried into the large dining room, which is paneled, with the walls covered with soil cloth enameled thickly in the same color. The paneling and molding has been tinted with a faint pink hue that is but a shade from the old ivory of the walls.

The upper chambers on the second floor are divided into two suites, each having its own bath. The double guest room with its casement windows, opening to the southwest, is over the library. At the other half of the southwest end is a second guest room with a sleeping porch.

Wall Paper from London.

The room to be occupied by Mr. Coolidge is between this guest room and Mrs. Coolidge's room over the dining room. These rooms are done in white enamel with large figured papers, procured in London, for the side walls. The figures are of blossoms of various flowers with birds flitting among them. In Mr. Coolidge's room these birds are English pheasants.

Two guest rooms, the billiard room, and the maids' quarters are located on the top floor, and the same decorative style employed on the second floor is carried out except in the billiard room. There the side walls are paneled with red pine set off with relics of Mrs. Comey's family's whaling ships for decorations.

When Mr. Coolidge told newspaper men that he had purchased a "modest place with a little land" he undoubtedly meant what he said, for the sixteen room residence and the nine acre estate have all the charm of modesty.

The elevator, which has been much mentioned in the press, is just a trunk and freight lift, and is not likely to be used by Mr. Coolidge to save steps going to and from his bedchamber.

Wife Asks Divorce So Mate May Wed Another

Superior Judge Williams yesterday denied a divorce to Mrs. Estelle Carlson, 6145 Normal boulevard, when she declared that she was seeking the divorce to prove her great love for her husband, Andrew Carlson, a building contractor. The Carlsons were married on Nov. 1, 1928, and separated last week. Mrs. Carlson said that she loved her husband so much that she was willing to obtain a divorce so that he could marry another woman. The judge refused to sign the decree, but took the case under advisement at the request of Mrs. Carlson's attorney, Victor Frohlich.

Flyer Forced Down

Fort Wayne, Ind., April 5.—[U. P.]—Albert M. Mooney made a forced landing five miles north of Fort Wayne today when his engine failed on his attempted coast-to-coast flight.

The aviator, who left the west coast yesterday hoping to set a new record, was uninjured and his plane undamaged.

Mooney said he was forced to land when his engine began to fail. He blamed faulty installation.

The flyer's time from Los Angeles to Fort Wayne was 22 hours and 23 minutes, which he believes set a record for that distance.

Mooney said he would fly back to Wichita, Kas., in a few days.

DAWES WINNING EUROPE TO FAIR, ROSENWALD SAYS

Incident to his duties as ambassador to Great Britain, Charles G. Dawes has made all England and most of the rest of Europe enthusiastic over Chicago's 1933 World's Fair, Julius Rosenwald said yesterday as he returned from a honeymoon trip to Egypt and Europe.

The philanthropist, bringing with him his bride of three months, the former Mrs. Adelaide Goodkind, arrived at the Englewood station on the Broadway limited. Mr. Rosenwald smiled as he saw the photographers gathered on the platform. He turned to Mrs. Rosenwald.

"Come on," he said, "let's pose and get it over with."

"The only one I talked to about the World's Fair was Mr. Dawes, when I met him in London," he said. "I found him enthusiastic about the fair, and discovered that he's got all England and most of the rest of Europe feeling the same way."

NORMAN WEISS IS SUED BY WIFE, EX-FOLLIES GIRL

Mrs. Mary C. Weiss, former Follies girl, yesterday filed a suit for separate maintenance in the Superior court against her millionaire husband, Norman N. Weiss. The bill, drawn by the law firm of Socrates & Davis, charges desertion, alleging that Weiss has barred his wife from their home in Barrington and from two other homes.

This is Mrs. Weiss' third action in divorce courts. She was formerly the wife of Cutler H. Robbins, son of George B. Robbins, retired president of Armour & Co., and also of Norval C. Douglas, advertising man.

The Weisses were married at Atlanta, Ga., on May 4, 1929, and separated last March 12, according to the bill. Mrs. Weiss charges that her husband has been in hiding since he left her. She asks an injunction to restrain him from disposing of his assets and for suitable alimony.

2 COPS REACH MIAMI ON TRIP TO GET M'GURN

Sergts. William Drury and John Howe of the detective bureau arrived at Miami, Fla., yesterday to bring Jack McGurn, reputed machine gunner of the Capone gang, back to Chicago for trial on an indictment charging him with carrying concealed weapons. The detectives will leave Miami with their prisoner as soon as extradition is arranged.

McGurn, who was arrested as a fugitive from justice several days ago, was identified as the man who gave his name as "Jack Vincent" when the Miami police raided Al Capone's mansion on March 20 and seized a quantity of liquor. McGurn disappeared from Chicago several weeks ago after he and Tony Accardo had been arrested in the loop with guns and indicted.

CANDIDATES END CAMPAIGNING FOR LOCAL OFFICES

Put the Final Touches on Their Organizations.

only one, Commissioner Carolan, in the country towns. This, it is said, took most of the fight out of the contest for this office.

Fight for Treasurership. ....

There has been some fire in the county treasurership race. Howard P. Savage, former national commander of the American Legion, indorsed by the Snow group after his entry as a service men's candidate, has been opposed by Walter E. Bacon, backed by the Lundin group and later indorsed by Deneen, and by John E. Stanton, an independent who admitted he was "anti-Savage." Savage refused to engage in a controversy, but Bacon continued his activity through the Saturday lull.

"I want to ask the present treasurer, Mr. Harding, who is managing the campaign of one of my opponents," Bacon said, "if he will agree now to a public audit of his books and accounts, all of them, and will issue an audited statement showing all the moneys he has collected in taxes, in penalties, in interest and from miscellaneous sources and show the disposition of the same."

Bacon also challenged Savage and Stanton to agree that if elected their books will be open to the county board and responsible civic agencies and will not be taken away at the end of the four year term.

The treasurership contest has been considered a two man race, but the contest for the board of review is admitted by all concerned to be a three man affair. William H. Weber, a veteran member, is seeking renomination on the Snow-city hall ticket. The Deneen candidate is J. F. Cornelius, a real estate man, who has been made the front of his organization's attack on the present taxing machinery of the county. The third candidate is William R. Swissler, an attorney whose political backing comes from Robert E. Crowe, former state's attorney. Crowe announced in one of his ward meetings that he would "trade and shop" for votes for Swissler anywhere he could get them, saying this candidate was the only one in which he was interested.

Cornelius' attack has been an assertion that Weber's backers have scratched him in favor of Swissler and that his real opponent is Swissler. Developments during the last few days show that Swissler's name carries a cross in front of it in spots where the instruction was supposed to be for Weber. These include the Harding wards, the First Second, Third, and Fourth; the Twenty-fifth, Joseph P. Savage's ward the Twenty-seventh, the bailiwick of Homer K. Galpin, and the Twenty ninth, Crowe's own ward.

Swissler's name also is marked favorably by the Brundage organizations on the north side, its head, Edward J. Brundage, who departed the Snow leadership last winter, saying that he and his friends consider Swissler the most likely candidate. It is said that in return for this recognition the sample ballots of Crowe and some of his associates are marked for the only two Brundage entries for county offices, Louis Nettelhorst, for clerk of the Probate court, and Francis L. Boutell, for assessor.

"This evidence," said Cornelius in announcing the discovery of these ballots, "proves conclusively what I have said, that Weber has been double-crossed by his own organization and is out of the race. Therefore, I again desire to ask the Republican voters if they want to nominate Swissler, a messenger boy for Bob Crowe, and give Crowe the balance of power on the board of review and the chance for a political comeback by the well known methods he used in the state's attorney's office."

Cornelius expressed confidence that with Weber and Swissler splitting the old Thompson-Crowe-Galpin strength his prospects for victory are doubled.

"It might have been about an even bet against Weber alone," he said, "but it certainly is better than that for me now."

Contest for Assessorships.

While there are to be two nominated for the board of assessors, this also is called a three cornered contest because one of the two Brundage entries, County Commissioner Boutell, is trying for one of the two places and both the Deneen and the Snow groups have two candidates for the two places. Charles Krutckoff, a present member, is on the latter slate with Fred Belsan as a running mate. The Deneen candidates are Robert E. Barbee, former alderman, and Albert L. Blumenfeld.

The Republican contest for sheriff has been a quiet one from start to finish. Maj. Carlos Ames, who now has the Snow-City Hall backing, has made an intensive campaign throughout the county. His Deneen opponent, William A. Burnmeister, has not made himself heard. It is reported that the Brundage group will support Burmeister, who until a few years ago was one of its members.

There has been little discussion in the Republican campaign of the candidates for the two places on the county bench that are to be filled this year, the places of county judge, now held by Edmund K. Jarecki, and that of probate judge, held by Henry Horner, both Democrats. Neither has there been much action in connection with the probate clerkship except those centering around the activities for Nettelhorst, the Brundage entry.

Give Passmore the Edge.

Politicians give a distinct edge to John H. Passmore, clerk of the Criminal court, who is seeking renomination on the Snow ticket, with George F. Lohman, Lundin-Deneen candidate, as his principal opponent.

The sanitary district contest has become something of a battle by itself because of the entry of the Elmore slate into the situation. President Elmore formerly was identified with the Deneen group, but when it took the Seabury-Butler ticket instead of the one that he had built up, Elmore broke with his old friends in such a way that the split became one of the big topics of the United States senatorship scrap for several days.

Political attention attracted to the Municipal court has been drawn chiefly to the two executive offices of that institution. James A. Kearns, clerk for the last twelve years and before that an alderman, is on the Deneen ticket for renomination. His Snow opponent is Carl U. Johanson. Bernard J. Kelly, a young service man, is seeking the bailiff's office as successor to Chairman Snow of the county committee, with State Senator Theodore R. Steinert as his Deneen contestant.

Headquarters as well as candidates dropped into silence on the eve of the final Sabbath, but Chairman Snow issued a statement that his candidates will win by margins ranging from 50,000 to 100,000.

Snow Attacks Deneen.

"Senator Deneen in his capacity as the undisputed head of a Republican faction," said the statement, "has been and is responsible for maladministration of public affairs through bipartisan agreements. He made the deal that turned the sanitary district over to Democratic control from 1926 to 1928. Of the 5,000 names on the padded pay rolls of the district in November, 1928, one-fifth represented Deneen's political followers, including 14 of his ward committeemen.

"It was the removal of these payrollers and the elimination of this waste of public funds that caused Senator Deneen and his group to break off relations with President Elmore."

CANDIDATE THANKS HIS NEWSBOY BACKERS

THAT ONLY YEARS CAN ACHIEVE

The experience gained in six straight years of building Straight-Eights makes the 1930 Hupmobiles the great Straight-Eights of the year

Time has no substitutes. It enriches the minds of men as no other force can do, and a motor car is only the minds of men—in metal. Hupmobile engineers six years ago pioneered in the manufacture of Straight-Eights. Time and experience alone could build these cars. Time did—superlatively. So take just a little of your time to examine the greatest Straight-Eights that time . . . and Hupmobile . . . have built.

JUDGE PARKER IS LABOR'S FOE, SENATORS HEAR

Green and Others Oppose Confirmation.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—(Special.)—Vigorous opposition to confirmation of the appointment of Federal Judge John J. Parker to the United States Supreme court, voiced at a hearing today of a senate judiciary subcommittee, gave promise of a bitter senate floor row.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, claiming to represent 5,500,000 wage earners, appeared as the chief witness to protest Judge Parker's confirmation on the ground that his decision in the famous "yellow dog" contract case "has reduced thousands of workers to actual servitude."

Racial Prejudice Alleged.

Green's contention was seconded eloquently by Mercer Johnston, head of the La Follette radical People's Legislative Service, and Walter White, acting secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The latter argued that statements attributed to Judge Parker during a North Carolina political campaign displayed "rank race prejudice" unfitting him for the Supreme court bench.

Indications were that the subcommittee, composed of Senators W. E. Borah [Rep., Idaho], Felix Herbert [Rep., R. I.], and L. S. Overman [Dem., N. C.], will report the nomination to the full committee during the coming week. At least one more witness, a Baltimore woman, who complains against another decision rendered by Judge Parker in a case in which she was interested, is to be heard.

Guided by Hichman Case.

Under the so-called "yellow dog" contract, open shop mine operators in West Virginia sought to bind non-union miners not to join unions while in the operators' employ and the result was virtual civil war in Logan and Mingo counties, W. Va., in 1922, which ended when the operators secured a sweeping injunction against the union which was upheld by Judge Parker as a member of the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Green and the others heard today conceded that in affirming the injunction Judge Parker probably was guided by a precedent established in the Hichman case by the United States Supreme court.

"But," asserted Green, "the Hichman case was the Dred Scott decision of labor. Labor holds it was unjustified, unmoral, and contrary to public policy. Our objection is that Judge Parker followed the Hichman case and is in entire accord with the principles set forth in that decision. Labor does not believe that another should be added to the already powerful group of that school of thought now on the United States Supreme court bench.

"A Shadow Over Labor."

"Our opposition is based on what we interpret his judicial attitude on these vitally important questions," continued Green, "which arise in the human relations of labor and industry. We feel sure that Judge Parker has lived in a narrow environment without experience or knowledge of these problems. These decisions hang like a shadow over labor. The Hichman case has reduced thousands of miners to actual servitude. They become a prey to communism and we, organized labor, cannot help them—not because of a law, but because of a court's ruling."

E. C. Townsend of Charleston, W. Va., who represented United Mine Workers of America in the Red Jacket Consolidated Coal and Coke company case, which resulted in the "yellow dog" contract decision, admitted to Senator Borah that the question of the validity of the contracts was not emphasized in the litigation. Townsend, now state tax commissioner of West Virginia, insisted that the question had been settled in the earlier decision of the Supreme court and that Judge Parker was bound to follow the precedent.

Indorsements of Judge Parker from Gov. O. M. Gardner of North Carolina, James F. Barrett, a former president of the North Carolina Federation of Labor, and Dr. J. E. Sheppard, president of the North Carolina Negro college at Durham, N. C., were read into the subcommittee's record by Senator Overman.

FRANK WETMORE CELEBRATES 44TH YEAR WITH BANK

First National President Works in Garden.

Frank O. Wetmore, chairman of the board of directors of the First National bank of Chicago, completed 44 years of active service with that institution yesterday. Since April 5, 1886, he has held nearly every office from messenger to director of the two banks, the First National and the First Union Trust and Savings.

In observance of this anniversary, Mr. Wetmore spent the day working in the garden of his 80 acre estate south of Wheaton. That was the only celebration, for only a few officials and employes of the banks knew what April 5 meant to their leader.

Born in Kalamazoo, Mich., on Nov. 12, 1867, Mr. Wetmore began his business career by working after school in his father's hardware store. At the age of 19 he came to Chicago and since that time has been connected continuously with the First National bank.

Named President in 1916.

After serving as messenger and bookkeeper he was appointed as a general man and mastered the details of banking by working in every department. Under the tutelage of the late James B. Forgan his rise was rapid. Since 1910 he has been a director of both institutions and in 1916 he was made president of the First National bank.

Five years ago he was elected co-chairman with Frederick H. Rawson. More recently he was elected president of the federal advisory council of the federal reserve board, representing the Seventh district.

Mr. Wetmore has been active for the betterment of Chicago. He has taken part for years in the work of the American Red Cross as an official of the local chapter. He was chairman of the Red Cross finance committee during the world war and of the Japanese relief committee. He is trustee of the endowment fund of the national organization.

Works on Transit Problem.

Lately Mr. Wetmore has taken an active part with other bankers in working out Chicago's transit problem.

"I don't think any one has ever had more fun during 24 years of banking than I have had," Mr. Wetmore said yesterday. "I have been taking it a little easy lately and have turned my attention to a settlement of the transit problem and a few other matters."

Mr. Wetmore was married on April 22, 1890, to Miss Marie Louise Barlow of Chicago. Two sons, Orville and Horace, were born to them. Orville died on Oct. 10, 1918, while in service as an ensign in the United States navy.

Foot Troubles Cause Bad Health

They affect the body in many different ways. The feet swell, burn, ache, sharp pains under heels, ball of foot becomes sore and feels as if you are walking on marbles; corns, calluses, ingrown nails and bunions; excessive perspiration with offensive odor, overdeveloped ankles and legs, varicose veins; legs cramp, knees stiffen; pains in hips, small of back, shoulders and neck, poor circulation, with a weak and nervous feeling. Most people think they have rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis or kidney trouble, when their troubles are all caused from their feet.

Do not be discouraged. Regardless of what your condition may be or what you have tried, or whom you have consulted, Dr. Pinkston guarantees to relieve all foot troubles, and cure nine-tenths of them regardless of the nature or condition of the ailment.

NAVY TO PLAN BUILDING WORK AFTER PARLEY

Destroyers and Subs May Be Proposed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 5.—[Special.]—Preparation of a revived American naval replacement and building program will be undertaken by the navy department as soon as the United States, Great Britain and Japan reach final agreement upon the terms of the three power pact.

On the basis of figures discussed at London for incorporation into a five or three power treaty, the United States would be allotted a minimum of 327,000 tons of cruisers, 150,000 tons of destroyers and 52,000 tons of submarines. It is assumed that a battleship building holiday will be declared, postponing replacements under the Washington treaty for another five years, and that the life of the treaty will be six years, ending in 1936.

240,000 Tons May Be Sought.

Should the United States decide to build up to this cruiser limit during the life of the treaty and replace destroyer and submarine tonnage, it is possible a program calling for the authorization of 240,000 tons of 6 inch gun cruisers, destroyers and submarines may be proposed to congress. This would be in addition to the 160,000 tons of 8 inch gun cruisers which it would be necessary to complete to bring this country's 8 inch gun cruiser allottment up to date. These vessels, however, are authorized. The cost of this program would run into the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Few naval officers expect that such an ambitious program will be adopted. Representative Burton L. French [Rep., Idaho], chairman of the naval subcommittee of the house, is on record as opposed to adoption of any extensive destroyer and submarine building program.

Obsolescence by 1935 Likely.

Naval statistical charts disclose that unless an extensive replacement program is adopted the United States will enter the 1935 or '36 naval conference with a virtually obsolete navy outside the cruiser classes, two aircraft carriers and a few of the modern battleships.

Recently compiled figures show the United States has 223 destroyers of 226,313 tons exclusive of 61 destroyers that have been declared useless. All these vessels are under the sixteen year age limit. At the end of 1936 if no new replacements are built this country will have but fourteen destroyers of 14,653 tons under the age limit.

This country has 76 submarines of 59,738 tons, exclusive of 36 that have been declared obsolete. Of these submarines, 14 become obsolete in 1931, 14 in 1932, six in 1933, four in 1934, five in 1935, and 19 in 1936.

OPIUM DENS RAIDED NEAR CAPITOL AND 21 CHINESE CAUGHT

Washington, D. C., April 5.—(AP)—Raids within a few hundred yards of the capitol resulted in the arrest of 21 Chinese and seizure of a large quantity of opium.

Federal narcotic agents and local police broke down three doors to gain entrance to the first den in the 300 block of Pennsylvania. There they arrested six Chinese found smoking opium.

A few doors further along they gained entrance to the second "parlor" through a ruse. There they arrested the remainder of the Chinese, who were found on three different floors. In both places a quantity of opium was seized together with pipes.

Police said some of the Chinese arrested were here as delegates to a convention of the On Leong Tong convention. Formal charges will be preferred against the prisoners after a conference between federal agents and the local police.

Mellons Seek New Trial of Girl's Damage Suit

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 5.—(AP)—Counsel for Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and his brother, R. B. Mellon, today filed a motion for a new trial in a damage action in which Miss Mary C. Hahn, 23, was awarded $102,427 against the Mellons. The verdict was termed excessive. Miss Hahn brought suit as a result of cuts she received when a hammer dropped from the Pittsburgher hotel broke a window. The Mellons were sued as owners of the hotel.

TRIBUNE REVEALS TERMS OF PACT ON SUBMARINES

5 Powers Adopt Rules to Humanize War.

The French member refused for the same reasons that actuated France in rejecting the Root treaty.

He said that France purposed to use submarines as commerce destroyers without transgressing the rules of international law concerning the capture of merchant ships. He added that France could not agree to any provision subjecting its submarine crews to trial for piracy in an enemy country.

Compromise Offer Rejected.

Mr. Rublee then offered the Root treaty with these two provisions eliminated. Still France refused to assent, because under the terms of what was left, submarine commanders were obligated to conform strictly to that rule of international law requiring warships to take aboard the passengers and crew of a captured merchant ship about to be sunk. France insisted on legalization of the practice of setting passengers and crews adrift in open boats. An agreement was drafted, therefore, permitting this disposition of noncombatants on captured merchantmen, provided the circumstances assured their safety.

This draft of the agreement, therefore, falls far short of the provisions of the Root treaty for humanizing submarine warfare, and of Mr. Stimson's claim, following the last plenary session of the conference, that the powers had agreed to outlaw the submarine as a commerce destroyer. At that time Mr. Stimson said the submarine agreement was alone sufficient reward for the journey of the American delegation to London.

MORE INDUSTRIAL GAINS REPORTED THROUGHOUT U. S.

New York, April 5.—[UP]—Employment increased moderately in most sections of the country during the last week as business conditions showed further recovery from the recent slump, according to reports received from various federal reserve centers.

Approach or spring weather, increased building operations, greater activity in the steel trade, and distinct signs of improvement in the automobile business were among the factors contributing to the greater industrial activity.

Building operations throughout the country in March increased 55 per cent over February.

TWO WOMEN PLANNED BANK ROBBERIES FOR GANG, BANDITS CLAIM

Detroit, Mich., April 5.—[U.P.]—A comely student nurse, Miss Ruth Jones, 23, and her companion, Mrs. Edith Casppuies, 35, today were named by police as the "brains" of a gang held responsible for two Detroit bank robberies, the holdup of a Toledo bank last week, and a dozen other major Detroit robberies.

Miss Jones and Leonard Kovie, who police say is her sweetheart, have confessed, according to Inspector William Collins. The others held are Ralph Benham and Samuel, Thomas, and Harry Boroc, brothers.

According to Collins, Miss Jones and Mrs. Casppuies planned the bank robberies for the men. They would open accounts, study the interior arrangement, draw diagrams, and then start their male companions on the actual robbery, he said.

A recent robbery of a combination drug store and postoffice, in which $750 was obtained, also is included in the confessions of Kovie and Miss Jones, Inspector Collins said. A woman, allegedly Miss Jones, aided in this holdup.

SUES VALLEE ON CHARGE HE USED SONG SHE WROTE

Los Angeles, Cal., April 5.—(AP)—A suit for $1,000,000 damages, charging Rudy Vallee, vaudeville and radio singer, with pirating a song was filed in Superior court today by an attorney for Roberta H. McKay.

The young woman's complaint alleged that she wrote a song some two years ago which was submitted for copyright but not offered publicly. It charged that a copy of the song came into possession of Vallee and his associate, Leon Zimmerman, who was named co-defendant, and that they made use of it after slight word changes.

Injunction restraining Vallee from further use of the song and an accounting of profits is demanded.

Camargo, Ill., Periled by Elevator Blaze

Champaign, Ill., April 5.—(AP)—Fire starting in a grain elevator threatened today to wipe out Camargo, twenty-five miles south of here. Eleven buildings lining the main street were damaged. Emergency calls brought equipment from Hindsboro, Newman, and Pesotum. The elevator was demolished.

FRANCE OFFERS BRITAIN PLEDGE FOR NAVAL CURB

Briand Asks 'Gentleman's Pact' on Security.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 5.—Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, who returned to Paris today, took with him a tentative agreement with Prime Minister MacDonald which, while it will not make a five power naval pact possible, will go a long way toward removing the Anglo-French friction. The agreement, to become effective, must be approved by the French government and the British cabinet.

M. Briand and Mr. MacDonald have come to the conclusion that a five power pact at this moment is impossible. The reason given is the stiffness of the Italian attitude. The French will not concede parity to Italy and will not reduce their tonnage demands to the Rapidan figures unless Italy abandons her demand for parity.

Offers "Gentlemen's Pact."

M. Briand, however, has offered Mr. MacDonald a "gentlemen's understanding" that France will not build up to her proposed naval strength of more than 700,000 tons for four or five years, and Mr. MacDonald in return has accepted the French interpretation of article 16 of the covenant of the league of nations. This reading is that the signatory nations are bound automatically to accept the recommendations of the league council to take military action.

The effect of this agreement on the proposed three power pact between America, Great Britain, and Japan is that Great Britain is now able to withdraw her demands for a "security" clause in the three power pact. This clause is one permitting Great Britain to exceed her agreed tonnage in event of another nation—meaning France—threatens her naval position. It was feared both by the British and Americans that the United States senate would not accept this clause, and it is hoped that its elimination will grease the way for American ratification of the three power pact.

Parley Faces Fire in Commons.

Mr. MacDonald is now faced at home with a serious situation due to the Tories, who threaten to open up the whole naval conference question in parliament Monday. More than a dozen questions by Tory members on various phases of the conference are booked and the Tories threaten to make one or more of them a question of confidence. If this proves to be the case, the attitude of the Liberals is very important for the government.

David Lloyd George, Liberal leader, who has had much experience in negotiating with the French and who is frankly hopeless of getting any cooperation from them in the cause of peace, would naturally be disposed to cut off the efforts, but he may be induced by domestic issues to support the government.

There was also a report here today that Premier Mussolini had ordered Foreign Minister Grandi to come home at the end of next week at the latest.

DROP SECURITY PACT

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 5. — Practically all hopes of agreeing on a formula to cover France's security demands have been abandoned by Foreign Minister Briand, who returned here from London tonight.

M. Briand will return to London next Tuesday for the proposed plenary session and demand that the various points of agreement reached during the negotiations since Jan. 21 be incorporated in the proposed three power treaty. Thus, France expects to force the next session of the league of nations preparatory disarmament commission to examine naval reduction along the compromise lines adopted at London.

This compromise takes in both the global and categorical system of limitation, with transfer clause permitting the shifting of a certain percentage of tonnage from one class to another.

Tomorrow M. Briand will acquaint Premier Tardieu with the status of the situation and it is expected that a cabinet meeting will be called for Monday.

PILOTS PILOT

West Side Home Is Looted of $5,000 in Art Objects

The theft of paintings and art objects valued at $5,000 from the apartment of Joseph Hora, 108 South Hamlin avenue, was revealed yesterday when the Fillmore street police notified other stations to be on the lookout for the stolen pictures. Horn, who is shop superintendent for the Emil Denemark automobile agency, told the police that the burglars entered his home on Wednesday by cutting a hole in the rear door.

Sea's Damage to Yancey Plane Stops Return Flight

HAMILTON, Bermuda, April 5.—(AP)—Damage received by the monoplane Pilot while riding the sea 60 miles from Bermuda on Tuesday night will prevent a return flight to New York by Capt. Lewis A. Yancey and his two companions.

FAMED FLYERS HERE; PILOTED BY SOCIETY GIRL

Chamberlin, Fitzmaurice Luncheon Guests.

One can dine, then go to the theater, and even sip a highball afterward in New York, and still be in time for breakfast in Chicago the next morning, observed Clarence D. Chamberlin, trans-Atlantic flyer, after a flying trip here in the morning hours of yesterday.

Piloted most of the way by Miss Ruth Nichols, society girl and aviatrix of Greenwich, Conn., Chamberlin and his party left the airport at Newark, N. J., at 2:15 a. m., and dropped down at the Curtiss airport here at 9:25, just seven hours and ten minutes later.

Others in the party were Col. James Fitzmaurice of the crew of the German monoplane Bremen, which flew from Ireland to Labrador two years ago, and S. T. Denham, vice president and treasurer of the National Bureau of Aviation.

Honored at Press Club.

The party was both lunched and dined at the Chicago Press club. During the afternoon they motored about the city and after the dinner were toasted in a score of speeches at the club. Judge John P. McGoorty was the principal orator, sketching the achievements of Chamberlin and Col. Fitzmaurice and paying tribute to Miss Nichols for her aviation promotion work.

Today the party will fly to Ames, Ia., where Chamberlin will spend a day in advising the city on the proper spot to build an airport. Before returning to New York the middle of the week they will visit the aero show in Detroit.

Girl Acts as Pilot.

Mr. Denham said the men in the party slept most of the way from New York while Miss Nichols flew the plane. The lady herself said she was untired by the flight and prepared for another as soon as she could breakfast.

Copies of the New York Times, printed at Times square in New York at midnight, were delivered in Chicago by Mr. Chamberlin.

Mexico Releases Plane to U. S. Endurance Flyer

MEXICALI, Lower California, April 5.—(AP)—Loren W. Mendell's airplane was released to him today by Mexican authorities after accepting the American endurance flyer's story that an illegal flight by him into this country Wednesday was the result solely of his "becoming lost" in the air. The flyer said he would remain in Mexico until he had learned what attitude United States immigration officials will take toward his case. When arrested at Black Butte, 20 miles south of here, he was accused of conspiring to smuggle two alien Japanese across the line here by American officers.

TRIBUNE RECOMMENDATIONS.

THE TRIBUNE publishes in today's issue its recommendations to voters for the Republican primary. It does not make recommendations for the Democratic primary because there is no serious contest and it seemed undesirable to expend the space and perhaps confuse readers with what in most cases is merely a formality.

As to the recommendations for the Republican primary, they are offered as suggestions, not as guaranteed indorsements, with a full sense of the difficulty of precise judgment where candidates are so many and a candid acknowledgment of the possibility of error.

With respect to the principal contests, our recommendations are based upon THE TRIBUNE'S conviction of the public issues involved, rather than personal judgments, and our reasons have been given and need not be repeated here. With respect to local offices factional politics has been ignored and an effort has been made to help Republican voters to pick the best men regardless of the local bosses.

TO THE AMERICAN ARMY.

April 6 is designated by Gen. Summerall, chief of staff of the army of the United States, as an occasion for the commemoration of the services of the American army in national history, dedicated to all the soldiers of the republic upon whose enterprise and sacrifice the United States has built its structure. The date is the anniversary of the entrance of America into the world war.

The American national army begins its history, strictly construed, with the continental army of Washington, but the service of the American soldier antedates that and has a colonial record. The French and Indian wars developed the personnel for the revolution. The colonists had to fight from the time they stepped ashore. They had to learn not only the methods of forest warfare with the natives but the military methods which would be required against the French regiments. In the forest they were not quite as good as the Indians and in the field they were not quite as good as the French. Neither development could be expected, but the colonial soldiers learned what was needed of them and their exploits were notable, including the taking of the great French fortress of Louisburg in Cape Breton in 1745 with the support of a British fleet, but without the assistance of a British army.

The colonial soldiers were taught self-reliance and self-confidence, possibly a touch too much of the latter, and seeing such British failures as Braddock's defeat in western Pennsylvania and Abercrombie's at Ticonderoga on Lake Champlain they had the courage to pit themselves against regulars. The siege of Boston was begun by New England state troops. Congress furnished the general, later, in George Washington, but the national army was created with reluctance on the part of congress and the states and with pleading and infinite pains by Washington.

It was natural that the English colonists should have inherited the English dread of a standing army. The English people had maintained their parliamentary government and preserved it from absolutism because the crown did not have an army which could be used, as it was in France and Spain, to coerce and eventually destroy the popular assemblies. The revolutions against Charles I. and James II. probably could not have succeeded if either king had use of such an army as Cromwell used against parliament when he suppressed it temporarily. Washington encountered the same opposition to the creation of a national army and he found the same necessity for it. His continentals in the end were the equivalent of Cromwell's new model, but he did not, although a less restrained and even less desperate man would have done so, use it against congress as Cromwell used his against parliament to bring order out of disorder and strength out of weakness.

The first American national army began to take form at Valley Forge where Von Steuben took up the work begun by Conway and taught the men the lessons of the soldier. As a result at Monmouth the Americans were able to maneuver steadily. They could be checked in retreat, reformed and brought into action again. Wayne's men met and repulsed two British bayonet attacks without having their lines broken. From then on, in spite of political mistreatment, failure of supplies and lack of replacements, the American national army [illegible] army.

The principal [illegible]s of the revolution, it is true, were achieved by bodies composed largely or wholly of state troops or frontiersmen, but success also required the dependable body of long time enlistment as the backbone of resistance and that was found in the regular army. Short time service was the essential of state troop operations and the men were at their best when a countryside arose against invasion as at Oriskany, Bennington, Saratoga, King's Mountain, etc. These victories were largely and in most instances wholly the achievement of fighting farmers or frontiersmen, pioneers, and Indian fighters. The New England state troops did well at Boston and badly on Long Island. The latter campaign was too much for inexperience.

The war of 1812 on land is frequently thought of as something better forgotten than remembered, an impression conveyed by disasters at Detroit, in Canada, and at Washington, relieved by the brilliance of Jackson's defense of New Orleans and by some naval actions. The old revolutionary generals were unequal to their task in the beginning of the new war and the traditional opposition to a competent military force had deprived the disordered country of a reliable weapon. One had to be made, but it is slighting some good soldiers to ignore their accomplishments. The army and the navy at Plattsburg turned back the greatest British invasion undertaken against America and in the Niagara sector there were two remarkable soldiers, Winfield Scott and Jacob Brown, the latter the less known and the more remarkable, a commander from the militia ranks, a Quaker and a fighter. Henry Adams, in his history of the United States, says he was the only major general who could take raw recruits and storm entrenchments with them in three months. He also says of Brown's little army, the Ninth, Eleventh, Twenty-second, and Twenty-fifth infantry, that in any other service the regiments would have been insured "extraordinary honors and sedulous preservation of their identity." America has many mementoes of British regiments of today, such as the Black Watch and the Cold Stream Guards, because the British sedulously and wisely preserve the identity of famous regiments for generations. The American army benefits little from such sentiment. If it did there would have been an Iron Brigade from Wisconsin in the world war.

In the civil war American officers who had been brothers in arms in Mexico were in opposing ranks and, knowing each other from experience, frequently were guided in their operations by the respect or disregard resulting from such experience. The confederates distributed their trained men throughout the organizations of recruits. The federals retained the regular army as a division, a less profitable use of the force, it has been regarded, than the confederate. Entirely raw divisions frequently had to stand on their own in important battles. Sherman held the federal right at Shiloh, the post of honor in a terrible day, with one.

A tribute to the American army cannot be given properly in these limitations of space. The Spanish and the world wars found, as war had found before, the American military establishment unequipped for the task which government by the people had provided for it. The nation improvised and the soldiers suffered. The American people are not permitted to realize that all the great policies of their country have required force to be made effective, that their territory has been gained by it and protected by it and that they now base much of their most essential legislation and administration upon the theory that they can defend the rights they assert.

There are sentimentalists who regard the American soldier as the enemy of his country and of civilization and desire that his stature and his strength shall be less. He is the citizen most devoted to his country and American civilization has never gone anywhere without him.

"THE ORGANIZATION OF PEACE."

American and foreign propaganda for our adherence to the league, to the league's court or other forms of participation in European political relations are fond of expressions like "the organization of peace." It implies that our refusal to become a member of the league, to ratify the Versailles treaty, to undertake by treaty to guarantee the French border, to adhere to the league court—in short, our determination to maintain our political independence and to abstain from permanent entanglements—expresses a selfish refusal to sustain a lofty and disinterested system for the prevention of war.

American discernment has not accepted this implication. Save for an ardent minority of internationalists, vicarious altruists, etc., American opinion from the beginning has viewed the various devices set up since the war ended with a healthy skepticism. The reproach of the advocates of participation leaves the American conscience undisturbed because the American intelligence views the post-war system as a device or group of devices for maintaining not a peace of justice but the status quo imposed by military victory upon the defeated. The first reaction against the eloquent appeal of Wilson to accept the covenant of the league of nations was less actuated by devotion to our American tradition against foreign entanglement than by the conviction that the league is a device for securing to the victors in the war the benefits of the treaty of Versailles, which neither the American conscience nor American practical judgment could stomach. As America continued to turn its unaccustomed eyes upon European events the full significance of Washington's advice became clearer and the great tradition was renewed in the nation's consciousness and affirmed in its purpose.

We are not deceived by generalizations on "the organization of peace." We read instead an organization for the perpetuation of the profitable adjustments imposed by the military masters of Europe at Paris. We do not say these adjustments are all unjust or ill advised. Many are just and an improvement on the situation they replaced. But some are simply war loot and some seriously threaten, if indeed they do not insure, the instability of Europe and the outbreak of new wars. The league is dominated by the powers which, with, and solely with, the help of the United States, were able to overthrow the military power of central Europe. To offer it to us as a disinterested instrument of peace, as an "organization of peace" which we must sustain at peril of our soul, is to ask us to check our common sense at the threshold of a fool's paradise. The French statesmen who at the peace conference jeered behind his back at the great American doctrinaire and his device for the "organization of peace" have become its most ardent supporters, for it is a means of protecting their gains at the peace table. It is a means of keeping the new oppressed minorities in the present organization of Europe by the victors of 1919. But neither the league nor the league's "political adviser" and child, the so-called world court, nor the system growing or attempting to grow out of them, is such an organization of peace as has claims upon the American conscience or American self-interest.

"—Read, Mark, Learn, and Inwardly Digest Them"

The following Bible reading begins with the first verse of the nineteenth chapter of John. The American standard version is used. This edition is copyrighted 1929 by the International Council of Religious Education. The only change is in paragraph form and punctuation method:

"IT IS FINISHED"

Then Pilate therefore took Jesus, and scourged him. And the soldiers platted a crown of thorns, and put it on his head, and arrayed him in a purple garment; and they came unto him, and said, "Hail, King of the Jews!" And they struck him with their hands. And Pilate went out again, and saith unto them, "Behold, I bring him out to you, that ye may know that I find no crime in him." Jesus therefore came out, wearing the crown of thorns and the purple garment. And Pilate saith unto them, "Behold, the man!" When therefore the chief priests and the officers saw him, they cried out, saying, "Crucify him, crucify him!" Pilate saith unto them, "Take him yourselves, and crucify him; for I find no crime in him." The Jews answered him, "We have a law, and by that law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God."

When Pilate therefore heard this saying, he was the more afraid; and he entered into the Praetorium again, and saith unto Jesus, "Whence art thou?" But Jesus gave him no answer. Pilate therefore saith unto him, "Speakest thou not unto me? Knowest thou not that I have power to release thee, and have power to crucify thee?" Jesus answered him, "Thou wouldest have no power against me, except it were given thee from above; therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath greater sin." Upon this Pilate sought to release him; but the Jews cried out, saying, "If thou release this man, thou art not Caesar's friend; every one that maketh himself a king speaketh against Caesar."

When Pilate therefore heard these words, he brought Jesus out, and sat down on the judgment seat at a place called "The Pavement," but in Hebrew, Gabbatha. Now it was the preparation of the passover; it was about the sixth hour. And he saith unto the Jews, "Behold your King!" They therefore cried out, "Away with him, away with him, crucify him!" Pilate saith unto them, "Shall I crucify your King?" The chief priests answered, "We have no king but Caesar." Then therefore he delivered him unto them to be crucified.

They took Jesus therefore; and he went out, bearing the cross for himself, unto the place called "The place of a skull," which is called in Hebrew Golgotha; where they crucified him, and with him two others, on either side one, and Jesus in the midst. And Pilate wrote a title also, and put it on the cross. And there was written, "JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS." This title therefore read many of the Jews, for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city; and it was written in Hebrew, and in Latin, and in Greek. The chief priests of the Jews therefore said to Pilate, "Write not, 'The King of the Jews'; but, that he said, 'I am king of the Jews.'" Pilate answered, "What I have written I have written."

The soldiers therefore, when they had crucified Jesus, took his garments and made four parts, to every soldier a part; and also the coat; now the coat was without seam, woven from the top throughout. They said therefore one to another, "Let us not rend it, but cast lots for it, whose it shall be;" that the scripture might be fulfilled, which saith, 'They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots.' These things therefore the soldiers did. But there were standing by the cross of Jesus, his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Clopas, and Mary Magdalene. When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, "Woman, behold, thy son!" Then saith he to the disciple, "Behold, thy mother!" And from that hour the disciple took her unto his own home.

After this Jesus, knowing that all things are now finished, that the scripture might be accomplished, saith, "I thirst." There was set there a vessel full of vinegar; so they put a sponge full of the vinegar upon hyssop, and brought it to his mouth. When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, "It is finished"; and he bowed his head, and gave up his spirit.

The Jews therefore, because it was the Preparation, that the bodies should not remain on the cross upon the sabbath (for the day of that sabbath was a high day), asked of Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away. The soldiers therefore came, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other that was crucified with him; but when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs; howbeit one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and straightway there came out blood and water. And he that hath seen hath borne witness, and his witness is true; and he knoweth that he saith true, that ye also may believe. For these things came to pass, that the scripture might be fulfilled, "A bone of him shall not be broken." And again another scripture saith, "They shall look on him whom they pierced."

And after these things Joseph of Arimathaea, being a disciple of Jesus, but secretly for fear of the Jews, asked of Pilate that he might take away the body of Jesus; and Pilate gave him leave. He came therefore, and took away his body. And there came also Nicodemus, he who at the first came to him by night, bringing a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about a hundred pounds. So they took the body of Jesus, and bound it in linen cloths with the spices, as the custom of the Jews is to bury. Now in the place where he was crucified there was a garden; and in the garden a new tomb wherein was never man yet laid. There then because of the Jews' Preparation (for the tomb was nigh at hand) they laid Jesus.

THE PILGRIM WAY.

But once I passed this way,
And then—and then, the silent door
Swings on its hinges—
Opens. . . Closes—
And no more
I pass this way.
So while I may
With all my might
I will assay
Sweet comfort and delight
To all I meet upon the pilgrim way,
For no man travels twice
The great highway
That climbs through darkness up to light,
Through night
To day.

TUBERCULOSIS OF SPINE.

MRS. E. W writes: What are the symptoms of tuberculosis of the spine? Does the back hurt all or part of the time? Does the hurt seem to come between the vertebra and be a sore spot? Does back hurt, regardless of position, sitting, standing, or lying down?

REPLY.

Pain is not a dependable symptom of this disease. It may be absent entirely or it may be absent in the affected area, but be felt in a distant part of the body. Tuberculosis, wherever it may be, is almost a painless disease of itself. The tubercular process spares the nerves of sensation. A cancer locating in a bone causes excruciating pain. A tubercle bacillus locating in the same spot may eat the bone away without causing any pain.

Tuberculosis in bone produces what is known as a cold abscess, and cold abscesses rarely produce either pain, tenderness, or fever. In the days before X-rays the cold abscess of spine tuberculosis was seldom discovered until it caused a swelling in some distant part of the body. Many such abscesses have been mistaken for beginning hernias, buboes, or something else.

When pain does occur it is generally a result of a pressure on a nerve due to deformity of something of that kind. A tubercular infection destroys some part of one or more vertebrae, the column buckles or curves, a nerve is pressed on, the pressure pain is felt in the part of the body which the nerve supplies. There may be pain in the knee, the hip, the abdomen, a belt pain, or it may take the form of nausea, vomiting, a so-called epigastric crisis.

Since the pain is principally the result of mechanical causes, position and posture have much to do with it. Relief is largely a matter of mechanical adjustment. This is one of the forms of tuberculosis that is most benefited by light treatment.

Prevention is principally a matter of care of the milk supply. We have reason to hope that universal pasteurization will end the prevalence of this form of tuberculosis. If the dairy herds are freed from tuberculous cows the job of prevention of bone tuberculosis will be easier still.

INFECTED GLANDS IN NECK.

S. M. writes: 1. I have swollen glands below my ears. Also a swollen object running vertically on my neck. Now and then I have colds. I have had this trouble about two months. How may I cure it?

2. How can pyorrhea be cured and what is the cause?

REPLY.

1. My guess is that you have infected neck glands, probably tubercular. This trouble is generally curable by heliotherapy if the source of continued infection has been removed.

2. Some cases of pyorrhea are cured by local treatment plus the use of a diet rich in vitamin C. Such a diet contains a pint of orange juice, one lemon, and a head of lettuce daily.

CAUSE OF CLUB FINGERS.

G. W. writes: What is the cause of fingers swelling at the ends, commonly called club fingers, I believe? Is there any cure or anything at all a person could do to rid himself of such?

REPLY.

The cause is prolonged difficulty in breathing. It is noted in chronic consumption chronic heart disease with heart asthma, and with bronchial asthma.

There is nothing that can be done about it. It is so trifling as compared with the underlying trouble that few people worry about it.

SOMETIMES IT IS DANGEROUS.

L. M. Writes: 1. What causes pus in the joints?

2. Is it dangerous?

3. Is it curable?

4. What causes stone in the kidney?

5. What is the proper blood pressure for a woman 60 years of age?

REPLY.

1. Infection with a pus germ. Tuberculosis is often present. There may be a history of injury.

2. Yes. Frequently it is very dangerous.

3. In many cases it is. Permanent destruction of the joint is probable.

4. Among the causes are: Errors in diet, drinking whisky, not drinking enough water, infections.

NATURALIZED CITIZEN MARRIES ABROA

Chicago, March 26.—[Friend of the People.]—A woman became a naturalized citizen four years ago. Three years ago she went to Palestine for a visit. While there she married a noncitizen of the United States. Can she come back to the United States as an American citizen and bring her husband with her, or must he come in on the quota?

G. G.

If the marriage of the American woman referred to, to the alien referred to, took place prior to June 1, 1928, the husband is a nonquota immigrant; if the marriage took place subsequent to May 31, 1928, the husband will get preference in the quota.

In either case the wife should execute form 633 on behalf of husband. Forms may be obtained at this office [1343 Transportation building].

If the woman is now in the old country [you do not make yourself clear on this point] she should execute form 633 before an American consulate nearest her place of residence in the old country. Forms may be obtained at the consulate. S. D. SMITH.
District Director of Immigration.

THOSE TAX BILLS.

Chicago, March 26.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Who should pay last year's tax bills, due next June, on a house to be foreclosed next month? E. D. H.

The person claiming title at the time the tax bill was presented will have to pay it, but if later the property is sought to be redeemed the tax bill will have to be paid by the one so seeking to redeem.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CUTTING TIMBER AFTER FORECLOSURE.

Friendship, Wis., March 26.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Can one cut timber on one's farm after it has been foreclosed?

A. W.

After foreclosure the occupant has no right to cut timber, as standing trees are ordinarily real property.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

43D STREET VIADUCT.

Chicago, March 21.—[Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly advise me if there will be a viaduct connecting the outer drive and 43d street over the Illinois Central tracks as there is on 22d and 39th streets and its approximate height at the end of the 1100 block? Also, when will the viaduct be built?

E. C.

The lake front ordinance adopted in 1919 provides for a viaduct across the Illinois Central tracks at 43d street, connecting with the lake front extension lands. The proposed grade of the approach to the viaduct will start at Greenwood avenue, which is the 1100 block. No date for start of construction has been set by the south park commissioners. GEORGE T. DONOGHUE.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 6, 1865.

NEW YORK.—The Commercial's Washington special says that the colored troops, headed by Gen. Draper of Massachusetts, were the first to enter Richmond. The city was formally surrendered by the mayor, Joseph Mayo, who merely pleaded for protection to life and property. All the principal buildings had been fired by the rebels before leaving. Gen. Weitzel took Jeff Davis' home for his headquarters.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A telegram from Richmond states that Gen. Weitzel captured in Richmond 1,000 well prisoners and 5,000 wounded rebels. President Lincoln left Richmond and returned to City Point. Gen. Weitzel finds much suffering among the people of Richmond. He is about to issue supplies to all who take the oath. The inhabitants now number about 20,000—half of them of African descent. Jeff Davis went to Danville. All the members of the rebel congress escaped. Hunter has gone home. Gen. Weitzel found 500 pieces of artillery and 5,000 stands of arms. The rebel ironclads were exploded before the evacuation. The Virginia lies sunk in the James river. Ewell set fire to the city before leaving. All the business portion of Main street to the river was destroyed. Mrs. Lee remains in the city.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Gen. Grant reports that last night Gen. Sheridan was on the Danville road south of Amelia Court House, and sent word to Gen. Meade, who was following him with the 2d and 6th corps, that if the troops could be got up in time he had hopes of capturing or dispersing the whole of Lee's army.

CHICAGO.—Charles J. Wyeth of Chicago and Miss Julia McReynolds of Detroit, Mich., were married in the latter place on April 4 by the Rev. B. F. Paddock.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 6, 1900.

LONDON.—Boers in the Orange Free State, taking advantage of Lord Roberts' delay in reorganizing his cavalry, have advanced to Wepener, 45 miles south of Thaba Nchu, and are attacking Gen. Brabant's forces. A Lourenzo Marquez dispatch says on April 2 the British garrison at Mafeking made a sortie at the same time that Gen. Plumer's cavalry attacked the Boers at Ramathlabama. The British were repulsed in both cases.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—When Admiral Dewey reached Philadelphia today he broke his long silence as to his politics and declared he is a Democrat. He refused to say whether he would run independently for President if the Republicans nominate McKinley and the Democrats name Bryan.

CHICAGO.—The will of Sidney A. Kent, disposing of property stated to be worth $3,700,000, was filed for probate. After leaving $3,000,000 in trust for the widow and two daughters and smaller sums for several relatives, the income from $50,000 each is set aside for the University of Chicago and the Chicago Art institute.

NEW YORK.—After the briefest deliberation the jury acquitted Olga Nethersole, Hamilton Revelle, her leading man; Marcus Mayer, her manager, and Theodore Moss of Wallack's theater, under indictment charged with having offended public morals by producing the play "Sapho."

CHICAGO.—Silas B. Cobb, the Chicago pioneer, who for a week had been ill at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William B. Walker, 2027 Prairie avenue, died at the age of 88. He had spent nearly 70 years in active business in Chicago. He belonged to the small number of pioneers who antedated the "early settlers" in Chicago, having come here in 1833.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 6, 1920.

CHICAGO. — Leaders of regular unions battled to break the strike of the "insurgent" switchmen, whose walkout, plus the Easter blizzard, tied up freight traffic on eleven railroads entering Chicago. It is predicted the backbone of the strike will be broken today.

DETROIT.—Senator Hiram Johnson of California has been declared the presidential choice of Michigan. With partial returns from more than half the counties tabulated he has a big lead over Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood for indorsement as the Republican nominee in the presidential preference primary. Frank O. Lowden ran a bad third.

VLADIVOSTOK.—Japanese troops occupied Vladivostok after eight hours of severe fighting in all parts of the city. The Russians were taken by surprise and they have all been disarmed. The fighting and occupation came shortly after the American troops left the city on April 1.

CHICAGO.—Eugene M. Hoyne & Co., stock and grain brokerage house, announced its inability to protect its open trades in the grain market and suspended operations. The failure is the first in the grain trade since the beginning of the war. The firm is composed of Eugene M. Hoyne and Eugene H. De Bronkhart.

CHICAGO.—"On account of the white paper shortage, Don't Buy a Tribune—Borrow One," is an appeal that appears on the first page of THE TRIBUNE.

TELEPHONE MANNERS.

Chicago, March 27.—Are the business men of Chicago deliberately organizing discourtesy? I am inclined to think so from my experiences over the telephone. A new wrinkle has appeared. The practice now is to have the office operator call a man, get the call through past his operator to his desk and then say: "Is this Mr. Smith speaking?"

In the meantime Mr. Smith, who has his own work to do, is kept waiting with the receiver to his ear while the operator explains to Mr. Jones that she has Mr. Smith on the wire.

The effect of all this ought to be that the Smiths will hang up and a considerable amount of exasperation will develop that might so easily have been good will. The telephone company has shown its devotion to courtesy by developing the use of "thank you." It seems to me it is not asking a great deal of us users to be at least decently considerate of each other if we cannot be courteous. ALLEN D. ALBERT.

CHAIN STORES.

Chicago, March 28.—In an address before the Bankers' Club of Chicago, E. G. Yonker, president of the Sanitary Grocery company, asserted that the chain store plan is successful because of its elimination of waste and that the independent merchant is just as sure of success as a chain store company if he applies equally efficient methods. This assertion is somewhat nullified later in his address when he makes special mention of mass distribution. It does seem that it is rather difficult for the individual merchant to realize any strength or successful results from mass distribution and right there is the reason for his elimination. The independently operated grocery store is all but extinct now in almost every community.

Saving of waste and application of super efficiency is a good thing if it can be accomplished without doing more damage than good. If our activities were so efficient and elimination of waste so complete that one-third of our population could supply the requirements of our entire people it would not be a very desirable thing to have the other two-thirds idle. We have about 120,000,000 people in this country who are entitled to an opportunity to make an honest living.

Improvement of present conditions cannot be substantially accomplished by strangling individual enterprise, even if done through a great saving of waste and application of intense efficiency. We need construction activities to improve matters and this line of endeavor is being discouraged more and more every day by the creation of recent stores and offices by the thousands throughout the country. JOHN P. MOELLER.

FAINTING ON THE "L."

Chicago, March 28.—I am a daily traveler on the Evanston branch of the Northwestern elevated, and feel that attention should be called to the condition of the cars, which seems to be due principally to the new cars of the round shaped tops, and that is extreme lack of ventilation.

Within the last two months I have seen at least four or five girls become very dizzy, or, in fact, faint and fall to the floor, and it was generally at the time when the car felt extremely stuffy.

Guards should be instructed to see that the cars are properly ventilated and fans should be provided if needed to give a current of air to carry at least to the center of the car. On the other hand, it may be true that some of these girls are those who do not eat any breakfast in the morning, but may be seen at the lunch counters taking their coffee and rolls after they get downtown. H. C. GOETTSCHE.

A SITE FOR A CITY COLLEGE.

Chicago, March 27.—In my opinion one solution to the problem confronted by Crane junior college lies in the school's having a four year college in its own building. An ideal place for such a school would be along the lake front in one of the World's Fair buildings. After the fair is over one of the buildings can certainly be fixed up at a very small cost to the taxpayers. Then Crane will have a campus, the Chicago public library, with a wealth of material right at her door, Soldiers' field for a stadium, a good location with respect to its being equally close to every section of the city, and better facilities all around. ROBERT WECLEW.

PROHIBITION DOCTRINE.

Washington, D. C., March 27.—Entirely apart from the national argument about prohibition as a political measure there are some underlying facts in the case which any person with normal intelligence must accept if he has the honesty to take truth for its face value.

1. Alcohol is a habit-forming, irritant, narcotic depressant drug. This is an undisputed scientific fact. Alcohol is useful in science and industry, but an intelligent person can see that it is unfit for beverage purposes because of those properties just named.

2. As far as the beverage use of alcohol is concerned, the word "temperance" as used by the wets is the term of a less enlightened day than the present. The true definition of temperance is "moderation in the use of everything good, abstinence from the use of everything bad." Total abstinence is the only temperate attitude toward the use of alcohol.

If the truth as to the nature of alcohol were not ignored by otherwise intelligent people we should soon see the end of such statements as "There's nothing especially wrong with a little drink, just so you don't take too much."

A person who takes a glass of sherry or port, or a mug of beer, is just that much intoxicated. He has become that much a detriment to society through the abuse of his body and mind.

GORDON BARNES.

POOR SPORTS.

Grigsby, Ill., March 27.—You correspondent, Mr. James A. Gordon, accuses the anti-prohibitionists of being poor sports. Westbrook Pegler should write the answer to this one.

Are the drys good sports? Can they see their control steadily slipping, state by state, smile and take it without quivering to type and becoming ostrich-observers? Can they affirm the wisdom of national prohibition after a decade when every straw vote, even the weakest from a wet viewpoint, shows an almost equal division of sentiment? Can they deny that ten years have amply proved the inability of so large a unit as the federal government to deal effectively with liquor problems? Did they not force a marriage between a jealous guardian, the constitution, and a hypocritical busybody, the 18th amendment, and produce a charming brood of brats called bootlegger, racketeer, and Irish office holder?

Thomas Jefferson once said: "Any departure by the majority from constitutional principle and purpose is vital. What such a majority does is not binding on the minority." I concede that Jefferson was a Democrat and therefore a malcontent and provincial person, but what he said isn't especially applicable. The drys never were a majority, are not now, and are not likely ever to be as long as the younger generation occasionally reads the constitution.

EDWARD HAWS.

RECESS.

Chicago, Ill., March 28.—I was very much surprised to pass the Ray public school at 57th street and Kimbark avenue today and see probably 200 children playing out during recess without proper wraps. I saw at least twenty little first graders in shirtwaists, no hats and no rubbers, some of them even with tennis shoes, paddling around in the slush. The temperature at the time was about thirty-four, with a raw wind blowing. I was particularly shocked as I remembered my own school days at this school when the teachers were very strict about requiring us to put on our wraps. DONALD KING.

DEPORTATION.

Chicago, March 28.—I know of many first class foreigners who have spent the best years of their lives in constructive work, building up the great west. Compelled as they have been to keep moving following the work instead of sitting down waiting for the work to come to them, it was often very hard for them to comply with the naturalization laws. Now, after they are getting old, as thanks for a useful life spent in the upbuilding of the country, they ought to, according to Mr. H. L., be shipped back to the old countries. Is this fair play to the men and to their countries of origin?

Remember this: It was the foreigner who largely built the great west.

FASCISM TO HAIL BIRTH OF VERGIL 2,000 YEARS AGO

Sees Duce as Mouthpiece of Old Roman Poe.

BY DAVID DARRAH
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

ROME, April 5.—American followers of the Vergilian cult, who are said to be numerous, are being counted on to visit Italy this year for the national celebration of the two thousandth anniversary of the birth of the great Latin poet, the bane of high school students, and according to Dante his guide in hell.

Several special cruises have been organized from the United States for the celebration, which the three committees of Rome, Mantua and Naples have prepared to begin on April 21, the birthday of Rome, about whose greatness Vergil sang. The festivities will last until Oct. 5.

Fascism Claims Vergil.

The Vergilian celebration is also being promoted by the Fascist government to foster a rural campaign. Vergil being preeminently a poet of the fields, mountains and woods in his "Bucolics" and "Georgics." Thus Fascism traces a direct connection between Vergil's ideas and Premier Mussolini's designs to inculcate the agrarian civilization here as exemplified by the various "battles of grain" reclamation of land, and back to land movements, and the glorification of the peasants.

It is not a far step to compare the policy of the Emperor Augustus, who inspired Vergil, with that of Il Duce, showing that now as then Rome must draw her grandeur and greatness from agriculture and the fields.

Poet Considered Saint.

This has an added stimulus in the Vergil cult in Italy, which has always been great. In the middle ages he had come to be considered as not of a magi or prophet, and at Naples even today crowds kneel before his tomb and pray to St. Vergil.

Under the auspices of Sig. Guliana, minister of education, and the Italian Royal Academy, the Vergil celebrations will begin here two weeks hence with historical lectures. Later in Mantua, where Vergil was born, Arnaldo Mussolini, Il Duce's brother, will direct the inauguration of a 1 acre grove of trees planted on the outskirts of the city to serve as a monument to the poet more durable than marble. They also constitute good agrarian propaganda.

Later Rome will hold commemoration ceremonies on sacred Capitoline hill, where later poets, such as Petrarch, were crowned with laurel.

In Naples, too, ceremonies will be held at Vergil's tomb on Pauillippo Hill. The Fascists recently made this tomb a national monument.

Plan Aeneas Pilgrimage

The most romantic part of the anniversary celebration will be reenactment of the wanderings of pious Aeneas about the peninsula of Italy and Sicily after he jilted Queen Dido.

A ship has been chartered to carry Sig. Guliano, members of the Royal academy, and other Vergil students and lecturers. It will touch first at Brindisi, then Taranto, Carrima, Syracuse, Agrigentum, Cumæ, Gaeta, Monte Circe, where the sorceress of that name lived, and finally Ostia, at the mouth of the Tiber, up which Aeneas sailed to the site of the Eternal City.

At each of these places orators will disembark from the ship and give illustrated lectures to the populace, while each day on board passages from the "Aeneid" will be read. A special visit will be made to the ancient Greek city of Cumæ, near Lake Averno, where excavations are going on, with a trip to the grotto of the sibyl, whom Aenas consulted. Noted intellectuals, such as Francesco Coppola, will deliver commemorative orations here.

All this pilgrimage, it is expected, will inspire the peasants to produce a bumper wheat crop this year, as Premier Mussolini asked them to do in the name of Vergil, indicating that the era of prosperity which will make the Roman eagles fly around the world again is tied up to agriculture.

ANTI-FASCISTS HELD AFTER DISTURBANCE AT NEWARK AIRPORT

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—A group of about fifty Hungarian anti-fascists, twelve of whom were later arrested, precipitated a near riot late this afternoon at the Newark Metropolitan airport when they interrupted but failed to break up reception ceremonies in honor of Alexander Magyar, a Hungarian aviator, who is planning to make a flight this summer from the United States to Budapest.

Magyar, who hopes to make the trans-Atlantic flight in the competition for a $10,000 prize offered by Lord Rothermere, British publisher, arrived at the Newark airport shortly after 5:30 p. m., from Detroit in a cabin monoplane in which he carried the Very Rev. Msgr. Elemer Eordogh, papal prelate of Toledo, and Francis Prattinger, editor of a Hungarian paper in Detroit, as passengers.

A crowd of about 1,200 men, women and children, admirers of Maygar, had gathered at the field to welcome him when the demonstration occurred.

CHICAGO DINERS TO HEAR DAWES TALK IN LONDON

Ambassador Dawes cabled from London yesterday to Elmer F. Wieboldt, president of the better business bureau, verifying final arrangements for his trans-Atlantic address next Wednesday night to a dinner of Chicago business leaders in the Stevens hotel. The ambassador will begin his address at 9 p. m. Wednesday, Chicago time. His words will be broadcast to the country at large from the banquet room.

Among groups having reservations for the function are the Association of Commerce, Chicago Title and Trust company, State Street Improvement sociation, Chicago Real Estate board, Cook County Real Estate board, Rotary International, Greater Central Business District association, Chicago Association of Life Underwriters, Illinois Industrial Lenders association, Building Contractors and Executives club.

"The enthusiasm with which this function has been received is evidence that alert Chicagoans are of common mind that the time has come to rise and say a good word for their home town," commented Mr. Wieboldt.

FRANCE IS FIRST OF ALLIES TO O. K. WAR DEBT PLAN

Senate Ratifies It by Vote of 284 to 8.

PARIS, April 5.—(AP)—The Young plan, drawn up at Paris last spring by the financial experts of the United States and other powers involved in the great war and approved by two conferences at The Hague, today became a law, as far as France is concerned.

With only eight dissenting votes, the French senate this evening adopted a resolution ratifying the plan, which was approved a week ago in the chamber of deputies by a vote of 530 to 55. The vote today was 284 to 8. There were eight abstentions.

Four to Follow Suit.

The legislative assemblies of Germany and France now have approved the Young plan, bitterly attacked by nationalistic elements in both countries. Great Britain, Italy, Japan, and Belgium will probably follow suit rapidly.

With the approval of the plan, the last fear that French troops would not evacuate the Rhineland by June 30 disappeared. Some senators of the moderate groups, including former President Millerand, objected to French evacuation before the reich had shown a disposition to execute the plan faithfully.

But they finally gave way before an eloquent appeal from Premier Tardieu, who asked them to adopt the plan as the only means for arriving at a satisfactory understanding with Germany and the other reparations creditors.

Premier's Plea Wins.

Replying to objections that the plan failed to give France the right to exercise effective measures in case Germany should default in her reparations payments, the premier told the senate that military sanctions were no longer popular or effective.

He declared that recourse to the permanent court of international justice and to the league of nations offered all the French can hope for in the way of bringing pressure to bear on Germany to execute her engagements.

He emphasized the fact that the plan, including the bank for international settlements, definitely settles the reparations problem, and insures France priority in the manner of sanctions if The Hague court determines that Germany has defaulted.

PAIR ROB GARAGE OWNER OF $300.

Joseph Bartucci, owner of a garage at 806 West Congress street, was robbed of $300 yesterday by two gunmen who drove up to the garage in an automobile.

SCRATCHED FACE IS SCIENCE CLEW IN RIBBON DEATH

"Look for a man with a scratch on his face," was the word given the police yesterday by Coroner Herman Lundesen in connection with the ribbon murder of Mrs. Mildred Helsing in her home at 5830 West Lake street, last Tuesday. The coroner had just received a report from Dr. Clarence Muehlberger of the crime detection laboratory of Northwestern university, stating that scrapings from the slain woman's finger nails revealed the presence of blood and skin particles.

Dr. Muehlberger also reported on the scrapings taken from the nails of George Riley, colored janitor of the apartment building and on those taken from Reuben O. Helsing, the husband. Both were absolved by the findings.

Police in the meantime started a more systematic search for a red headed youth, 17 to 20 years old, who was seen in the neighborhood before Mrs. Helsing's murder.

SUES TO FORCE WIFE TO LET HIM HANDLE MONEY

Walter Cresswell Files $500,000 Action.

Walter R. Cresswell, Lake Forest real estate dealer, yesterday filed a bill for an accounting in the Superior court against his wife, Mrs. Marie Cresswell. The bill, drawn by the law firm of Dunne & Corboy, alleges that the wife holds assets, belonging to her husband, of nearly $500,000 which she refuses to share with him.

The Cresswells were married Feb. 11, 1918. At the time of their marriage he was without more than ordinary means, the bill states. With the development of his real estate business he began acquiring a sizeable fortune. The bill avers that he opened a bank account in his wife's name, having utmost confidence and trust in her.

Turned Over Securities, Claim.

He is also said to have turned over $100,000 in insurance policies to her and $172,000 in securities. Their home at 1011 Greenwood avenue, Wilmette, is in her name, as well as a Lincoln automobile, according to the bill. The wife is also said to have his diamond ring.

Recently, the bill declares, the wife has refused to share the account with her husband and has refused to turn over the policies and securities. Cresswell declares that he is in need of ready funds because of a depression in the real estate market and to develop his holdings in view of the impending return to prosperity.

Separation Not Contemplated.

Cresswell declares that his widowed mother is dependent on him for support and that his wife has refused to honor his checks to his mother. This refusal has caused him hardship and worry, he declares.

The bill asks that the wife be enjoined from disposing of the assets and that she be ordered to make a strict accounting of all funds in her possession. It also asks that a receiver be appointed to manage the assets. His attorneys will apply for a writ of injunction to prevent Mrs. Cresswell from leaving the jurisdiction of the court pending the trial of the suit.

The attorneys said that the Cresswells are not contemplating a separation. They are now living together.

TWO BOYS DROWNED AS ROWBOAT TIPS OVER

Left to right: Melvin Olson, 13 years old, 1747 North Central Park avenue, and Robert Ford, 12 years old, 1734 North Ballou street, who lost their lives, and Harry Christensen, 12 years old, 1738 North Central Park avenue, who swam to shore after vainly trying to rescue one of his playmates when their boat capsized on the Des Plaines river at Lake street, Maywood. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Two boys were drowned and a third narrowly escaped drowning yesterday when a rowboat in which they were paddling in the Des Plaines river at Lake street, Maywood, overturned.

The dead boys are: Melvin Olson, 13 years old, 1747 North Central Park avenue, and Robert Ford, 12 years old, 1734 North Ballou street. The third boy, Harry Christensen, 12 years old, 1738 North Central Park avenue, swam to shore.

The boys, all pupils of the Harriet Beecher Stowe school, found the rowboat, an old one, while playing along the river. They had hardly reached midstream before the boat capsized.

"I grabbed Melvin because I knew he couldn't swim, but I couldn't hold him," the Christensen boy explained to Policeman Charles Broehl of River Forest police.

Young Christensen ran to the River Forest police station and gave the alarm. River Forest police, assisted by firemen and police from Maywood, soon recovered the body of young Olson. Efforts to recover the body of the Ford boy were still being made last night.

WILD OIL GUSHER DEFIES EFFORTS TO SUBDUE FLOW

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 5.—[U. P.]—A golden plume of oil driven into the clouds by a pressure which expert engineers consider too great to be subdued by their best devices, fastened attention on the Oklahoma City oil field tonight.

Throwing a stream of oil 2,000 feet in the air, the Mary Sudik wild gusher continued its rampage tonight while engineers debated what to do. The well has been flowing out of control for ten days except for two brief interruptions.

A huge steel cylinder with a 25 foot spout had been placed over the gusher's mouth. For eight hours only last night this held the tremendous flow of 30,000 barrels of oil daily and 150,000,000 cubic feet of gas tearing at the well's subterranean chambers, 6,500 feet beneath the surface.

Wearied workmen led by Clyde Deverse, company district superintendent, entered the oil closed area today and attempted to kill the flow by shooting a special kind of mud into the well with little success. More than 150 men guarded 50 square miles of the oil drenched area. Engineers said the rock pressure, which reached the intensity of 2,000 pounds a square inch, was the greatest in the world.

This phenomenon has attracted experts from foreign countries to the field to study geological conditions. The field is the state's deep test area. At a depth of 6,500 feet pressure is said to be so great that gas is in a semi-liquid state.

SWEDEN TO BURY QUEEN SATURDAY IN HISTORIC TOMB

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, April 5.—An uninterrupted series of tributes to the late Queen Victoria of Sweden, who is lying in state at her villa Svezia, was opened this morning by Premier Mussolini, who called at 10 o'clock. The king and queen of Italy and the papal nuncio called at the villa Svazia late last night.

Roman society, where King Gustaf has been a popular figure every winter, began calling to offer condolences as soon as the morning papers had announced Queen Victoria's passing.

A special train is to convey the body to Swinemuende, Germany, Wednesday. From there four Swedish warships will escort it across the Baltic to Stockholm, where it is due Saturday. The late queen will be buried on the same day in Riddarholms church, the burial place of Swedish kings and queens since 1280.

The royal courts of Europe and Japan have ordered special periods of mourning.

Tries Rescue in Vain

MURIEL BETTS, DAUGHTER OF N.U. PROFESSOR, DIES

Miss Muriel Betts, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. George H. Betts, 803 Clinton place, Evanston, died in St. Luke's hospital, New York City, yesterday morning. Dr. Betts is professor of education at Northwestern university.

Miss Betts was taken to the hospital suffering with sinus trouble three weeks ago, and apparently was on the way to recovery when heart weakness developed, causing her death. She had been conducting a private kindergarten in New York since taking her master's degree in education at Columbia university where she had charge of a kindergarten department while taking graduate courses.

Miss Betts was born in Mount Vernon, Ia., and graduated from Cornell college there. She later attended Boston university where she became a member of the Alpha Phi sorority.

Funeral services will be held at the home in Evanston Tuesday morning. Burial will be at Lake Geneva where the family has a summer home.

BULGARIAN KING DRIVES ENGINE; GETS 'CALL DOWN'

SOFIA, Bulgaria, April 5.—[U. P.]—The Varna express steamed into Pleven two minutes late today and a divisional superintendent leaped to the engineer's cab, demanding an explanation for the tardiness of the crack train.

The man at the throttle—his thin face smudged with smoke and his baggy overalls smeared with grease—patiently explained the cause of the slight delay and then signed the customary driver's report. The superintendent gave his engineer a more careful inspection and recognized Boris III., king of the Bulgarians. He looked across the cab and recognized the king's brother, Prince Cyril, as another occupant of the big engine.

Apologizing profusely, the superintendent backed away. The engine roared on to Varna within the scheduled running time of one hour.

FARM PLANTING BEGINS AS SUN DRIES UP FIELDS

Tractors and Teams Busy in Chicago Area.

Those harbingers of spring—robins, meadowlarks, and pussy willows—were joined yesterday by a phalanx of horse and motor drawn farm implements. Their sudden turnout was made possible by the sunny weather of last week which melted the snow in the Chicago region.

While lawn making and gardening brought forth rakes, spades, rollers, and packets of seeds in the city, farmers were making the best of pleasant weather to seed spring wheat, disc the plowed fields, and prepare the ground for corn, potatoes, and other crops.

Neighbors laughed at some ambitious farmers a month ago when they made the most of the warm days before Chicagoland's record breaking snowstorm. Many fields were planted to onions and potatoes in February and those who worried as their plantings lay under snowbanks are now reassured. Green shoots have come through the ground, apparently unharmed by the snow.

Season "About Average."

In the opinion of O. G. Barrett, farm adviser of the Cook county farm bureau, seasonal conditions for farm and truck land this spring may seem to be more backward, but in reality they are "just about average for the region around Chicago."

Spring wheat acreage will be reduced somewhat in this area, Mr. Barrett believes, basing his estimate on comments he has received in his daily rounds of the county's farmers. He says he thinks the farmers in this territory, however, will not turn to barley, as the farm board and department of agriculture recommend, because of the barley barbs that caused hired men to shy away at harvest time.

Barbless Barley Advised.

Cook county farmers are being advised to sow the barbless barley varieties recently developed at state experiment stations. Barley scab, the farm bureau says, has made some advance recently in this section, and dusting methods are not in general use to prevent it as yet.

In a tour of the county's rural areas yesterday, THE TRIBUNE'S farm representative found many who were looking over their seed corn supply, and testing more carefully than usual because of reports of serious damage caused last winter by severe freezing, while seed corn was still high in moisture content. Others were discing, harrowing, dragging, and a few found the land dry enough to plow.

VICTIM'S SISTER CAUSES UPROAR IN MURDER TRIAL

Warned by Court After Shouts of Accused.

Mrs. Margaret Tracey Shevlin, sister of E. J. Tracey, late business agent for the Sign Painters and Bulletin Board Hangers' union, had to be warned by Judge Daniel P. Trude in the criminal court yesterday that she should not, by her testimony, show her resentment toward the defendant, Melville Purves, who is charged with the murder of her brother. Mrs. Shevlin was the first witness called by the state.

Under the questioning of Assistant State's Attorneys Walker Butler and John Hampton, she was proving the technical testimony such as the corpus delicti for the prosecution. She had told of serving her brother his dinner on the night he was shot and killed and then was asked what his physical condition was at that time.

Shouts Her Accusal.

"He was in excellent condition until the day he was killed," she started to say in an even tone of voice. After finishing the sentence she suddenly rose to her feet and her dark eyes flashed as she pointed toward the defendant, a boyhood friend of hers, as well as her brother, and shouted:

"Until he was murdered by that, that Melville."

The remainder of her talk—for she kept on talking—was drowned out by the shouts of objection from Attorneys Harold Levy and Emmet Byrne for the defense.

Court Warns Witness.

The jury was excused and Judge Trude warned her that she should not express any opinion on the case, nor should she, by her testimony or actions on the witness stand, show her resentment toward the defendant. The jury was then instructed to disregard her display on the witness stand. She finished her testimony and several times afterward had to be warned to confine herself to the questions.

Prosecutor Butler in his opening statement told the jury that the state would prove that Purves was jealous of Tracey because the latter had succeeded him as the union business agent. Before that time the men were chums, having been reared together on the west side.

The shooting occurred in the Club Arlington, 2418 West North avenue.

CRIMINAL COURT.

George Simpson, assault to rob, sentenced to 1 to 14 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge D. J. Normoyle.

James Theodore and Albert Darakas, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years each in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Daniel P. Trude.

CHARGE ETHIOPIA RULER WITH PLOT TO KILL EMPRESS

GENEVA, April 5.—[U. P.]—Sinister intrigue and royal poison plots enter into accusations now in the hands of the league of nations secretariat against Ras Taffari, sole ruler of Abyssinia since the death of Empress Zauditu two days ago.

Ras Taffari is accused by Dr. Alexandre Garabedian, former physician to the Abyssinian court, of having twice urged the poisoning of the empress and of Waizero Sehin, her niece and Ras Taffari's mother-in-law.

Because he refused to obey the royal commands to put out of the way the woman who blocked Ras Taffari's sole autocratic sway over the black empire of Africa, Dr. Garabedian claims he was persecuted, imprisoned, and exiled, and raids made on his hospital.

Dr. Garabedian supports his claim asking $180,000 damages from the Abyssinian government with 300 pages of documents, including two letters written to Ras Taffari and purporting to refuse indignantly the prince's demand to kill members of the royal family.

PORTER SPIRITED FROM SPEEDING TRAIN AND SLAIN

Boys Find Dead Negro in Grove; Officers Baffled.

Locust Grove, Ga., April 5.—(AP)—The body of a Negro Pullman porter, his neck tied to a small tree and his knees touching the ground, was found early today in a grove a quarter of a mile from the track over which the train on which he worked had sped a few hours earlier.

He was J. H. Wilkins of Kansas City, a regular porter of the Southern railway's Kansas City special.

His skull was fractured in two places and the body apparently had been carried across a plowed field from the tracks to a woods.

How He Left Train Is Not Known.

The porter's white coat had been used to tie his neck to the tree, which was a slender sapling. Tracks led from the railroad to the spot. At the railroad right-of-way were drops of blood and signs of what officers think had been a scuffle. The train had not stopped there, however, the nearest stop having been made seventeen miles away.

Officers investigating the mysterious affair thought from the fractured skull that the Negro might have been hit on the head and thrown from the train or been struck after being taken from the train. A wound under his arm, at first thought by officers to have been deep enough to cause death, was described later as a jagged cut which probably was not fatal.

Money Found in His Pockets.

In the Negro's pockets was $58.60. The footprints leading from the railroad tracks to the body were obscured by rain which started shortly after two small country boys on their way to town discovered the body.

The boys hurried to Locust Grove and reported the gruesome find to police.

Coroner's Jury Baffled.

Ordinarily the Kansas City special is a nonstop train between Macon and Atlanta. This morning it was forced by freight trains to stop at Juliette and again at Sandy, 17 miles south of Locust Grove. The train went through Locust Grove, however, at a good rate of speed and did not stop again until it reached Atlanta.

A coroner's jury was impaneled late today and after questioning a few witnesses, adjourned until Tuesday without determining the cause of death. Railroad and Pullman detectives were brought to the scene to assist in the investigation.

HOOVER SUNDAY SCHOOL LURES MOUNTAIN FOLK

Children in Backwoods Like to Learn.

Orange, Va., April 5.—[U. P.]—Religious instruction is being given now in the backwoods school established by President Hoover. The President hopes to visit the school Sunday before returning to Washington from his Rapidan fishing trip.

The school has been in operation six weeks. Already it has become a community center that draws the mountain folk from miles around.

It serves both as a schoolroom for 24 boys and girls ranging up to 18 years of age and as a gathering place in the evening for the older people who want to talk and listen to the radio before a cheery open fire.

30 to 40 Attend on Sundays.

Miss Christine Vest, Kentucky mountain girl chosen by Mr. Hoover as the school teacher, said today in discussing her work that she had begun a Sunday school where 30 to 40 attend weekly.

George Burraker, caretaker for the President's fishing lodge, is a lay preacher and soon will begin regular Sunday morning sermons. There is no denominational affiliation.

The services consist chiefly of singing hymns and reading of scripture. The services attract the picturesque mountain folk, most of whom never had seen the interior of a school room. There are old Matt Burraker, with flowing white beard and rusty black coat, a leader among the hill people, his 71 year old wife who uses a cane but "never wore specs," their sons and daughters and grandchildren and the rest of the folk whose poor homes are nestled in the hollows of this remote mountain region.

Pupils Like to Learn.

The school itself is thriving, Miss Vest reports. She has gained four pupils since the start. She may continue the sessions through the summer unless the boys and girls find that the necessary work about their homes, helping with the crops and doing chores from which they are free in winter months, keep them from attending.

"We're learning lots of things," said Nathan Weakley, 9 years old. "I never knew the world was so big."

George Harold Burraker, also 9, talks with a deep voice and uses the quaint mountain vernacular. "We all's learning right smart things up yonder," he boomed. "We're right fond of goin' up thar."

"Up thar" is the brown and green bungalow type school house which overlooks Doupele Top mountain and the inspiring panorama of the valley 3,500 feet below.

Eleven mountain trout, including one large rainbow—size a secret—were landed today on the deft hook of the President.

The President was up at dawn and fished without interruption until 1:30 p. m. After lunch he went back for more. Other members of the party also had fair luck. Weather was ideal with lazy clouds hanging in the sky.

Girl Lawyer Turns Farmer and Raises $64,000 Crop

Alliance, Neb., April 5.—(AP)—The mortgage on the old homestead was coming due and something had to be done about it and so Miss Charlotte Worley dropped her practice of law, donned a pair of overalls, and went to work raising potatoes. It was learned today that she recently realized $64,000 from 30,000 bushels of certified seed potatoes and that the homestead was safe.

CHINA DECLARES WAR ON HEAD OF NORTH PROVINCE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, April 6.—[Sunday.]—The political council of the Chinese government has issued a mandate calling for a punitive expedition against Gen. Yen Hsi-shan, head of the Shansi government.

The mandate denounces the northern general as "the craftiest politician" and cites his alleged political crimes since the estbalishment of the Chinese republic in 1911. The mandate also accuses him of conspiracy against the national government through organizing reactionary generals and politicians for seditious purposes.

Chiang Kai-shek, head of the national government, announced that he is leaving for Hsuchow-fu, in northern Kiangsu, where the government has established military and aviation headquarters.

CHINA STUDENTS RIOT AGAINST BRITAIN, JAPAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, April 5.—Several student demonstrations occurred at Nanking yesterday, staged before the British consulate and along the river front, where the Japanese visiting torpedo squadon is anchored. The anti-British demonstration is believed to have been inspired by labor trouble at the British International Export company plant at Nanking. The anti-Japanese outburst is thought to have been a protest against the Japanese torpedo fleet, which is now making a practice cruise on the Yangtze river. Police dispersed the students, one officer being badly injured in the mêlée.

WOMAN'S BRAIN EQUALS MAN'S, SCIENCE LEARNS

Gray Matter of Notables Measured.

Ithaca, N. Y., April 5.—(AP)—A woman's brain is as good as a man's—that is the latest verdict of science as made public tonight at Cornell university.

The finding results from measurement of the brains of numerous individuals in the famous Cornell collection of the brains of notable persons. It was made by Dr. James W. Papez, assistant professor of neurology.

"There is nothing in the outer organization of the female brain," he said, "which would make it much different or inferior to that of the male. Given the same opportunities and incentives, the intellectual attainments of women need not be inferior to those of men."

Different from Men's.

A striking fact is that the feminine brains are not exactly like those of men. There are certain definite differences, which, however, seem to counterbalance one another.

Dr. Papez says the male brain averages about 7 per cent the heavier and that it frequently is larger.

"The greater weight and size," he said, "possibly are due to greater development of the fiber system by heavier physical work."

Area Better Developed.

But the brain area devoted chiefly to vision appears to be better developed in women.

The women also show superior size in the lower parietal lobule, a section just above the ear. "It is in this area," Dr. Papez said, "that we think the functions of sensation in the hands are controlled."

NEW YORK WILL HAVE NEW SUBWAY LINE IN OPERATION NEXT YEAR

New York, April 5.—[U.P.]—New Yorkers who pack the subways so tightly that they have come to call themselves "sardines" received good news today from the contractors who are building the new city owned Eighth avenue underground line.

It was promised that the new line, which is expected to remove considerable congestion from the Interborough Rapid Transit line and the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit company, would be opened July 4, 1931.

Meanwhile Mayor James J. Walker clings to the hope that he will be able to put through a unification plan which would bring all the subway lines under centralized control.

BLAZING PLANE CARRIES 2 MEN TO THEIR DEATH

Stunt Flyer and Student Killed in Texas.

Shiro, Tex., April 5.—(AP)—Two men were killed in the crash of a blazing monoplane today. The victims were Fritz H. Grifno, Dallas, Tex., stunt flyer, and F. H. Bernier of New Orleans, a flying student.

The plane was attempting to land when flames and smoke suddenly burst from the enclosed cabin. Then, its engine roaring, the ship swept downward and was smashed.

Grifno apparently made his last leap when there was none to see it. His body was in a furrow some 20 feet from the smouldering plane. The rags of his parachute were nearby. Bernier's body was found in the plane.

Pilot Killed; Student Hurt.

Willoughby, O., April 5. — (AP)— Arthur Craig of Painesville, O., lieutenant in the air corps during the world war, was burned to death, and Fred Hakola of Fairport, a student pilot, was injured when their airplane fell in a field near here late today.

The plane, according to witnesses, went into a tailspin at an altitude of 200 feet and came down headlong into soft mud.

British Hero Injured.

Winchester, Va., April 5.— (AP) — Lieut. R. J. Clohecy, noted British war ace, and Roy W. Richards, Winchester pilot, were injured today in the crash of their plane after Clohecy had put the ship through a series of stunts apparently too close to the ground.

Physicians said Richards' condition was precarious. Clohecy suffered a broken ankle and it was feared his eyesight had been injured.

Justice Galen Is Drafted for Montana Senate Race

Great Falls, Mont., April 5.—(AP)— Albert J. Galen, justice of the Montana Supreme court, veteran of the world war and former attorney general, today was drafted by the Republican state central committee as a candidate for the United States senate to oppose Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Democrat, who is a candidate for reelection.

Ex-Wife No. 6 Wins Alimony Fight

In Coma Since January; Aroused by April Birds

Fort Worth, Tex., April 5.—[U. P.] —Hugh Calhoun Jr., who went to sleep when snow was on the ground and awakened with birds singing at his hospital window, will recover, physicians said today.

Calhoun was brought to a hospital here Jan. 24, a snowy day, suffering from carbon monoxide poisoning. Since then he has been unable to talk or recognize friends or relatives.

Yesterday he whispered to his doctor, "Will I get well?"

Those were his only words, but he understood the doctor's reply and nodded his head. His progress should be rapid from now on, the doctor said.

Wed Seven Times

Circuit Judge Feinberg yesterday ordered Paul Ellis, 55 years old, 1539 South Sawyer avenue, to pay $160 in alimony arrears to his sixth wife, Mrs. Rose Ellis, 3405 West 18th street, for the support of her daughter, Goldie, 8 years old. Ellis pleaded that he be excused from payments on the ground that he had been married seven times and was the father of 16 children, 7 now living. All the marriages were legal.

Judge Feinberg held that the number of wives could not add to or detract from the amount of his obligation to his sixth wife.

Two of Ellis' wives died and four obtained divorces. Ellis is now married to Mrs. Ray Ellis.

LOBBY EXPOSERS CALL DU PONTS TO WETS' TRIAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 5.—Special.]—Pierre S. du Pont and Irenee du Pont, chairman and member respectively of the executive committee of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, were added today to the galaxy of notables scheduled to appear before the senate lobby committee next week when it resumes its inquiry into wet and dry lobbies.

Invitations to testify not only as to their activites as officials of the anti-prohibition association but also as to the connection, if any, of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., with an alleged rayon tariff lobby in the capital were dispatched to the Du Ponts today at the request of Senator Arthur Robinson [Rep., Ind.].

Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy in the Wilson cabinet, has already accepted an invitation to appear Tuesday with an explanation of editorial charges in his newspaper, the Raleigh, N. C., News Observer, that John J. Raskob, Democratic national committee chairman and a director of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, has mixed his wet views with Democratic party politics.

Henry H. Curran, president of the wet association, will be on hand with books of the organization, which Senator Robinson is confident will show that some of Raskob's $64,500 contributions have been used, with or without the Democratic national committee chairman's knowledge, to help elect wet Republican congressional candidates opposed by dry Democrats.

Following Daniels and Curran, Representative George Holden Tinkham Rep., Mass. will submit his evidence that the Methodist Church board of temperanme, prohibition and public morals and the federal council of churches are "dangerous and insidious lobbies."

ONTARIO PREMIER DENIES FAILURE OF RUM SYSTEM

Answers Drury Testimony at Washington Hearing.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TORONTO, Ontario, April 5.—The attack of E. C. Drury, former premier of Ontario, on the liquor control act of Ontario before the senate committee investigating the eighteenth amendment at Washington recently, has met with a sharp response from Ontario's present premier, G. Howard Ferguson, who is quoted in an interview in the Mail and Empire of Toronto.

Mr. Drury in his testimony at Washington declared that government control of liquor in Ontario and other Canadian provinces has failed and that drinking, arrests, motor accidents and crime generally have increased since the adoption of the liquor control act.

Premier Ferguson, in reply to this attitude of Mr. Drury, pointed out that Ontario's endorsement of the act and the electors' repudiation of the policies sponsored by Mr. Drury was ample indication that the people of Ontario did not hold government control to be a failure.

Offers Authoritative Information.

Mr. Ferguson further said that if any committee wishes an authoritative report on conditions in Ontario his government would be pleased to assist in furnishing all information.

"The best evidence of satisfaction of the public of Ontario as to the law is shown in the result of the last election," Premier Ferguson said, according to the Mail and Empire. "The province repudiated Mr. Drury's policy and returned 92 supporters of the government out of a total of 112 members.

"The opposition made liquor control the issue, and Mr. Drury himself took an active part and spoke in favor of prohibition. His influence is reflected in the vote wherever he spoke, and instance being in Hamilton, where he very bitterly opposed the act, and the government candidates in favor of it were elected by unprecedented majorities.

Rural Sections Go Wet.

"Moreover, throughout the rural ridings of Ontario, where prohibition was supposedly firmly established, the government gained more support than any other government ever had.

"The government's policy is education of public opinion toward self-control and sobriety. In this they have the support of the Rev. Dr. Brace, Grand Scribe of the Sons of Temperance in Ontario and the Rev. Ernest Thomas, secretary of the social services of the United church.

"That is the best answer, I think, to Mr. Drury's views on this subject," Premier Ferguson said, concluding with the remark that most of the untrue impressions about the success of the control act were due to information derived from prohibitionists and paid officials of prohibition organizations.

MR. DRURY'S POSITION.

The statement of Mr. Drury before the house judiciary committee included a suggestion of sale of wines at wineries in five gallon lots and manufacture of beer in the homes under government permits he proposed as needed "safety valves" in a prohibitory system. But as to the Canadian method he said:

"Government control is not the remedy. Effective control is indeed impossible. The Anglo Saxon temperament will not stand for the inquisition into private affairs which would be necessary to establish any effective control.

"All we have is government sale—with consumption in the home or the hotel bedroom. No longer is drink a man's vice. Women and children are exposed to it. The home is the last place in the world where liquor should be consumed.

"Crime is increasing; drunkenness is increasing; violations of liquor laws are increasing; motor accidents are increasing. Whatever the solution of the drink problem may be it is not government control."

CHARGE GARAGE MAN TOWED CAR WITHOUT ORDER

John Rody, owner of four south side garages, was arraigned in the Stockyards court yesterday charged with towing an automobile away without the owner's consent during the blizzard of March 26. Rody was arrested on the complaint of Michael Foley, 3100 West 63d street, who found his automobile in Rody's garage at 59 East Marquette road, after it had disappeared from its parking place in front of 3114 West 61st street, where he is employed as a janitor.

Rody told Judge Max Luster that one of his employés probably removed the car by mistake during the rush of business caused by the storm. The case was continued, however, until Monday at the request of Assistant State's Attorney William R. Crow, who said that he and the Chicago Motor club were investigating the affair to learn whether other automobile owners had had the same experience as Foley during the storm.

ONE KILLED, 3 BADLY HURT IN CROSSING CRASH

Electric Train Crushes Workers' Auto.

One man was killed and three others seriously injured yesterday when their automobile was struck by a Chicago, South Shore and South Bend electric train at 135th street and Brainard avenue. The automobile was carried 125 feet along the tracks.

The dead man was Nicholas Appel, 105 West 117th street. His companions are William Betsinger, 60 years old, 12901 Yale avenue; Joseph Podgorner, 40 years old, address unknown, and George Coyne, 12018 South State street. Betsinger and Coyne are reported in a critical condition.

Four Returning from Work.

The four men were returning from their work at the Pressed Steel Car company, where Betsinger is a foreman. The crossing is unguarded, police said. The auto was demolished. The injured men were taken to the South Chicago hospital. Ray Sanford of Hammond, Ind., motorman of the train, was not held.

Appel's death and two others raised the 1930 Cook county motor toll to 124. The victims:

James Ticerno, 36 years old, 822 North Drake avenue. Fatally injured when his automobile crashed into a park shelter house at 4530 West 22d street. His companion, Miss Thelma Cooper, 1525 Warren avenue, was slightly injured.

A jury in Superior Judge Hebel's court yesterday awarded Mrs. Clara D. Watson, 40 years old, 545 Cornelia street, damages of $40,500 in her suit against Edward Trinz, theater owner, and his wife, Mrs. Rosalie Trinz. Mrs. Watson suffered fractures in both legs when she was struck by the Trinz automobile, driven by a garage employé, April 3, 1928.

GREET CARDINAL DOUGHERTY HERE; ENDS WORLD TOUR

Delegations both from Chicago and from Philadelphia greeted Cardinal Dennis J. Dougherty yesterday as he stepped off the Santa Fé's California Limited, returning from a world tour that has occupied six months. Msgr. William D. O'Brien, president of the Extension society, headed the local group, and Dr. P. J. O.Hara of Philadelphia, father of Cardinal Dougherty's companion on the trip, the Rt. Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, led the eastern crowd of clergy and laymen. Among the latter was District Attorney John Monaghan, who caused Alphonse Capone to linger for a year in the City of Brotherly Love.

Six months ago Cardinal Dougherty and Bishop O'Hara set out for Rome, to make a report on the Philadelphia archdiocese to Pope Pius. At the request of the pontiff during their stay in Rome they arranged to continue on around the world to study conditions, especially in the orient. Cardinal Dougherty also renewed old associations by visiting Bamboango in the Philippines, where he had his first bishopric. Their conclusions will be communicated to Pope Pius in a confidential report, it was indicated. The party left at noon for Philadelphia.

Trains leaving Montreal will reach Chicago in 18 hours 15 minutes. The present schedule is 22 hours and 25 minutes. Montreal to Toronto trains will be speeded to six hours instead of 7 hours and 40 minutes. It is claimed that by doing the 334 miles in 360 minutes the service will be the fastest in the world traversing the same distance.

HUNT WOMAN AS WITNESS TO ROBBERY KILLING

With three initials for their only clew the police last night were seeking a married woman as the central witness in the murder of Joseph A. Bondi, 20 years old, who was killed by robbers on Jan. 6 in the rear of his home, 5563 Quincy street.

Eight days after the youth died his father, A. Bondi, received a letter signed by Mrs. H. E. M., who stated she had witnessed the robbery and shooting and saw the slayers flee, but did not report it to the police due to fear of possible retaliation by the robbers. The letter stated the alleged license of the fugitive's car, however.

The license was traced to James Coin, 1552 Taylor street, described as a former barkeep for "Red" Bolton, south side gangster. Coin was arrested Friday night at 63d street and Cottage Grove avenue.

PATRIOT GROUPS WILL DEDICATE FOREST WAY LINK

Speeches Announced for Friday Ceremony.

BY PAUL POTTER

Dedication ceremonies for the soldiers' section of the Forest Way will be held next Friday, national Arbor day, under the direction of the sponsors of the Cook county memorial highway, which will extend from Roosevelt road south to 31st street, just east of the United States Veterans' hospital.

Announcement of the program, which will start at 2:30 p. m., were made at the offices of the forest preserve commissioners yesterday. Invitations sent to all American Legion posts, and many other groups by A. J. Cermak, head of the county board, and Brig. Gen. Abel Davis, chairman of the advisory committee recommending the Forest Way project, brought enthusiastic letters of approval for the dedication on April 11.

Speakers Are Announced.

Speakers at the ceremony announced by the committee include Gen. Davis, Col. R. R. McCormick, Joseph Novotny, Cook county Legion commander, and Mr. Cermak. A drum corps and a high school band will supply music. Cassmer Imbur, champion bugler of Illinois, and member of the Elevated Legion post, will sound "taps."

Announcements have been circulated by officers of all veterans', patriotic or civic groups interested in the planting of the first tree in the Forest Way, the committee in charge stated yesterday. This committee is headed by George M. Kellogg Jr., past commander of the American Legion in Cook county and chairman of the memorials committee. Other members are William A. Schlupp, commander of the Fifth district, American Legion; Capt. James C. Russell; Mrs. Marie Southers, president of the Cook county Legion auxiliary, and Dr. Hugh Scott, chief of staff of Edward Hines Jr. hospital.

On Dedicatory Committee.

The dedicatory committee includes the following Legion members: James F. Ringley, state memorials chairman; Jack Poorman, senior vice commander, ranking Cook county officer; Edward A. Hayes, Illinois department commander; Frank Flannery, Charles Roth, Edward Clamage, William Wilson, and J. C. Russell, past county commanders; Col. A. A. Sprague, Brig. Gen. Frank Schwengel, Lawrence F. McGann Jr., Col. Sam Lawton, 122d F. A.; Lawrence J. Fevlon, vice commander in Cook county council; and Robert Casey, Dr. Charles Schott, George Middleton Jr., William O'Connell, William Schlupp, Joseph de la Coin, Miles Barry, and C. E. Paxton, district commanders.

Other patriotic groups to be represented at the dedication include: Disabled American Veterans, who will present the colors; Grand Army of the Republic, Sons and Daughters of American Revolution, Sons of Union Veterans, Gold Star Mothers and Fathers, Women's Relief corps, Combat Medalmen's association, Sydney T. Holsman, commander; Chicago council, Boy Scouts of America; A. R. Carpenter, educational director; Girl Scouts; Veterans of Foreign Wars, United Spanish War Veterans, Daughters of 1812, Daughters of Union Veterans, Military Intelligence association, Daughters of American Colonists, the Forty and Eight, including C. E. Taylor, chef de gare; Frank Kee, R. P. O'Reilly, and others.

Invite Patriotic Groups.

"Patriotic bodies, other groups such as women's clubs, garden clubs interested in promoting tree planting, or churches, hospitals, school classes, or individuals, are invited to take part in the fostering of this model highway that shall become noted over the world for its beauty," the committee's announcement says.

Forest preserve crews were busy last week clearing away buildings and preparing to plow along the area to be planted to trees next week, according to Charles Sauers, superintendent of the forest preserves. Dr. Scott has indicated that the fence along the west side of the forest way will be set back and trees planted in harmony with the entire plan. He said yesterday that he and his staff were eager to assist in the creation of the memorial highway, and that it would fit into present landscaping plans for the hospital grounds.

Some trees will be planted this spring after Friday's ceremonies, county officials announced yesterday. Planting of trees will continue until late fall between Roosevelt road and 22d street on 1st avenue.

FROM SARAJEVO, JUGO-SLAVIA

Sarajevo is widely known as the cradle of the world war. It was there that Gavrilo Princip, 19 year old student fanatic, on June 28, 1914, directed a well aimed bullet at Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the throne of the Hapsburgs. Austria made demands on Serbia for a hand in the murder trial; the demands resulted in international complications and the war. Thus another shot was heard around the world.

The city is beautifully situated on both sides of the Milyatska river, 122 miles southwest of Belgrade. Some of its 60,000 people are as colorful as an American stage representation of an oriental scene; others are as dull as a Chicago paving crew. Its modern business district is only a few blocks from its Turkish bazaar.

Jugo-Slavia is one of the outgrowths of the war.

2 GIRLS GIVEN PRISON TERMS FOR AIDING REDS

Cadiz, O., April 5.—(AP)—Betty Gannetti of Cleveland and Zorki Yoki of Yorksville, young women communist organizers, were sentenced to Marysville reformatory today for distributing anti-government literature at a Martins Ferry demonstration last fall.

Miss Gannetti was given a term of 5 to 10 years and fined $2,000. Miss Yoki was sentenced to from one to five years.

In meting out the sentences Common Pleas Judge Canaga upheld the constitutionality of the criminal syndicalism law under which the women were convicted last Monday.

Miss Gannetti told the judge she did not advocate use of force, but added, "the time is coming when workers will have to use force unless the capitalistic class turns over its wealth."

Miss Yoki made no statement.

Notice of an appeal was filed.

Pasadena, Calif., Feb. 7—A stock Erskine climbed Lake Street Hill in Pasadena with nine passengers, weighing 1392 pounds. Later, at Gillette Hill, Alhambra, Calif., this Erskine carried two passengers and driver over the top. This hill has a 48% grade.

Long Beach, Calif., Feb. 6—Erskine carried driver and four passengers up Shell Hill, recognized as the hardest climb in Long Beach vicinity—24% grade. Then successfully climbed up 200-foot embankment over soft earth—35% grade.

COSGRAVE VIEWS DE VALERA ROUT AS IRISH BOON

Nation Is Back of British Treaty, He Says.

BY HUGH CURRAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, April 5.—William T. Cosgrave has received a flood of telegrams and letters of congratulation on his reelection as president of the council of the Irish Free State from all parts of the world, chiefly from America and Australia. When interviewed this morning he appeared in the best of health after a gruelling week of worry and anxiety. President Cosgrave said he was annoyed at the time which was wasted in holding the election, and declared that the work which has already been done by the dail may have to be done over again. This, he explained, is because a change in the government carries certain technicalities, and a change of government has occurred, even though the same president and cabinet are again in office.

Mr. Cosgrave would not consider the time altogether wasted, he said, if the debates had disclosed any advance in the political education of the parties.

One of the features of the debates, he said, was the opposition of the dail towards Eamonn de Valera, leader of the Fianna Fail. There was no sign of weakness, Mr. Cosgrave added, and showed clearly where De Valera stands.

Dail Stands Behind Treaty.

"One significant fact which emerged from this crisis," said Mr. Cosgrave, "was the determination of the dail to stand firmly by the treaty of allegiance with Great Britain. There are many points of agreement and disagreement between the political groups in the dail. The majority which brought down the government last week included members of three parties, the Independents, Labor and the Fianna Fail.

Under normal conditions that combination should have framed an alternative administration. On reflection, the Independents and Laborites were not prepared to take the step, which would endanger the treaty, and consequently the nomination of Mr. De Valera was rejected by a majority of 19. No members of any party save his own voted for him."

When asked whether signs were not available that the Fianna Fail is revising its attitude towards the treaty, President Cosgrave said he possessed a statement by one of the leading members of the Fianna Fail which indicated a more friendly disposition towards Great Britain.

Sees Hostility Decreasing.

This statement also showed that hostility toward the treaty may be subject to friendly adjustment, he said, stating that this attitude has unquestionably arisen from the fact that the Fianna Fail is becoming convinced that the people are overwhelmingly against scrapping the treaty and a renewal of trouble with Great Britain.

The dail, however, could not have failed to be impressed by the bellicose and injudicious utterances of Mr. De Valera in America in reference to England, Mr. Cosgrave declared. Mr. De Valera is reported to be threatening that, if Great Britain doesn't agree to his demands, there would be another showdown, another battle of Clongarf. These statements, coming from a former leader, must outweigh the utterances of less responsible members of his party, Mr. Cosgrave said.

"I am sure," concluded President Cosgrave, "that your American readers must have been amused that the nomination of a person as chief executive took place while he was 4,000 miles from the seat of his government."

ARREST DRUG STORE ROBBER.

Five minutes after Joseph Walano had been robbed of $25 in his drug store at 69th and Peoria streets yesterday, Sergt. James O'Halloran and his detective squad arrested Lester Smith, 24 years old, at 70th and Green streets. Walano identified Smith as the man who robbed him.

NATURAL GARDEN BEAUTIES BLOOM IN STADIUM SHOW

Exhibit Is Opened by Rufus C. Dawes.

Lights were flashed upon a spectacle of sylvan and floral beauty yesterday as Rufus C. Dawes, president of the Chicago centennial of 1933, pressed a button at 2 o'clock in the Chicago Stadium, 1800 West Madison street, formally opening the Central States Garden and Flower show.

Judges had completed their work among the professional and amateur garden creations that fill the Stadium bowl and are fringed with two oval terraces lined with green and blooming plant life.

The choice for first place in the garden contest, shown by Paul L. Battey of Northbrook, is different from all other of the 26 finished major gardens, the judges agreed. Irises of rare breeding have been nestled in a lawn corner, near a life like pool all fringed with shrubbery. Natural wood fence lines the setting. Throngs surrounded the display all afternoon and evening yesterday.

Park Systems Have Exhibits.

Noncompetitive works of natural transformation have been wrought by experienced gardeners representing the south, west, and Lincoln parks and the county forest preserves. They vie with exhibits by the Lake Forest Garden club; John T. Scheepers, first prize winner at New York's international garden show recently, and the North Shore Horticultural society.

Climaxing the entire mass of natural colors in the show is the waterfalls, a cascade over aged rocks, between masses of green foliage, overlooked by a rustic bridge. From this bridge, as well as from any other point on the terraces, visitors by the thousands were able to see every garden spot in the show.

Many of Awards Made.

All prizes and awards had been placed on cut flowers, potted plants, back porch and outdoor living room settings last night. Those planning to attend the show today and next week are assured by Mrs. Frederick Fisher, president of the Garden club of Illinois, that ample parking space is available, and that they will see the winners in table decoration, shadow box, and other competitions.

Following the opening yesterday, a tea was given for the judges, with Mrs. Roy Sturtevant of Lake Forest as hostess. The show opens at 10 a. m. each day and closes at 10 p. m.

Swedish Society to Honor Bendix at Banquet April 23

The American Sons and Daughters of Sweden will honor Vincent Bendix, president of the Bendix Aviation corporation, at a testimonial banquet at the Stevens hotel on April 23. Mr. Bendix recently was decorated by King Gustav in Stockholm as commander of the Royal Order of the North Star. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has been invited to the banquet. The speakers will include C. S. Peterson, city treasurer, and Wollmar Bostrom, Swedish minister to the United States. Congressman Carl R. Chindblom will be the toastmaster.

LEAGUE SOUNDS WAR CRY AGAINST CIGARET PERIL

Called the "Most Terrible Curse of Nation."

Lady Nicotine's character was attacked in no uncertain terms yesterday by the Boys' and Girls' Anti-Cigaret league. Fifty men and women attending the annual session in the Woman's City club put the absent lady on trial for three hours. The scheduled speakers and a number of members who spoke from the floor agreed that the cigaret "is the most terrible curse that has ever threatened the life of the nation." Although prohibition was mentioned, it was made apparent that the liquor battle has been won while "an awakening is needed to the destructive havoc of cigarets, especially to the youth of our land."

The meeting began with an invocation by the Rev. Joseph B. Rogers, pastor of the La Salle Avenue Baptist church, former president of the National Anti-Cigaret league. He prayed for a curse upon "the evil narcotic."

Tells of Abstinence Oath.

Mrs. Alice Hyatt Mather, executive secretary for many years, told of the children who are taking an oath to abstain from the use of tobacco in any form until they are 21, or "for life."

"We are called upon to take charge of many cases of selling cigarets in violation of the city ordinances," Mrs. Mather said. "But we have been unsuccessful in prosecuting offending tobacco dealers. One judge deliberately set free two tobacco dealers who had been selling cigarets to pupils in a Chicago school, and he turned upon the boy who purchased the cigarets, and told him he did not believe he was telling the truth. He pronounced it a case of entrapment."

Dr. Bertha Van Hoosen, head of obstetrics at Loyola university and a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, was the next speaker.

"The year after the 18th amendment my income was doubled, and I knew I had been contributing thousands of dollars to the corner saloon and had never been allowed to go in it," she said. "These last years I wonder how much I have been contributing to the tobacco trust."

Sees Hope for Cause.

Arthur G. Taylor, chairman of the board, who presided, declared that "there is as much room for encouragement in this seemingly hopeless cause as Frances Willard and her coworkers ever had."

"We ought to educate the grown folks in America," asserted Dr. Rogers, again taking the floor. "Every time I see a fellow take one last puff at a cigaret and blow the smoke into the street car I want to write to the company about it. I think we ought to write Health Commissioner Kegel to enforce that law."

The secretary was instructed to write to Dr. Kegel.

Arthur Burrage Farwell, president of the Chicago Law and Order league, expressed gratification for the fact that children are taking the abstinence oath.

Raps Women Smokers.

"The most disgusting sight is to see a woman smoke in a restaurant," he declared, amid applause. "Cigarets are so demoralizing that they break down the morale of our youth. It's a terible proposition."

"You know all about how cigarets lead to crime," Mrs. A. Esther Canfield, a staff lecturer, reminded the audience.

George H. Shaw Seeks Colorado Senate Seat

Denver, April 5.—(AP)—George Hamlin Shaw, former Colorado state Republican chairman, tonight announced his candidacy for the seat of United States Senator Lawrence C. Phipps, who will retire at the completion of his present term.

HEAD IN ONE COUNTY, FEET IN ANOTHER, BUT CENSUS SOLVES TANGLE

Waterloo, Ia., April 5.—(AP)—It's the head that counts in figuring the census; the feet are immaterial.

A census enumerator, visiting a farm which straddles the Black Hawk and Benton county line, learned that the farmer's bed is so placed that he sleeps in both counties.

His head rests on a pillow in Black Hawk, but his feet project into Benton county. The enumerator, puzzled, thumbed through his rule book until he read that heads shall be counted in their usual place of abode.

The farmer therefore was listed as a Blackhawk county resident.

If Women Won't Tell.

Columbus, O., April 5.—(AP)—Census enumerators here have solved the problem of determining milady's age.

If she is reticent, the census taker looks her over, guesses her age, then adds twenty years. He then announces his conclusions.

They report it works almost every time.

Census Is Fatal.

Lowville, N. Y., April 5.—(AP)—Albert P. Davis, 41, restaurant proprietor here, took nearly a half hour to answer questions of a federal census enumerator then walked into a bedroom and committed suicide by slashing his throat. He will be listed in the census as alive.

Kills Self to Avoid Revealing Age.

Allentown, Pa., April 5.—[U. P.]—A middle aged spinster, Erma Schank, committed suicide today because she feared census enumerators would discover that she falsified her age on naturalization papers 20 years ago.

Census Takers Win Strike.

Dodge City, Kas., April 5.—(AP)—Three striking Greeley county census enumerators came to terms with Uncle Sam today upon receiving an increase in pay, but a fourth remained a holdout.

H. F. Millikan, district supervisor, announced that the men who returned would be given 10 cents for each person listed and $1 for each farm. They had been offered 10 cents and 47 cents.

Bert Houghlan refused to accept 5 cents a head for the towns of Horace and Tribune. The towns contain approximately 300 persons and are three miles apart.

Baby Gets Real Name.

Kansas City, Kas., April 5.—(AP)—The question "what shall we name the baby?" was settled for one family today by a census enumerator.

In naming the members of the family, the head of the house wound up by saying, "and baby."

The census taker urged a name for baby and suggested "Alice." This was adopted, ending a family disagreement of three weeks duration.

COURT UPSETS STERILIZATION IN NEBRASKA

Beatrice, Neb., April 5.—(AP)—District Judge F. W. Messmore late today held unconstitutional that part of the Nebraska sterilization law requiring the sterilization of insane patients and habitual criminals.

The judge sustained that part of the law requiring sterilization of the feeble-minded. He held that insanity differs from feeble-mindedness in that insane persons are sometimes cured. He also held that the law is too broad to be constitutional where habitual criminals are concerned.

BEGINS INQUIRY INTO LOOP FIRE AND EXPLOSION

Marshal, Firemen Hurt in Spectacular Blaze.

Fire Attorney Scott M. Hogan yesterday began an investigation into the spectacular fire and explosion which early Saturday morning swept through the five story building at 124, 128, and 130 West Lake street and spread to the adjoining buildings, causing damage estimated at $300,000.

Several firemen were injured and Fire Marshal Michael Corrigan was cut by flying glass. He was given first aid treatment by fire department physicians and continued to direct the companies of firemen who had responded to a 4-11 alarm. Fifteen firemen were trapped when flames prevented their escape from the roof. Their comrades raised ladders and rescued them.

Cars, "L" Trains Rerouted.

Surface lines cars and elevated trains were rerouted and their schedules were delayed for more than two hours. Lines of hose were hauled up to the elevated tracks and streams of water were turned into the second and third story windows of the building in the porton occupied by the Western Radio Manufacturing company.

The crew of the watch tower and firemen on adjoining buildings directed streams of water on to the roofs of the burning buildings. A search through the buildings after the flames were extinguished revealed nothing which should have caused the explosion, Marshal Corrigan said.

Fire in Brush Factory.

A crowd of several thousand persons gathered to watch the flames, which could be seen for miles. For nearly an hour the fire threatened the Hotal Sherman garage at 132 West Lake street.

Another early Saturday morning fire occurred at the Nifty Brush company at 314 Institute place. The damage was estimated at $20,000. Firemen summoned by a 3-11 alarm confined the flames to the basement of the building. A supply of celluloid was destroyed by the blaze.

Boy Struck by Bullet Fired at Two Robbers

The police yesterday solved the mystery of the shooting of Edward Cibulski, 12 years old, 4918 South Crawford avenue, who was struck in the knee by a bullet while playing in the dining room of his home on Friday night. The police discovered that at the time when the boy was shot, John Collari, a watchman for the McKeown company, 5235 South Keeler avenue, fired six shots at two bandits. One of the bullets crashed through a window of the Cibulski home, a half mile away.

FATHER-IN-LAW KILLS PEORIA MAN.

Peoria, Ill., April 5.—[Special.]—A quarrel over an evening meal resulted in the slaying of Jack Galloway, 32, by his father-in-law, George Potter, 61, here this evening.

HUNT FIREBUG IN FATAL BROOKLYN TENEMENT BLAZE

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—Police were making a sweeping search tonight for a pyromaniac believed to be responsible for fifteen fires in the East New York and Brownsville sections of Brooklyn during the last six weeks, and whose latest instance of incendiarism caused the death of three persons and serious injury to three others when they were trapped in a blazing tenement house, Brooklyn, early today.

The dead are: Mrs. Tessie Antignani, 36 years old, and her daughters, Florence, 16, and Marie, 14.

The woman's husband, Vincent, and two other children, Carmine, 10, and Lillian, 8, are in United hospital suffering from burns and smoke asphyxiation. Their condition is serious.

Mrs. Antignani lost her life when she went to rouse Florence and Marie, sleeping in a rear room of their apartment on the top floor. Her husband and the two children were rescued from a window ledge by firemen.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

PEACE BASED ON STRENGTH URGED ON "ARMY DAY"

Nation's Leaders Join in Ceremonies.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 5.—[Special.]—Lasting peace can only be brought about through a proper preparedness for national defense, Rear Admiral T. J. Cowie, retired, commander in chief of the Military Order of the World War, asserted here today in the principal address delivered at Army day exercises in the national capital. Similar sentiments were expressed by spokesmen for the Military Order of the World War at similar exercises held in various sections of the United States.

The exercises marked the second observance of Army day. The move to have one day set aside each year, at which efforts would be made to interest the public in the benefits of adequate preparedness on land was initiated by the Military Order of the World War, an organization of officers who served in the war.

Hoover Pays Tribute to Dead.

High tribute to the men who fell in defense of the nation during the war was paid by President Hoover in a letter read at today's Army day exercises. Other communications commending the idea of holding an annual Army day were sent to Rear Admiral Cowie by Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, Acting Secretary of the Navy Ernest Lee Jahncke and Gen. Charles P. Summerall, army chief of staff. All were read at the exercises.

"The great citizen components of the army of the United States constitutes an organized expression of patriotic citizenship," the President wrote. "On Army day I wish to express the gratitude of the nation to those who exposed their lives to the dangers of the battlefield and those who fell in defense of national ideals."

"By sponsorship of such an annual event," Secretary Hurley said, "the Military Order of the World War has undertaken to establish a practice, which, in my opinion, should prove of permanent benefit to our national defense."

Jahncke Praises Idea.

"Navy day has undoubtedly brought the naval services much closer to the people," Mr. Jahncke said, "and I feel sure that the army will experience the same benefits from Army day."

Gen. Summerall thanked the military order in his letter for their activities in behalf of national defense.

"To focus attention on the military service by giving it one day out of its busy 365 for its very own is to confer a dual benefit," he said. "On the one hand, a direct incentive to higher accomplishment is furnished to the army, while on the other our fellow citizens in civil life are stimulated to a fuller realization of the services rendered them in peace and in war."

In his address Rear Admiral Cowie emphasized that the "military and naval forces of the United States stand for and want everlasting peace.

"But let the fact be driven home," he declared, "that this can be brought about in only one way, and this is through a proper preparedness for national defense. True preparedness will effectively prevent any nation from making war on us.

"Real preparedness is real economy—not only from a monetary standpoint but from the higher standpoint of saving our citizens from the bloodshed, the grief, the suffering and the hardships that must inevitably accompany every war."

10,000 Parade in New York.

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—More than 10,000 soldiers, sailors, marines, veterans and school children marched up 5th avenue today in the third annual celebration of Army day to commemorate the entrance of the United States into the world war thirteen years ago tomorrow.

At the head of the procession rode Maj. Gen. Hanson E. Ely, commander of the Second corps area at Governor's island.

One hour and forty minutes after Gen. Ely pranced by, at the very end of the parade two huge motorbuses rumbled past, with lettered bunting on their sides announcing that "preparedness is the best insurance against war." In them rode the disabled veterans of the last war from Brooklyn Naval hospital and the Kingsbridge Veterans' hospital.

Behind them trudged a phalanx of gray haired black garbed women each bearing proudly aloft a tiny pennant with a gold star on a field of blue. They were the mothers whose sons had not returned to march in the triumphal victory parade.

At the last came the veterans of other nations, bearing the Union Jack of Great Britain, the tricolor of France and the red white and green flag of Italy.

CHIMNEYS BELCH WASTED GOLD, IS ANTI-SOOT PLEA

Engineer Tells Economy of Smokeless Plant.

The smoke pall over Chicago was called "criminal waste of fuel and industrial efficiency yesterday by Joseph Harrington, former administrative engineer for the United States fuel administration board for Illinois. Mr. Harrington spoke at the discussion hour at the Hamilton club and was followed by Health Commissioner Kegel, who told of the detrimental effects of smoke on human health and on plant life.

Mr. Harrington told of a double loss suffered by coal consumers in the smoke columns that roll up from chimneys. The cream of the fuel, he said, escapes in the smoke, while the deposits of soot on the heating surface of a boiler cause a second loss.

Tells of Savings.

"One half of the resistance that the authorities encounter can be swept away," said Mr. Harrington, "if the coal used could be made to realize the saving in smokeless combustion of fuel.

"A minimum saving of 25 per cent can be made in the consumption of coal in Chicago through smoke elimination by complete combustion. Chicago's coal bill is approximately $210,000,000 a year and if only one-tenth of that were saved instead of the estimated 25 per cent, it would mean $21,000,000 to the credit of the consumers.

"If Chicago is to maintain its lead among world cities and present a clean appearance for the World's Fair, it must clean up the atmosphere."

Violet Rays Cut Off.

The beneficial effect of ultra violet rays on health was mentioned by Dr. Kegel and a compilation of figures was produced by him to show how smoke in Chicago cuts off the supply of the rays. Experiments conducted by the health department, he said, showed that along the loop streets there is sixty and seventy per cent reduction from the quantity of rays at the sand dunes.

A measurement of the rays was made Friday by the health department at the top of the Foreman Bank building. The rays measured 72.7 per cent of a possible 100 per cent of rays. On the roof of the city hall the amount had decreased to 50.4 per cent, according to Dr. Kegel, and at the street level had diminished to 43.4 per cent.

TRAPPER, 16, DIES FROM WOUNDS AS AID REACHES HIM

SHARBOT LAKE, Ont., April 5.—(AP)—A grim story of a 16 year old trapper's death in the lonely woods of the northland was brought here today from Black lake. The boy, Harold Conboy, had started out early one morning last week to inspect his trap line. He was ready to start on the long trek home when he picked up his shotgun by the barrel and it was discharged.

The slugs shattered his thigh and his right hand. With the aid of two sticks he dragged himself toward his cabin. His feet and hands froze and finally he could move no further. He had covered barely 300 yards. His father, John Conboy, alarmed at the boy's long absence, had started out with his other son, Leslie, and a neighbor, Edgar Johnston, to search for him.

It was night by then. They fired shots and shouted. There was no answer. Then they picked up Harold's trail and presently he answered their call. They found him stretched out on the ground, helpless. They carried him across the broken country, to where a sleigh could reach them, and then Johnston and Leslie Conboy went for help. When they came back Harold, lying in his father's arms, was dead.

AUSTRIA PASSES ANTI-TERROR LAW; FEAR RIOTS TODAY

Measure Is Blow to Socialist Rule.

BY WILLIAM SHIRER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, April 5.—The so-called "anti-terror" law, wiping out closed shops, upon which Austrian socialism has leaned so heavily of late years, was passed by parliament today by a vote of 80 to 69 and already the country is up in arms about it.

The bill was shoved through parliament by a coalition of the Christian Socialists, Pan-Germans, and Agrarians.

Order Protests Today.

The passage of the law resulted in a call for angry demonstrations by both the Socialists and Conservatives in the streets of Vienna tomorrow.

Two parades of the rival parties were originally planned for tomorrow to protest against taxes, the Conservatives objecting to the stiff taxes imposed on them by the Socialists of the city government and the Marxists complaining of the burden of the state taxes, most of which are paid in Vienna, leaving the country districts practically tax free.

But with the passage of the law the Socialists decided to turn their demonstration tomorrow into a mass protest against such action by the bourgeoise. The latter decided to parade their strength against that of the Socialists.

Order Police to Keep Peace.

All police have been mobilized for tomorrow to keep the two parades from clashing. The Conservatives will parade in the inner ring and the Socialists in the outer ring, with 5,000 police between them.

Parliament adjourned today after a long list of victories over Socialism, including constitutional reforms which have abolished many rights the Marxists grabbed for themselves when they ruled Austria immediately after the war.

APPEALS COURT TO HEAR PLEA OF VIRGIL LITZINGER

The appeal of Virgil Litzinger and John (Red) Flannery, now serving 25 year terms in Leavenworth prison for complicity in the $133,000 Evergreen Park mail robbery in February, 1928, will be heard during the April session of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, which begins Tuesday.

Litzinger and Flannery were tried jointly. Five others in the case now serving terms are Charles (Limpy) Cleaver, Frank Meccia, William Donovan, Lawrence O'Brien and Charles S. Wharton, attorney and former congressman.

Louis Padersonik and Willie Jackson, also implicated in the robbery, were killed in a gang quarrel. Litzinger was charged with murder in connection with the killing of Clarence Glynn in a soft drink parlor at 2801 West 38th street, in February, 1926, but was acquitted.

CHEVROLET

..it's wise to choose a SIX!

There is one sure way to get greater value in a low-priced car today—choose a Six!

This greater value is instantly obvious when you drive a Chevrolet Six. You notice first of all its greater smoothness. Because of its modern six-cylinder design, the Chevrolet motor delivers its power smoothly and quietly. In every gear and at every speed, there is a refreshing freedom from all the annoyances that are caused by vibration. There is no tremor in the steering wheel—no rattle in the floor boards—no rumble or drumming in the body.

In addition to the finer performance of its six-cylinder motor, Chevrolet gives you truly remarkable economy.

Its six-cylinder smoothness saves the entire car—engine, chassis and body—from the strain and wear of vibration. This, of course, lowers the cost of maintenance and assures a longer-lasting, longer-satisfying automobile.

From the standpoint of operating expense, Chevrolet is equally economical. In a recent economy test of more than 40 cars, a six-cylinder Chevrolet Coach won first place—averaging better than 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline—in a 200-mile run from sea level to an elevation of 6000 feet. No automobile surpasses Chevrolet in oil economy. No car shows a lower expense for tires. And Chevrolet service, which is available from more than 10,000 authorized Chevrolet service stations, is remarkably economical. In fact, Chevrolet's flat-rate charges—including both parts and labor—are the lowest in the automotive industry on many service and repair operations.

Because of its modern engineering, Chevrolet also assures a high re-sale value—for its entire design is just as advanced as its six-cylinder valve-in-head engine.

Chevrolet gives you fully-enclosed, weather-proof, 4-wheel brakes—considered by many engineers the finest brakes available on any automobile today. It gives you a modern fuel system—with the gasoline tank mounted in the rear outside the body. It gives you four long semi-elliptic springs, mounted lengthwise, in the direction of car travel. It gives you beautiful Fisher bodies built of combination hardwood-and-steel. It gives you a heavy, rigidly-braced channel-steel frame, which supports the body throughout its entire length. It gives you a full ball bearing steering mechanism, an adjustable driver's seat, a Fisher VV non-glare windshield, and tilting beam headlights, operated by a foot-controlled button.

Before you decide on any car in the low-price field, see and drive the Chevrolet Six. Learn for yourself the finer performance of its six-cylinder valve-in-head motor. Note how much more flexible it is in traffic, how easily it accelerates, how smooth and quiet it is. Check Chevrolet's low prices—model for model—against any other car in the low-price field.

The more thoroughly you investigate, the more certain you are to conclude that it's wise to choose a Six—for value, for performance . . . and for economical transportation!

ATHENS WINS 2D U. S. CAGE TITLE IN ROW

HOLLYWOOD TROUNCES CUBS, 12-6; SOX LOSE, 14-6

STARS POUND 3 BRUIN HURLERS FOR 17 BLOWS

Score Five Runs on Teachout in 8th.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., April 5.—There seems to be no end to the bad pitching Joe McCarthy has at his command. He came up with Pat Malone, Malcom Moss, and Bud Teachout, but the trio was so far out of tune that the champions of the National league were forced to accept a sound spanking in the first of a two game series with the Hollywood Stars. The score was 12 to 6.

Just before going on the field the Cubs learned that they would have to go along for a few more days at least without the steady services of their field captain, Charley Grimm. Because of a steady sharp pain in his right side, Grimm visited an X-ray expert at noon and purchased a $10 negative that showed he was carrying a cracked rib. This sounds serious, but Grimm will resume play at Kansas City next Thursday afternoon unless McCarthy should elect to play safe by resting him until the season opens.

Bump or Sneeze Did It.

Grimm's mishap is the result of a bump or a healthy sneeze. In the game with the Pirates last Sunday his hip collided with a rail in front of the dugout. It didn't bother him at the time, but the next day he complained of lumbago which hits him periodically. A few days later he sneezed and the explosion brought on a knifelike pain in his side. This convinced him something had gone wrong with a rib, so he resorted to the X-ray to prove his contention. It is not a real break, but merely a crack of an old fracture. He worked out at first this afternoon without being hampered by the injury.

Malone started the pitching job today and the intention was to employ him for nine rounds, but the job was beyond him. In five innings he was victimized to the extent of four runs and nine hits. During this time the Cubs were able to keep the score tied and when Cuyler notched a homer in the seventh it looked as if the margin might be enough to earn the decision.

Stars Score Five.

The one run edge, however, was far from enough for Moss, the southpaw. He got by handily in the sixth, but in the seventh various things, bad fielding included, let the Stars nick the plate three times. Then to make the trimming decisive Teachout stepped into the picture in the eighth and gave such a painful exhibition that five more scored before he could retire the side.

Another thing wrong with the Cubs was their attack. They did fairly well in the first inning, but thereafter displayed a marked fondness for hitting into double plays. Four of these were chalked against them in four successive innings, after which they did not do enough hitting to make double plays possible. In the last four rounds they were guilty of only two safe blows, one being Cuyler's home run.

Three runs began to form in the first inning for the Cubs when English led off with a double. Blair flied out, but Cuyler drew life on a pitched ball that landed against his ribs. Wilson rammed a single to right, sending English home and Cuyler to third. Stephenson fanned for the first time in nearly a week. Then the bases became crowded on a pass to Tolson and two of the waiting runners were driven over the plate when Schulte singled to center.

Hollywood Hits Malone.

The Stars didn't have much trouble thumping Malone in the home half of the first, thereby creating a 3 to 3 tie. It started with Lee's single through short. Gazella doubled to right, Lee stopping at third. Lee scored on Carlyle's sacrifice fly, but Gazella remained at second. Rumler singled to left and Gazella halted at third, but continued to the plate when Stephenson fumbled. Rumler raced to third on a single by Heath and scored the third run of the inning while Heath was being thrown out.

McCarthy's men had the ingredients for a respectable rally in the third, but cooked up only one run. Cuyler beat out an infield hit and moved to second while Wilson was being retired on a drive that caromed off the pitcher right into the hands of the first baseman. Cuyler tallied on a hit by Stephenson. Tolson also singled, but a pass to Schulte loaded the corners, but with this opportunity in front of him Bell bounced to the shortstop for a double play.

The Hollywood Actors remained in the lead only until the fourth, when they picked up a run for another tie, this one at 4 and 4. The run started on English's fumble of Bassler's grounder at the start of the inning. Bell threw out Wetzel, whereupon Lee singled off Malone's glove, Bassler scoring third. He crossed the plate on Gazella's infield out.

Kiki Hits Homer.

Cuyler's homer permitted the National league champions to move out in front for a few minutes in the seventh. The wallop was slightly tainted

Ohio College Leaders Rap Sport System

Columbus, O., April 5.—[U. P.]—An upheaval against intercollegiate athletics in their present form occurred here today when college presidents and professors took a decisive stand for drastic changes in the present system of college sports.

Attending the annual meeting of the Ohio College association in connection with the Ohio Educational conference, the educators flayed the present system as a "disgrace" and hurled flagrant charges of professionalism against all schools, including their own.

To alter the situation, they proposed a resolution which provided:

1. That varsity teams be composed only of seniors.
2. That a system of intramural athletics be installed for undergraduates.
3. That athletics be completely controlled by college administrations "and not by alumni or townsfolk."

"American students are getting tired of furnishing a Roman holiday so many times each fall for a great many people who buy their tickets from scalpers and attend games with flasks on their hips," declared President A. H. Upham of Miami university. "We must separate intercollegiate competition from the idea of a spectacle for public purposes."

"Many a time I have wished that the whole system of intercollegiate athletics would be wiped off the map," President J. K. Montgomery of Muskingum college reiterated.

Laufer Wins Individual Swim Title

Walter Laufer of the Lake Shore Athletic club won the 150 yard back stroke last night in the final event of the National A. A. U. swimming championships. The victory gave him 16 points and the individual title. Buster Crabbe of Honolulu, with 15 points, was second.

Laufer's points pulled his club into second place in the team standings. Holloywood A. C. won team honors with 21 points, two more than the Lake Shore A. C. During the four days of the tournament Laufer won the 100 yard free style, the 150 yard back stroke, and finished second in each of the 300 yard individual medley relay and 220 yard free style.

Crabbe Wins Three Events.

Crabbe scored three firsts, winning the 500 yard free style, the 300 yard individual medley, and the 200 yard free style.

Laufer's victory last night was at the expense of Frank Walton, Hollywood Athletic club. The coast star led by two yards with 75 feet to swim when Laufer pulled up with a splendid burst of speed and beat his rival by a foot.

Crabbe's third title was won last night in the 500 yard free style. Clapp of Stanford was second and Bud Shields of Utah State was third. Crabbe's time of 5 minutes 40 4-5 seconds tied the national record held by Walter Spence.

Isabelle Smith Victor.

Isabelle Smith was the winner in the 500 yard free style women's senior Central A. A. U. championship. Dagny Van Maarth was second and Regina Gildea was third. All swam for the Illinois Women's Athletic club.

Schurz won the 200 yard relay for Cook county high schools with Senn second and Englewood third. In the other high school event, Horn of La Grange won the 100 yard breast stroke. De Graff of Tilden was second and Stoler, Englewood, was third. The time of one minute 11 seconds lacked one 4-5 seconds of tying the record.

GLICK INJURED; FLOWERS SIGNED FOR TUT BATTLE

Milwaukee, Wis., April 5.—[Special.]—Joe Glick, Williamsburg welterweight, who was scheduled to fight Kid Tut of Milwaukee at the Auditorium next Friday night, today wired Promoter Andrews to the effect that in his bout last night with Jack Berg he has suffered cuts above the eyes sufficiently serious to delay his visit here.

Andrews announced that he has secured Bruce Flowers, Negro fighter of New Rochelle, N. Y., to fight in Glick's place.

In the ten round semi-windup will be Mickey O'Neill, the Marquette university student, and Spug Meyers, Pocatello, Idaho. Eddie Black will meet Frank Musha; Vince Rockne will fight Joe Kubiak or Tony Mandell, and Leo Spiegel and Frank Lamping will complete the preliminary schedule.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Little Rock, Ark., April 5.—Admirers of Donie Bush say that he is possessed of a heart of gold, but, what doth it availeth a baseball manager to have a heart of gold? For instance, take today's game with the Little Rock Travelers, in which the Sox submitted to the worst trimming of the year, by a score of 14 to 6. The whole thing was traceable to Donie's heart of gold.

It so happens that this is the home town of Grady Adkins, who worked and worked well for the Sox season before last. In fact, Grady worked so hard that he killed his arm. This was apparent last season and has been doubly obvious this spring. Grady is through, is the consensus, but he has been carried, apparently, while efforts were being made to find a spot for him to light.

Popular Little Rock Butcher.

Grady and his fine little family are well thought of in Little Rock. During the winter Grady is one of the city's most popular butchers. He is a square shooter from the word go—never has been caught weighing his hand along with a half dozen pork chops nor detected mixing corn meal in his sausages. Honest folks admire a butcher like that.

[redacted] looked like the other Chicago players were going to enter into the spirit of Grady's little home town fling, for Hunnefield singled and came home on Cissell's homer. But that initial thrill was all. The rest of the day was sad for Grady. And it wasn't all Grady's fault, as you shall see.

Adkins Gets Reception.

Koster walked, but Redfern flied to Reynolds and Grady threw out Taitt in the Travelers' first inning before the scoring started. Rose then got a flukey triple, which scored Koster, and came in when Hunnefield made the first of his two errors.

Kamm made a homer in the second inning, but the lead didn't last long. In their second the Travelers behaved as follows:

Concannon popped to Cissell and Klinger singled to left. Eddleman flied to Blackerby. Koster singled to center, putting Klinger on third. Redfern singled to right, scoring Klinger, and McNamara, put on to run for Koster, went to third. Taitt singled to center, scoring McNamara, and while Reynolds kicked the ball around Redfern scored and Taitt raced to third. Cissell threw out Rose.

More Sorrow in Third.

What was lacking in the process of spoiling Adkins' big day, was supplied in the third inning. Strohm flied to Reynolds, but McDaniel got a homer inside the park. Concannon popped to Cissell, but Klinger got the first of his two homers inside the park. Eddleman rolled out to Clancy, and Grady was through for the day.

McKain went in to pitch the fourth and retired the side in order, but in the fifth he got into the spirit of Adkins' day, with the assistance of Kamm, who continues to look bad at intervals. Rose popped to Kamm and Strohm flied to Blackerby. Then McDaniel singled to right and Kamm took a lusty kick at Concannon's grounder. This was the spot for Klinger's second homer, which scored McDaniels and Concannon ahead of him.

The Travelers scored three more runs in the sixth although their only hit was an infield scratch off McKain's glove.

Barnabe Holds Sox in Check.

The Travelers made their fourteenth run in the seventh on two singles and a sacrifice fly. Charles Barnabe, who spent two years trying to win a game from the Sox in the American league, shut out the Sox in the sixth, seventh, and eighth innings, but got generous in the ninth and made them a present of a pair of runs.

Shires was out of today's game with a sore arm and Carneys Jolley went down to his birthplace, Wesson, Ark.

THEY TAKE THE TITLE BACK TO TEXAS

The basketball squad of Athens, Tex., which won the national interscholastic title for the second consecutive year by defeating Jena, La., last night in the finals of the tournament at Bartlett gymnasium. Ben Tompkins, Herbert Reynolds, Fred Tompkins, Dana Henderson, Dan Adair, Lois Gregg, Coach Jimmy Kitts, and Jimmy Kitts Jr.

A Jena player looks for an opening in the Corinth defense during the semi-finals yesterday afternoon. By a whirlwind finish Jena pulled the game out of the fire and won, 20 to 15, thereby earning the right to battle Athens for the championship.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

The lanky Hornets of Athens, Tex., successfully defended the national interscholastic basketball championship at the University of Chicago last night. They defeated Jena, La., in the final, 22 to 16, the more impressively because the smaller lads from the land of cotton gave all they had in an effort to turn back the Texans.

No team in the twelve years' history of the tournament had reached the final game two times.

That was the result of the championship, which may be the last, but immediately after the pistol shot that ended the game and the tournament Athletic Director A. A. Stagg fired the opening gun of a battle against the forces which are attempting to make such tournaments impossible. Standing in the circle of spectators, backed by the table of gold and silver trophies, he made the direct charge that jealousy was the real reason why enemies of the tournament were attempting to kill it.

"Every coach, every spectator and every player who has participated in these twelve tournaments," the veteran coach began, "would say that these tournaments are a good thing. But good things often have their enemies and this tournament has its enemies.

Stagg Charges Jealousy.

"It started with jealousy without question at all," Stagg added, throwing down the gauntlet to the National Federation of State High School Athletic associations. This association was behind the order issued by the North Central Collegiate association to bar any university promoting national interscholastic tournaments.

"I don't know whether we will hold another tournament or not. If I have the say, we would hold these tournaments and keep on holding them."

"If you have the same feeling about it, let it be known." The indications were that Stagg would welcome an expression of public opinion directed to the heads of the university.

Athens Wins Easily.

That is a battle yet to be fought between grown men over jurisdiction of prep school athletics. On that same floor of Bartlett gym yesterday half a dozen great battles were fought between the youngsters themselves.

Athens moved into its championship easily. It was undoubtedly the greatest team in the tournament and veteran coaches and players who have watched these meets say that as a team it is the greatest to compete in twelve years. Certainly no team has compared to it in the last five years.

Five regulars more than six feet tall, five subs equally as tall and only slightly less skilfull at ball handling. Their bullet-like passes pitches rather—for they handle a basketball like a baseball—short on the length of the floor, were a marvel to players and spectators alike. Ben Tompkins, in particular, passes like Babby Hartnett throwing to second base, tremendously fast and deadly accurate.

Reynolds Scores for Athens.

Reynolds cut under the basket and scored shortly after the period began. Wade fouled him and he counted one of his two free throws and Ben Tompkins added another point on Doughty's foul, giving Athens a four point lead. Freddy Tompkins scored another on a scramble, after an out of bounds decision. The crowd booed. Reynolds got a clean basket on a foul line shot. Henderson to Reynolds brought another basket a second later, giving Athens a lead of 16 to 6 at the end of the half.

Athens' height and defense had held Jena scoreless in the second quarter.

Johnson opened the scoring with a free throw and Doughty batted in a basket after Johnson's short shot. Ben Tompkins counted from under the hoop on a quick return pass from Brother Fred and Henderson added a basket on a hook shot, putting Athens in the lead, 20 to 9. For the last couple of minutes of the quarter neither team scored.

Crowd Cheers Jena.

Stalcup added a free throw and Floyd, who had replaced Whatley at forward for Jena, hooked in a basket. Johnson added a free throw and Stalcup another on Freddie's foul. The crowd of 3,000 was cheering Jena's rally wildly. With five minutes to go Athens was leading, 20 to 14.

Doughty tossed the ball through the hoop from under the basket on a follow of Wade's long shot and Jena was only four points behind, but Henderson scored again from under the basket to make the score 22 to 14.

Glenna Beats Edith, 1 Up, in Tourney Final

Pinehurst, N. C., April 5.—[U.P.]—America's woman golf champion—Glenna Collett, successfully defended her north and south title here today by defeating the youthful Reading, Pa., star, Miss Edith Quier, one up in 18 holes.

Her victory, however, came only after strong opposition which placed her two holes in the ruck as early as the fourth, and which later overcame her three hole lead on three successive holes.

The match was featured in unorthodox manner by an automobile wreck at the second hole. The gallery was startled to see a car on a nearby road sideswiped by a train, its wheels stripped off and tipped on its side in the gutter.

Mrs. H. P. Hotchkiss of New Haven, Conn., elderly occupant of the demolished car, escaped serious injury and when lifted from the wreckage told the gallery which had rushed to her aid:

The ebb and flow of the match is shown in their cards, where Miss Collett recorded a medal score of 77 to Miss Quire's 81. Cards:

Zephyrs Lure Golf Army to Links in Chicago District

Despite rain and cold weather, the former temperatures yesterday golfers in the Chicago district took advantage and patronized local courses in unprecedented numbers for the season inaugural. Hundreds teed off in all parts of the district to embark on initial rounds of 1930 play.

The Pickwick club played host to more than 250 early enthusiasts, thereby setting a new attendance record for its opening Saturday. Big Oaks and other public fee courses also reported a big day.

On the north, Skokie golfers were greeted with greens two months ahead of last year, and fairways permitting the maximum length of drive. Glen View members to the number of a hundred tackled the course that produced last season's champions of the North Shore league. Spring rains have not yet caused "Ole Man River" to inundate the second nine of the course.

Out south, Flossmoor and Beverly were the scenes of unusual activity for early April, with more than seventy-five members taking advantage of the weather man's good mood. Greens keepers and caretakers reported that the recent blizzard permitted bent grass, of which most of the district greens are constructed, to strengthen roots before an upward growth.

Brewers Get Red Bennett from St. Louis Browns

Mobile, Ala., April 5.—[Special.]—Outfielder Red Bennett has been turned over to the Milwaukee club by the St. Louis Browns. Bennett will report at Birmingham or Memphis.

Leland and Bracey Divide Pair of Dashes

Houston, Tex., April 5.—(AP)—The slim legs of Claude Bracey flashed today over the hot cinders of this field just ahead of Cy Leland's thundering feet in the 100 yard dash, the Dixie express falling across the tape two feet ahead of Texas Christian university's star.

Bracey of Rich institute redeemed himself somewhat by the victory, which was in the relatively slow time of 9:3, but a few minutes later Leland sailed by him in the 220 yard dash with the tape but a few yards away and finished ahead by inches.

The time was 21:1 and, like that for the 100 yard event, was not exceptionally fast. The two matches were the features of the Rice-T. C. U. dual track meet, which Rice won, 77 to 40.

Bracey was greeted with a great burst of cheering as he came tearing ahead in the first race. Twice this season, Leland had beaten him at the distance.

When they got set for the 220 each was highly nervous and it took three or four minutes to get them off. Finally they came tearing down the lanes, seesawing up and down, Leland ahead one-half second, Bracey the next. They were fighting side by side almost to the end and it looked as though Leland won because of superior stamina. It was Bracey's second defeat at 220 yards this season by Leland.

Shoots 98 Goals Out of 100; Wins Free Throw Title

Memphis, Tenn., April 5.—(AP)—Early Maxwell of Memphis won the basketball free throwing championship of the world by scoring 98 baskets out of a possible 100, it was announced tonight by Cy E. Cooley, director of the international tournament sponsored by the Memphis Commercial Appeal and the Memphis Y. M. C. A.

It was the third time Maxwell won the championship and gave him permanent possession of a trophy.

He competed with free throwers in twelve countries. The tournament was begun four months ago and closed tonight. Maxwell shot the 98 baskets, a new world's record, before 7,000 spectators at the National A. A. U. tournament in Kansas City in March. He also shot 98 out of 100 in his second and final trial here.

Ellen Baird, State Teachers' college, Memphis, won the girl's championship with 60 out of a possible 60. Last year she shot 58 out of 60 and this year's victory gives her permanent possession of a trophy.

Maxwell first won the championship in 1927 with 72 out of 75 and again last year with 75 out of 75.

Other high scorers in the senior men's division are: L. P. Doss, Norfolk, Va., 97; Keith Pound, Des Moines, Ia., 96; Champe Stokes, Aberdeen, S. D., 95; Max Everett, Des Moines, Ia., 94.

The Des Moines Y. M. C. A. team captured team honors with a score of 464 points.

got away to a 13 to 7 lead at the half and late in the fourth period came within a point of a tie. The biggest thrill to the crowd came at the end of the third quarter when Dave Lawrence, Corinth forward, saw the timer pick up his gun ant let fly a shot from the foul line on the opposite end of the floor. It went cleanly through the hoop, giving his team a four-point margin. It also was Dave Lawrence who scored a four point basket, adding to th free throws on McDeavitt's foul near the finish, practically clinching the game for Corinth.

Corinth led at the quarter of the game with Jena, but Wade and Johnson tied the score at 9-all at the half. From then on until the middle of the fourth quarter they traded basket for basket, but with a lead of a point at the starf of the fourth quarter Jena began to stall and scored a couple of set shots that sewed up the game.

Corinth Leads at Quarter.

Corinth led 7 to 3 at the end of the first quarter. Jones, F. Lawrence, and D. Lawrence scored from the field for Corinth. Wade dribbled in for Jena's only field goal.

Dave Lawrence scored from the foul line, but Johnson, Jena's center, sank a long shot and Wade added another from the sideline in midfloor, leaving Corinth in the van only 9 to 7.

Johnson added a basket on a pass from Wade just before the gun ended the first half, leaving the score tied at 9 all. Doughty, star Jena forward, was ruled out of the game on fouls shortly before the end of the half.

Jones, Corinth guard, caged a hook shot from the corner to start the third quarter and Johnson equaled it with a long shot from the side. Jones clicked with a push up, again giving Corinth a basket lead. Wade came through with a long shot from the side and Doughty drew a free throw but missed, leaving the score tied at 13 all.

Rogers fouled Stalcup, but he missed. Dave Lawrence fouled Wade as he dribbled under the basket. Wade made one and missed the other, giving Jena the lead, 14 to 13, just before the gun ended the quarter. It was the first time Jena had been in front.

Rogers, Corinth's star forward, fouled Johnson in the last period and went out on four fouls, but the center missed the shot. Jena had four under the basket shots but missed and Doughty drew his fourth personal foul for pushing Odor.

Mobile Wipes Out Brewer Lead; Wins

Mobile, Ala., April 5.—[Special.]—Herb Cobb's wildness and ineffectiveness allowed Mobile to overcome a six run Brewer lead with a five run spurt in the fifth and a four run rally in the eighth to win at 14-11.

Brown and Wilson, two rookie pitchers, permitted eleven runs and twelve hits in six innings. Bob Kline another rookie, worked the last three innings and stopped the Brewers, while Cobb failed to protect his advantage.

Cobb Loses Control.

Going into the eighth leading at 11-10, Cobb gave a hit to Longnecker and walked Kline. Stumpf sacrificed but Cobb threw the ball into right field, Longnecker and Kline scoring. Russell walked and stole after which Stumpf and Russell counted on Sullivan's single.

Benton walked in the first inning and took second on Grimes' infield out. Turgeon rapped one which Longnecker fumbled. Benton went to third and scored on Jenkins' hit. In the Brewer first, Gearin walked Stumpf. Lamb tripled and Russell doubled. Reb scored on Standaert's single. Longnecker's single off Gearin's glove, a stolen base and Stumpf's double added one more for the Bears in the second.

Trailing at 4-1, the Brewers came back with four in the third and added four more in the fifth. Chapman dropped Benton's pop fly, Grimes tripled, scoring on Turgeon's out. Pick singled and Stanton hit a home run. Shanks, Gearin and Benton singled in the fourth for a tally. Grimes forced Gearin, Jenkins singled and when Stumpf let the ball go through him, Benton and Grimes scored, Jenkins romping home when Chapman fumbled Pick's grounder.

Gearin Goes Out.

Herb Cobb relieved Gearin in the fifth and came up wild. He walked Lamb after Chapman singled. Russell and Sullivan walked, forcing in Lamb. Standaert doubled for three runs going to third on a scarifice fly and scoring on Longnecker's infield out.

The Brewers counted twice off John Wilson in the fifth and sixth while Chapman hit a home run off Cobb in the sixth to make it 11-10. Wilson was replaced by Bob Kline, who held the Brewers scoreless the rest of the way.

COACHES FAVOR AID FOR DEFENSE IN CAGE STALLING

Vote to Retain Center Jump Next Year.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Basketball coaches of the national association in the concluding session of their annual meeting yesterday voted to retain the center jump next year and offered a suggestion designed to break up the stalling game.

The problem of combatting stalling occupied the coaches most of the morning. From the mass of suggestions the coaches adopted one, which, while it will not prevent such tactics, will aid the defense in breaking up the formation.

The rules committee will be asked to reword rule 7, section 3, to handicap the player who has retreated into his back court and refused to put the ball in play. The coaches proposed that the referee call a held ball when a defensive player advances within one yard of the man with the ball and remains in that position for five seconds.

Blame Defensive Team.

While coaches who hoped to legislate more effectively consider this is a poor lever to pry the basketball loose from the stalling style, others pointed out that it will prevent a player faking and feinting in back court.

Stalling again was defended as the failure of the defensive team to play aggressive basketball. The coaches wish to place the responsibility for the stall on the team which refuses to go after the ball.

To accomplish their purpose, it is aimed to educate the basketball public so that opinion will be against the coach and team which refuses to leave its massed defensive formation and play the game all over the floor.

Advocate One Tap at Center.

In requesting retention of the center jump the coaches advocate only one tap. Heretofore, if the ball has remained within imaginary lines drawn perpendicular to the center circle a second tap was permitted. This ruling also would apply to all held balls. Violation of this rule would give the ball to opponents out of bounds.

Other recommendations to the rules committee were:

1. Recodification of the rules with addition of more approved rulings. The guide also to include pictures illustrating rule violations so that universal interpretation may be secured.

2. Change rule 15 so that a player who is fouled as he makes a successful shot for the basket will be given one free throw. This will permit a total of three points for one play. The rule now awards the player in act of shooting two free throws whether he makes or misses the goal.

Want Technical Foul Called.

3. When a player deliberately leaves the center ring at the jump or the imaginery ring which exists for all held balls, the coaches want it ruled a technical foul. At present the ball is given to opponents out of bounds. The technical foul rule was adopted last year in the Big Ten. It was designed to prevent a player who is outjumped, from breaking up center plays.

4. If the player attempting a 'free throw leaves his mark before the ball strikes the goal or backboard, the ball would be given to opponents out of bounds. At present it is ruled a held ball at the free throw line. Some teams have used this to secure a held ball near the goal when otherwise the ball might have passed into possession of opponents.

5. The coaches advocate time being "in" when the ball leaves the free thrower's hands. At present time is "in" when the official declares the ball in position for the free throw attempt. The player still would have 10 seconds to make the throw, but playing time would not be consumed.

6. Classification of the rule "fouled while in the act of shooting." The coaches again hope to secure uniform interpretation.

Pro System Suggested.

George Keogan, Notre Dame coach, suggested that one official call all fouls while a second official be used as a ball tosser for center jumps and held balls. This is the system professional basketball uses. In opposition H. G. Olsen of Ohio State favors the use of three officials and reported that such a system proved effective during the Ohio high school tournament. The coaches took no action on either plan.

Dr. Walter Meanwell, Wisconsin coach, long an opponent of the unrestricted dribble, spoke at length of the adoption of a one bounce rule. He asserted that stalling would be elliminated, the officiating would be easier, and that the massed defense would automatically break up if the threat of a long dribble into the basket was removed.

Such a rule was adopted several years ago, but coaches and players protested and it was rescinded before the start of the season.

Pat Page of Indiana, former basketball coach at Chicago and Butler, backed Meanwell's argument, while Ward Lambert of Purdue and Dr. F. C. Allen of Kansas were among those expressing approval of the dribble rule now in force.

Officers Are Elected.

The following officers were elected: President, L. A. Andreas, Syracuse; first vice president, A. A. Scharbinger, Creighton; second vice president, H. G. Olsen, Ohio State; third vice president, Roy Mundorff, Georgia Tech; secretary treasurer, H. P. Ortner, Cornell university. Directors: H. C. Beresford, University of Colorado; Dr. F. C. Allen, Kansas; Dr. H. C. Carlson, Pittsburgh; and A. C. Lonborg, Northwestern.

'Tis a Difficult Task to Pick an All-Tourney Five

Picking an all-tournament team from watching thirty-six basketball teams five days is rather a thankless task and very likely unjust to the players themselves. It is hard to decide whether one individual has a shade on another in some post, and mistakes which might be corrected after watching them for several games are bound to occur, if one were to pick one first team. Therefore, the men named in this choice are picked not as an all-tournament team, but as the outstanding players among the preps who competed.

The tournament this year was somewhat unusual in that good centers were a rarity and good guards, particularly good running guards, were plentiful. The forwards averaged about as usual, with some men outstanding for their floor work and others being specialists in scoring. A consensus of newspaper basketball writers on the best men in the tournament is as follows:

Centers—Smith, Lee H. S., Jacksonville, Fla.; Borrs, Brasilton Ga.; Rankaitis, Morgan Park H. S., Chicago.

Guards—Ben Tompkins, Athens, Tex.; Wade, Jena, La.; Frank Lawrence, Corinth, Ky.; Holloway, Durham, N. C.; Odor, Jena, La.

Rahway Beats Kansas City for "Y" Title

Rahway, N. J., won the eighth annual international Y. M. C. A. basketball championship last night by defeating Kansas City, Mo., in the final game at the Oak Park fieldhouse, 28 to 21. Harry Orr and Chaillet led the easterners to the title, the former's floorwork featuring while the latter scored seven field goals and two free throws. Bryan with eight points and Allan with seven starred for Kansas City. The score was tied 12 all at half time.

Third place in the championship tournament was won by Vincennes, Ind., when the Hoosiers defeated the other New Jersey entrant, Montclair, by a score of 27 to 22. Montclair led until the last period when Vincennes' rally overtook them. Gowdy, with nine points and Costello with eleven, starred for the victors, while R. Schiefler featured for Montclair. Vincennes lost its chance to play for the title in the afternoon semifinal, when a last minute basket by Harry Orr gave Rahway victory.

The Englewood branch of Chicago, which was eliminated by Buffalo, N. Y., last year's champion, in its opening game, won the consolation tournament for first round losers by overwhelming Cambridge, Mass., 39 to 15. The Chicagoans scored thirteen points before Cambridge rang up a point, and led at the half 18 to 8.

TRIBUNE TROPHY BUILDS UP CAGE GAME IN BALTICS

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, April 5.—Basketball, the only game invented and developed in America which has achieved world-wide popularity, was introduced in the Baltic states by the American Y. M. C. A. in 1919 when the "Y" began its work among the little armies of Esthonians, Letts, and Lithuanians who were fighting for their independence. Today basketball rivals rockey as a winter sport, and the donation of a silver cup by Col. R. R. McCormick, publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, has placed basketball on top in the fight for popularity. The cup is known as THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Baltic basketball championship trophy.

The design was picked from hundreds of drawings owned by the oldest silversmiths in Riga. The cup is sixteen inches high and contains more than two pounds of silver bullion. Sportsmen consider it the most beautiful trophy now being competed for in the Baltic states, and the announcement of its donation resulted in a wave of excitement which ran from Helsingfors all the way to Kaunas.

Long Basketball Season.

THE TRIBUNE cup had an unfortunate birth, for after being completed the silversmith apprentice placed it in the oven to be heated so the interior could be gold plated. He was sent on an errand and forgot the cup. When he returned it had melted into a puddle of silver. However, the second edition proved even better than the first.

Unlike America, basketball has a six months' season in the Baltic, where the long winters have made it the most popular game. The playoffs for the league championships begin in October, and after the national championships have been decided in February the fight begins for the privilege of playing for the championship of the Baltic states and THE TRIBUNE trophy. This year only Latvia and Esthonia were represented in the finals, but next year the best teams of both Finland and Lithuania have promised to compete.

The first playoff took place in a gymnasium on the premises of the Latvian Conservatory of Music in Riga, and the Latvian Jauntne Basketball club won from the Tallin Kalev club, 49 to 37. The Letts scored the first goal and maintained the lead till the finish.

Crowd Turned Away.

The little gym was packed with rooters, and the noise made by 500 youths of Latvian, German, Esthonian, and Russian nationality interrupted a concert being held in another section of the building. Because of lack of space an ever larger crowd was turned away. Next year it is planned to hold the playoff in Tallin.

Jack Greiner, American secretary of the Latvian Y. M. C. A., says that the playoff of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE trophy this year attracted more interest than the competition for the Baltic national championships, and that THE TRIBUNE trophy will play the same rôle in developing basketball as the Davis cup did for tennis.

According to the rules of the tournament set up by the Y. M. C. A., a team has to win the cup three times before it can keep the trophy.

90,000 WATCH ENGLAND DEFEAT SCOTCH KICKERS

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 5.—One of the greatest Scotch invasions that London has ever known took place today when 50,000 hilarious wearers of the plaid descended on the capital in the early hours of the morning en route to Wembly to see the great annual England-Scotland soccer match.

Unfortunately for the high spirits of the invaders, the Scotch team lost by a score of 5 to 2 after a brilliant game which attracted a crowd of 90,000, with tens of thousands turned away from the gates. The duke of Gloucester, Prime Minister MacDonold, and Ishbel, and members of the naval conference delegations were among the spectators.

Scots Come in Kilts.

From dawn until shortly before the start of the game the streets of dignified London echoed the bray of bagpipes and the shouts of the Scots, thousands of whom were attired in kilts and all wearing bright colored tam o'shanters. There were many women among the crowds, which were brought to London by seventy special trains.

The visitors chartered 400 of the most spacious sight-seeing buses in London, in which they toured the city during the morning and then motored to Wembly, on the outskirts of London.

Traffic was jammed in all of the central sections of the capital, due to the processions of buses, which were overflowing with Scotsmen, while mobs of Scottish pedestrians added to the traffic confusion.

Two Reported in Taxi.

It was reported that two Scotchmen were seen going to Wembly in a taxi, but this story is given little credence.

Although excursion rates made it possible to make the round trip for less than $10, this adventurous voyage to London represented the sole extravagance for the year of thousands of the Scotch visitors. It was learned that many paid weekly installments to savings clubs in order to have enough to come, while in other cases all members of the family chipped in in order to send one member to the game.

Tropical Athletes Are Slow Footed Olympics Show

New York, April 5.—[U. P.]—The second Central American Olympic games at Havana, Cuba, were brought to a close tonight. A comparison of the records established shows the Central Americans far behind other nations in every department.

The times established in the track events at the tropical Brewery stadium ranged from 4-5 of a second in the 100 meters dash to two minutes in the 5,000 meters run behind existing world's records. None of the winners at Havana would have qualified in the official Olympic games.

Loyola Grid Drill Starts Tomorrow

The pigskin will be resurrected for a six week period at Loyola university tomorrow afternoon. While no coach has been named to succeed Tom Lemont, who left Loyola to accept a job under Jimmy Phelan at Washington, Eddie Norton, his first assistant in last year's campaign, will have charge during spring practice until a head coach is named.

Most of the time will be devoted to work on fundamentals so as to prepare the squad for a good start in next fall's campaign, which is expected to be one of the most arduous any Loyola football machine ever encountered. Georgetown will play the Ramblers in one of the early games and the Boston college eleven will follow a few weeks later.

Promising material is expected from last year's freshman squad, and the regulars will have to put up a battle to retain their positions. Loyola was not hard hit by graduation.

Les Molloy, Wallie Durkin, Tom Howland, Ted Connelly, and John Smith are back field veterans. Several promising newcomers will give Connelly a battle for the quarter back position. They are Vic Napoli, Steve Furches, and Red McClellan. McClellan is a junior, but did not take part in last season's schedule because of a broken leg.

The ends probably will be George Weimer and Tom McNeil, but Tom Walsh, Joe Phelan, and Dode Norton, Eddie Norton's brother, are a formidable trio of newcomers.

A FAMOUS NAME A FINER CAR

The New Series Pontiac Big Six engine has a piston displacement of 200 cubic inches. It is the biggest power plant in any six of Pontiac's price. That is why Pontiac can develop 60 horsepower and turn it into such high speed, fast acceleration and exceptional hill-climbing ability.

LARGE CARBURETOR. The power developed by Pontiac's large engine is due in part to a large 1¼-inch carburetor. This carburetor is equipped with an accelerating pump and an internal economizer. While it supplies the engine with a generous fuel mixture for accelerating or hill-climbing, it saves money by its fuel economy on a straightaway.

OTHER FEATURES. In addition, the power plant has a positive gasoline pump, a large three-port intake manifold of improved design and a positive full pressure oiling system which assures ample lubrication at all engine speeds and results in long life.

To realize what Pontiac's high power means to performance you should drive the car. Come in and arrange to take a New Series Pontiac Big Six for a trial ride. At the same time you can learn how much Pontiac has to offer in comfort, style and durability.

THOROUGHBRED NURSERIES DOT CHICAGO AREA

District Soon to Rival Big Breeding Centers.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Kentucky and Virginia are in no immediate danger of being pushed into the background as states which produce the most famous thoroughbred horses. But in a few years Illinois, despite its below zero elements now and then, will move so near the lead the Kentuckians and Virginians are going to know they have been in quite a contest.

To visit all the farms within an hour's ride of Chicago where thoroughbred production already has started or will be under way within a short time requires quite a journey. Some of the farms cover hundreds of acres and others are small, but the ultimate goal on all of them, as Chicago heads into a brilliant turf season, seems to be to produce another Anita Peabody, which journeyed to New York and won a Futurity.

Nearly 30 Nurseries Near City.

Much has been written about Leona farm, near Cary, owned by John D. Hertz, where Anita Peabody first saw the light of day and where the famous Reigh Count is now ruling as sultan. This is a thoroughbred nursery that compares with the greatest in the land, but there are some 30 other farms near Chicago where thoroughbreds are growing toward racing age. Some of them may be running in the last race when you're trying to get even, but a few should go on to greatness in midprogram stake events.

On the farm of Dr. Daniel A. Orth, near Wheaton, there is a daily scene of thoroughbred activity. Stuyvesant Peabody maintains a thoroughbred farm near Lamont which ranks with the best in any state. There he wintered his pretentious racing stable, which includes such stars as Flat Iron, Martie Flynn, T. S. Jordan, and several royally bred two year olds.

Then out in the Lake Forest territory there're the farms of Ben. L. Behr, Laurence Armour, Austin Niblack, William Swift, Fairbanks Morris, and others. And over at Lake Villa Otto W. Lehmann and Edward J. Lehmann are not only breeding the stock for their own racing strings, but they also are beginning to produce horses on such a scale they may have some to offer at the annual yearling sales within a few seasons.

Nurseries at St. Charles.

Out near St. Charles Valentine Crane has established a stud and within another year or two his Illinois bred racers should begin to make names for themselves. L. M. Severson, whose colt, Paul Bunyan, won fame at New Orleans, is another Chicagoan who has set up a thoroughbred nursery not far from St. Charles. Only a short distance from Wheaton Harry and William Goelitz have put up a modern thoroughbred nursery.

Near Palatine Harry Hereenden's farm is to be found. And on up the road toward Wauconda Alex Heffernan is holding forth with a tract of a hundred acres on which many Chicago horses have just finished putting in the winter and early spring months. Heffernan was the stable foreman for "Bet You A Million" Gates back when grandpa lifted grandma into a handsom cab and gave her a thrill by taking her to the races at Washington park or Harlem.

These are not all the farms on which the thoroughbreds are now being produced in and around Chicago. There's Mike Flynn for instance. His farm is at Palos Park. He wintered his string of 12 horses there and reports are that when he sends Blue Blood, Peggy, Silver Mary, and his others out to fill their first engagements they will be in tip top condition.

Baker Stung by Racing Bee.

E. J. Baker at St. Charles, whose big farm has been devoted to the breeding of trotters and pacers for many years, is reported to have been stung by the thoroughbred bee and numerous foals from the most famous breeding lines will be found there within another year. On William E. Dee's farm, near La Grange, thoroughbreds are to be produced, it is reported. Mr. Dee long has been prominent in show horse production. So has Otto W. Lehmann, Dr. Daniel A. Orth, and other farm owners here, but it is the thoroughbred and the historic fixtures and rich prizes for which they race that are commanding most attention this spring.

Duffield's farm near Waukegan, Mrs. A. C. Thompson's place, at the edge of Brookfield, and Mrs. Mary E. Llewellyn's farm on the outskirts of River Forest are others where the thoroughbreds soon may begin to romp over the wide pastures and around the paddocks. Then there's Sanola Stock farm out northwest where there is a regulation training track and a nursery patterned after the finest in Kentucky.

While the Chicago district is making the longest strides in the establishment of thoroughbred nurseries, there are other points in Illinois where the running horse is being produced on a large scale. Carlock, Galesburg, Taylorville, and numerous points in "Little Egypt" have for many years been producing horses that have met with more or less success after they got to the races.

Those Kentucky and Virginia gentlemen may not lose any sleep this season. But wait until the sons and daughters of our Illinois stars get to the races a couple of years from now!

TRAINING UNDER WAY ON CHICAGO THOROUGHBRED FARMS

Bowie Sprint Won Handily by Battleship

Bowie, Md., April 5.—[Special.]—Battleship, a triple winner in Florida, gave Walter J. Salmon his third success at this meeting when he came home a handy winner of the James Rowe Memorial handicap, feature of the program today.

A crowd of 25,000, the largest of the meeting, turned out and saw the son of Man O'War out of Quarantine, add another triumph to the pair. Annapolis, also by Man O'War, scored for Salmon on the first and third day.

Battleship was the second choice in the betting back of the Harry Payne Whitney entry of Frumper and Prometheus, but it was Lee Rosenberg's Dr. Desmond he had to beat at the end of the seven furlongs. This fellow did his best to catch Battleship but Salmon's horse was going smoothly under Louis Schaeffer's handy ride and had a length to spare at the wire. Another length toward the rear came Frumper.

The others in order were Enid, Titus, Guide Right, and Prometheus. Michigan Boy, winner of the Louisiana Derby and the overnight favorite, was scratched.

The Salmon horse is eligible for both the Preakness and Kentucky Derby and Jack Pryce, who trains the Salmon string as successor to Tom Healey, is going to shoot the colt at one or both of these big three year old specials.

FROEBEL VAULTER SETS NEW MARK IN PREP TOURNEY

Iowa City, Ia., April 5.—[Special.]—Clearing 13 feet 2 inches, John Wonsowics of Froebel High school, Gary, Ind., set a new American indoor interscholastic record in the pole vault at the University of Iowa midwestern high school track meet today. The previous mark of 12 feet 7⅝ inches was established in 1927 by Tom Warne, now a Northwestern university star.

Oak Park, Ill., High school led qualifiers in the preliminary round of the meet this afternoon, placing eight men for the finals in the shot put, broad jump, dash, and hurdles. Skelly of Oak Park, who took second in the pole vault, also bettered Warne's old record by one-eighth of an inch, and was one of the qualifiers in the shot put.

Froebel, national interscholastic champion last year, was second among qualifiers with seven men placing for the finals.

KID CHOCOLATE, FIDEL LA BARBA TO MEET MAY 16

New York, April 5.—(AP)—Kid Chocolate, Cuban featherweight, and Fidel La Barba, former flyweight champion, have been matched for a ten round bout at Madison Square Garden, May 16. This was announced today by Matchmaker Tom McArdle. The bout will be at 126 pounds, featherweight limit.

Chocolate won a close decision over La Barba in their first meeting here last year.

After a winter of idleness the task of whipping a thoroughbred into racing form is a slow operation. The horses are jogged around, sent distances, and then are called on to show their speed. Here are Hazy Sara and Princess Passes about to match their speed in a morning gallop.

In the Wake of the News

KENTUCKY DERBY.

NOMINATIONS for the Kentucky Derby, whose fifty-sixth annual renewal will take place at Louisville, May 17, are exceeded by those for the American Derby at Washington Park. It is barely possible the Kentucky Derby field, although larger in number, will be excelled in caliber by those of the American Derby in June and the Arlington classic in July.

This may prompt the query whether the Kentucky Derby is on the wane. Not for many years, if ever, is The Wake's opinion. The very things which make the Derby great also militate against it. Except for the Preakness, it is the first great test of the year over a distance of ground for 3 year olds. As such, it is bound to attract attention and interest.

The Derby also is a trying test, and many trainers find they cannot get their charges ready for the gruelling mile and one-quarter by that time. It is almost a certainty any owner with a chance for the $50,000 added, which yields first money over that figure, will send his colt or filly after the stake.

With the Belmont stakes, American Derby, Arlington classic, and other eastern fixtures following so closely, a trainer, however, is less willing to start a colt still short of condition for the rich prize lest he sacrifice chances for stakes of equal amount later in the season.

There is another feature of the Kentucky classic, however, which appeals to The Wake and apparently to many Chicagoans. A big race in Chicago or New York with their large populations is not comparable in local public interest to the Kentucky Derby. From the moment you strike Louisville until you leave you talk "horse," you think horse—and we almost said you eat horse. It is the one topic of discussion. Derby day is almost a state holiday.

That's why we think the Kentucky Derby always will remain a great event, no matter what follows. It has tradition, the interest of a community noted for its breeding farms, and its holiday appeal behind it. If you don't think so, try even at this early date to secure hotel accommodations at Louisville or a box at Churchill Downs for May 17.

Choked Paths of Yesterday.

Returning to my father's farm,
Idealized through lonely years,
Longing to feel once more its charm,
I gaze with eyes grown dim with tears.
The old home crumbling to decay,
Choked paths and thicket hidden streams—
I wish that I had stayed away
And kept alive my childhood dreams.

No to the sunny tranquil farm,
Not to the friends I used to know,
But back to the crook of mother's arm,
Back to my youth I wished to go.

Buying a Book.

Wishing to buy a book which we had heard her mention for a friend to read on the train, we entered the store and asked the saleslady, "Have You a Room of Your Own?" She seemed surprised and replied, "Why, yes; are you representing Mr. Olson?" "No," we replied, "I'm a customer. I'd like 'A Room of My Own.' It's a book." And she smiled as she answered, "O, I see, we have a single 'Room of Its Own.' Shall I wrap it as a gift or for mailing?" Deeply chagrined at our ignorance by this time, we answered, "No, just wrap it for reading."

Spring Gallops Boost Ned O.'s Derby Rating

Louisville, Ky., April 5.—[Special.]—Ned O., G. W. Foreman's rugged son of Campfire-LaFlamba, is basking in the favorites' spotlight for the $50,000 added Kentucky Derby to be run at Churchill Downs May 17. Ned O. shares this distinction with four others, but his rise in public esteem is recent. It is based on excellent spring workouts, and it soon may carry him to the forefront of the others now highly regarded.

There is one argument in favor of Ned O. that may gain for him consideration as a Derby candidate not enjoyed by his quartet of rivals. Ned O. is a gelding. Flying Heels, Gallant Fox, Desert Light and High Foot are colts.

Of course, it is generally conceded that a colt has a slight advantage over a gelding, but it so happens that geldings are not eligible for some of the big Eastern stakes, while they are eligible for the Derby. With this restriction, Ned O. is being especially prepared for the Derby, and his first big race will be in the Derby. In the eyes of horsemen this pointing for an event means a great deal.

Impressive as 2 Year Old.

Ned O.'s claims, however, are not limited to this special preparation, nor to his form of this spring. He demonstrated last year that he was a two year old of unusual caliber. His races indicated that he preferred a route, and the mile and a quarter of the Kentucky Derby is sure to be to his fancy.

Ned O. won six races last season, was second twice and third once. He accounted for $16,600. Among his victories were the Spalding Lowe Jenkins Memorial Handicap at Pimlico and the Walden Handicap at the same course. Although he had won a race at Fort Erie, he did not really hit his stride until he reached Maryland. He won two races in succession and then was beaten a head by Crossbones. In this event he came from seventh place and barely failed to get up. He won his next four races, including the two aforementioned handicaps. In the last of the four victories he came from seventh place in the stretch run.

His next race was a sprint affair against older horses and he did not get going, but in his final start of the year, the Endurance Handicap at Bowie, he ran a remarkable race. He was giving weight to all opponents and again finished with a rush. Although he finished in seventh place he was beaten only three lengths. He was giving nineteen pounds to Snowflake, the winner.

Gelding Won Last Year.

Ned O. occupies a position resembling that of Clyde Van Dusen last year. The turf world knows that this gelding came home in front. About this time last year Clyde Van Dusen's trainer, for whom the son of Man o' War was named, when asked about the chances of his gelding said:

"I won't say that Clyde Van Dusen is going to win the Derby, but who can you name who has a better chance?"

Weather in this vicinity has been fine for training and many of the thoroughbreds are beginning to show speed in their trials. Distances are being lengthened and Derby horses soon will be turning in miles.

Candidates for the Clark Handicap, to be run on the opening day of the Churchill Downs meeting, May 10, are stepping along briskly. Victorian, because of his triumph in the Agua Caliente Handicap recently, is high in public esteem, but when other eligibles begin to round to form the race will assume an open aspect. Among those expected to figure prominently in the fifty-sixth running of the Clark are Toro, Misstep, Clyde Van Dusen, Brown Wisdom, Jock, Easter Stocking, Current and Martie Flynn, last year's winner.

Horses are coming in every day from winter tracks. Among the latest to come is the Valley Lake Stable, which includes the Derby candidate, High Foot.

Tanforan Gets Heavy Play as Racing Opens

San Francisco, Cal., April 5.—Racing came back to one of its old stamping grounds this afternoon after a lapse since the fall of 1928, when a betless meeting was held.

Judging by the size of today's crowd and the enthusiasm which ran to a high pitch as the first field of horses was sent on their way over the five and a half furlongs in the first race the meeting is destined to be a great success, and, no doubt, the opening wedge for meetings that will bring back recollections of halcyon days of the turf on the Pacific coast.

There is optional betting at the track, which eliminates the third place altogether as a speculation. Only $5 options are available and these only on the first and second horses, divided 80 per cent to the winning horse and 20 per cent to the second horse.

In the feature race today—a sprint at 6 furlongs—Good and Hot, a 3 year old, showed his heels to a big band of older performers. He was up in the final strides to take the decision from Shasta Bullet by a neck with Lady Seth third. nI the mutuel betting, Good and Hot paid $13 to win for a five dollar ticket.

The usual timidity and hesitancy attendant upon a drastic change in the customary betting plan was evident with the running of the first two or three races on the opening day's program, but the crowd soon warmed up to the new betting system.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

Which would you rather see, the Kentucky Derby, the Indianapolis auto race, or the opening game of the baseball season?

The Answers.

Michael McTigue, 2612 Farrell street, clerk—Give me the opener of the baseball season. I don't care anything about the Kentucky Derby or the Indianapolis race. I have seen the Cubs' opener for the last three or four years. I always go with a bunch of the boys. I wish the Cubs were playing the Athletics instead of St. Louis in the opening game here.

Miss Alice Steigelman, 2121 Greenwood boulevard, student — The Kentucky Derby, because I like horses. I would like to own a string of thoroughbreds. I saw a horse race at a Wisconsin state fair and it was exciting. I would like to see the Indianapolis auto race, but on second thought I wouldn't because I think it is too dangerous. I don't like accidents. Baseball never has appealed to me.

Jerry Fialka, 2606 North Mobile avenue, lacquer sprayer—The opening of the baseball season. I've seen the Indianapolis speedway race; it is worth watching once. But I'd rather attend the opening game of the baseball season. There is nothing like seeing the familiar faces back on the diamond.

Miss Harriet Steigelman, 1104 Foster street, student—I'd like to see the baseball game, absolutely. I was watching an auto race at a Cook county fair at Palestine and some racer broke his neck—O, wasn't it terrible? I never want to watch another automobile race. The Kentucky Derby doesn't last long enough for it to have any appeal.

Godfrey Wondrasek, 2911 North Natchez avenue, lacquer sprayer—The Indianapolis auto race. I expect to go there by airplane this year. I have never seen this great event, and I am hoping to see it with flags flying and all cylinders working. However, baseball is my favorite sport, and I will try my best to see the first game.

St. Mary's Wins Opening Baseball Tilt, 16 to 4

St. Mary's, Kas., April 5.—St. Mary's won its opening Kansas conference baseball game here this afternoon, defeating Baker university, 16 to 4.

HOCKEY RIVALS 'NATIONAL GAME' AS DRAWING CARD

Attendance Figures Give Baseball Slight Edge.

Hockey has discarded the pram in which it rolled into the United States five years ago and jumped to the driver's seat of a 145 inch wheelbase straight eight. Canada's national game has become the baseball of winter in the United States.

Surprising even to hockey fans is a comparison of the drawing power of hockey and baseball. Obviously, they never can conflict because of their seasons, and the baseball has the tremendous advantage of almost unlimited sitting capacity and lower admission prices. Yet attendance throughout the National Hockey league has increased this season—as it has every year since the sport first was played in the United States—to a point where it compares favorably with baseball.

Chicago Striking Example.

Chicago is an average but striking example of the advance in interest in hockey in the United States. Despite the handicap of playing the first six games in an antiquated arena of limited capacity and the further handicap of being forced to turn away cash customers when especially good teams were playing the Blackhawks, hockey actually distanced one Chicago major league baseball team on attendance per game and compared favorably with the other.

Obviously, it would be unfair to either sport to compare the Hawks' attendance record with either Chicago baseball team individually. Chicago is a good baseball town, and the Cubs, as pennant winners, broke all major league records for home crowds. The White Sox, with a weak team, had only a fair total attendance. The Hawks were neither champions nor far down in the league, so it would seem fair to average the Cubs and Sox attendance and compare that average with hockey's drawing power at the gate. And the "gate" is the answer to a sport's popularity.

How Cubs, Sox Drew.

Baseball magnates usually are secretive about their attendance figures, but an estimate of the baseball clubs' attendance by sports writers, plus the information doled out by the ball clubs, puts the Cubs' all-time league record attendance at 1,475,000 for 77 home games, an average of 17,860 a game. The Sox attendance was about 600,000 for the same number of games, an average of 7,790.

Adding those figures shows the two baseball clubs, with parks seating 48,000 and more than 55,000, drew an average of 12,825 cash customers for their home games. Compare this with the Blackhawks' average.

In their home games the Chicago hockey team averaged 9,070 a game. That is 3,800 less a game than the baseball teams drew with a seating capacity of hardly more than one-fourth as much. After moving to the Stadium, which would seat 15,000, the Hawks' attendance averaged more than 10,000 a game.

Pennant Winners Compared.

Perhaps another comparison would be to match the all-time record crowds drawn by two "pennant winning" teams. The Cubs' crowds averaged 17,500 for their home games. The attendance at the home games of Boston's champion Bruins will be something more than 300,000. Taking that figure brings Boston's average a game to 13,640.

Perhaps baseball fans will argue the fewer number of games made the difference, but the ability of the ball parks to accommodate crowds up to nearly 55,000 would more than counteract the fewer games. Furthermore, there is the price element. Baseball fans pay from 50 cents to $1.50 for seats, hockey fans from 75 cents to $3. That makes a lot of difference to many people.

This article is no attempt to argue hockey is more popular than baseball at the moment; merely that hockey is far more popular than even many hockey fans imagine. In five years it has moved up to come close to baseball in average attendance. Undoubtedly in the cities it is played it has become winter's most popular sport.

Chicago Five 2d in A.B.C.; Bowls 3,082

Cleveland, O., April 5.—[Special.]—S. and L. Motors of Chicago, leaders of the Woodlawn Recreation and Stevenson & Schalk leagues, smashed their way into the runner-up spot in the team division of the American Bowling Congress tourney here last night with a mark of 3,082. The score is only eighteen pins short of the top count of 3,100 registered by the D. Graff & Bros. of Kalamazoo.

The Chicago five opened with 997, came back with 1,041, and finished with 1,044. Frank Wright, rolling in leadoff position, chopped the No. 3 and 6 pins off the No. 10 in the tenth frame of the final game and George Osterbach was "tapped" in the tenth frame with a strike up in the ninth. With two breaks the Motor five would have taken the lead.

George Morrison led the Chicago five with a 716 total. He had games of 214, 235, and 267 to total 716.

Frank Wright, who leads the team in individual averages for the season, dropped to 149 in the final game. Had Wright hit his real pace in the windup session the Chicagoans would have taken the top spot easily. Wright totaled 563, George Amersbach 603, Harry Klatt 563, and Larry Dunn 637.

The team started poorly, starting in the windup session, but came back in the sixth frame with the entire lineup piling up strikes in the closing rounds for the sixth highest total in A. B. C. history.

Green Rivers were never in the running, the Chicagoans totaling 2,709 on games of 888, 909, and 912.

Local Clubs to Get N. U. Aquatic Stars

Three Northwestern university star swimmers who make their last collegiate appearance in a dual meet with the Hollywood Athletic club tomorrow afternoon at Patten gym, plan to affiliate with local athletic clubs.

Capt. Al Schwartz, who won three first places in the National collegiate meet, will swim in Purple colors at Patten gym tomorrow afternoon and in the evening will perform on the Illinois Athletic club water polo team in the National A. A. U. championships.

Schwartz, for three years, has been all conference forward on the Northwestern water polo team. His decision to compete for the I. A. C. will strengthen that club's polo and swimming teams.

Dick Hinch and Don Petersen, two other seniors on the championship Purple team, will compete for the Chicago Athletic association. Hinch was conference champion in the back stroke for three years and holds the national intercollegiate record for the 150-yard back in 60 foot pools. Petersen is a star breast stroke swimmer. He won the Big Ten title a year ago and placed second to his teammate, Bob Howlett, this year.

Eddie Lennox, all conference goalie on the Northwestern polo team for the last three years, already has joined the I. A. C. team and will compete tomorrow night. Three former Purple stars are members of the Cherry Circle team which will clash with the I. A. C. in the tournament. They are Dick Howell, Ralph Breyer, and Paul Corbett.

400 FILE ENTRY FOR AMATEUR MAT TOURNEY

Four hundred wrestlers will compete in the Diamond Midwest amateur meet which opens at the Coliseum April 15. This was the prediction of the promoters yesterday from their lists and included expectations for tomorrow, the final day on which entry may be made.

The tournament is divided into three classes, university-college, high school-academy, and open. Competition will be held in eight weight divisions.

Professional wrestling has failed in recent years to interest Chicago sport fans and heavyweights no longer are permitted to exhibit by ruling of the Illinois athletic commission. But with wrestling still popular in high schools and clubs, there is little doubt that the first tournament at the Coliseum will be a success.

It was with the idea of encouraging mass competition that the sponsors of this tournament sought and received the aid of the Central A. A. U. and the Illinois athletic commission, with the understanding that any profits over expenses should go to charity.

Among the clubs and institutions which have entered candidates are:

Tilden and Schurz High schools, Greek-Olympic Athletic club, Hawthorne club of the Western Electric, Deutcher Athletic club, Green Bay, Wis., Y. M. C. A., Danish American Athletic club, Coulon's gymnasium, North Park system, Morse playground, Morris A. C., Pulaski park, Wilsa Athletic club, Pickard playground, Calumet park, Gallistel playground, Lake Shore park, Davis playground, and Hamlin park. Club interest centers on the team trophies.

Proceeds above expenses will go to St. Vincent's home for destitute children and homes for crippled children.

U. OF C. MATMAN DISQUALIFIED IN A. A. U. WRESTLING

New York, April 5.—(AP)—The New York Athletic club and the Oklahoma Aggies split all national A. A. U. wrestling championships decided at the New York A. C. here tonight. The home club won five titles with their entry list of 35 men, while the nine members of the Aggies team accounted for three individual titles.

The tournament came to a rather unruly finish as Kaar Krogh, of the University of Chicago, defending champion in the 175 pound class, was disqualified for refusing to abide by the referee's decision in his final round match with Glenn Stafford, former Cornell star, competing for the New York A. C. Krogh's disqualification automatically gave Stafford the title by default.

Other New York A. C. winners were Oswald Kapp, 1928 Olympic champion from Esthonia, in the 147 pound class; Harold Phillips, in the 112 pound division; James Reid, 126 pounds, and Zigmont Lewtowt Jr., 135 pound division. Lewtowt sprang one of the big surprises of the evening when he tossed the defending champion, John Eareckson of Baltimore, in 1 minute and 15 seconds of wrestling.

For the Oklahoma Aggies Early McCready, husky heavyweight, won the unlimited division title by throwing Evar Linstrum of the University of Miami in 2 minutes and 12 seconds. Thus in the space of a week McCready won the National Collegiate A. A. and National A. A. U. titles by throwing every man that faced him in less than three minutes.

Other winners for the Aggies were Jack Van Bebber, captain elect of the 1931 team, who defeated his teammate.

CURTAILMENT OF SHIFT IS CALLED STEP BACKWARD

Rule Deprives Play of Its Effectiveness.

When the football rules committee decided to lengthen the referee's count on the shift from four to six for the coming football season it virtually nulled the effectiveness of this style of attack. The section of the code now ready that the offense must halt after a shift for "at least a second." Before, the wording was "approximately a second."

The decision concludes the controversy which began in 1921 and is a victory for those who have sought to bolster a defense unable to cope with such an attack. While the so-called Notre Dame shift introduced by Coach Rockne never has been named by opponents in their generalized attacks, yet the widespread use of the Rockne system has popularized the idea that the Rockne style is the one the rule makers had in mind when introducing new legislation.

Gain Too Much Momentum.

The original and successful argument against the shift was that the offensive back field was permitted to gain momentum before the ball was snapped at center. Consequently, critics said, the defensive linemen could not be expected to cope with the attack. First revisions of the code were directed to bring the shift to a halt, but no time limit was specified.

Next the referee was empowered to see that the offense halted for "approximately a second." To determine the approximate length of a second, the referee might count rapidly, "one, two, three, four." Then came the change, effective this fall, which increases the referee's count to six. In addition, the referee may carry a split second stopwatch and time the shift.

The comment now of the coaches who have favored and used such a shift is that the offense not only has lost momentum, which was desired, but the defense is given time to adjust itself and nullify the advantage the attacking team heretofore possessed when it altered its formation. The proponents of the shift assert football has taken a step backward and that emphasis will be placed on strength. The small man again is handicapped by his size, they say.

Proponents Advance Arguments.

Which brings up the contention that the shift, along with the forward pass, is responsible for the popularization of football in the last decade. The versatility of offense, open play with increased scoring, proponents say, have brought thousands to the gridirons. The game has developed an appeal impossible under the old line bucking tests of strength.

Of course the critics deny the shift is necessary to hold popular interest. The forward pass, they contend, is responsible. And more, these coaches continue, it is not necessary to have an offense which shifts from a standard lineup in order to produce a versatile and deceptive style of attack.

They point to such styles as Pop Warner's, with its unbalanced line and shifted back field, as indicative of what may be done without incurring penalty for momentum or illegal shift. In such styles the players assume the shifted position before the signals are called, which, of course, permits the defense to "get set" against the possibilities of the formation.

What Will Notre Dame Do?

As the football fan has linked Coach Rockne with the use of shift plays, so will he expect Notre Dame this fall to demonstrate the feasibility of the shift under the new rule. If, for instance, Notre Dame should discontinue its use, that would be sufficient evidence for Mr. Average Fan that the new rule has ended the days of the shift.

Of course, the Notre Dame shift today is not the Notre Dame shift of 1921 when the Irish, after losing to Iowa, 10 to 7, swept through the remainder of the schedule with a series of impressive victories. Coach Rockne overhauls his gridiron machinery on the average of once in three years. New plays, old ones with variations, keep Notre Dame's opponents continually at work planning defenses.

Notre Dame's attack last year produced nine victories and a national championship. That attack, with its spinner plays and all, was a variation of other seasons, but it was set in motion with the old familiar shift of the backs from the "three in a row" lineup. Reports from South Bend, prior to the opening of spring practice, have it that Rockne is considering seriously the advisability of changing his system in advance of his customary reconstruction date.

However, that is another question, but one that will be answered Oct. 4 when Southern Methodist meets the Irish.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

TROUT SEASON NEARS; BEWARE CHILL WEATHER

BY BOB BECKER.

Just as an upland game shooter grooms his hunting dogs during the weeks preceding the bird hunting season, so do the trout fishermen in the central states take these April days to get their rods and other tackle ready for the opening of the trout season, which is about three and one-half weeks from the zero hour.

In both Michigan and Wisconsin, famed for their streams which furnish sport with the speckled rainbow and brown trouts, it will be legal to angle for this trio the morning of May 1.

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their fishing rods which need repairing or a couple of coats of varnish, because it won't be long until it's time to whip a lure on a northern stream.

Judging from our experiences on northern trout streams, the May day fête built around the first day of the trout fishing season also marks the opening of the early spring bathing chilblain season, because the weatherman usually forgets about providing balmy days for that period. Last year we recall putting on our waders, and then literally crashing through ice to wade in the Pine river east of Three Lakes, Wis., on the fourth day of May.

Twenty minutes after entering the stream filled with ice cold water it began to snow. The year before we recall sitting with our back against a snow bank while eating lunch on a trout stream the first day of May.

Without doubt, early season trout fishing is filled with weather hazards. It may be fairly warm and quite ideal for fishing. Then again, the conditions may remind you more of November duck hunting than angling for the red spotted fontinalis.

If there is any moral to be drawn from past experiences, it's this: Take your red flannels and fur lined earmuffs along when you strike out for the north during the first days of May; there is no telling what kind of weather you are going to encounter.

TWO COACHES TO TUTOR ROCKFORD HIGH ELEVEN

Rockford, Ill., April 5.—(Special.)—Charles Beyer, coach of track and swimming at Rockford High school, has been appointed assistant to Coach Arthur Lundahl in tutoring the heavyweight football team. In the hope of making a better showing in future seasons with the grid squad, it was deemed best to assign two men. Beyer was in charge of the lightweight eleven for five years and has served seventeen years at prep schools. Paul Conklin will succeed Beyer as track and swimming coach.

Owens, Marion and Walker and Lovell, Herrin, tied for individual honors with ten points each.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS — By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK, April 5.—This is about the time of year when five thousand professional instructors in the great American delusion called golf will be taking their victims out on the practice tees again to prattle their old familiar rigamarole about the importance of pulling in the neck, keeping the left arm stiff, and shifting the weight from the ball of the right foot to the heel of the left at the instant of impact. The fee for this advice will be from two to ten dollars, please, and while it may be true, as some people contend, that pros must live, I am in a position to state that all this represents a waste of money, time, and hope. I have taken many such lessons myself, none of which ever did any good.

In the first place, nobody with any legitimate business on his mind could hope to memorize all the advice that a golfer receives in a normal life time of pathetic seeking for the true method, and, furthermore, any man who makes a conscientious effort to apply all his contradictory instructions will tie himself into a running bow knot, sprain something important in his spine, miss the ball entirely, and wind up on a white cot feeling rotten.

Some 80 or 90 Ways to Hit Golf Ball.

I have been told fifteen ways to hit midiron shots alone, and the fact that I now can't even threaten, much less strike, a golf ball with a midiron must convince any intelligent citizen that these fifteen ways, at any rate, are wrong. Doubtless other victims of the same swindle can swear to the physical impossibility of hitting a golf ball by any of the eighty or ninety other prescribed modes of attack, and we then will have proved that the golf ball cannot be hit with a midiron at all.

Having done this, we might pursue the same process with regard to all the other bats in the bag and prove that a golf ball can't be hit, thus eliminating golf, which would be a good thing if only because the five thousand instructors would then be compelled to turn square or take up fortune telling.

Boy Doesn't Need Instruction with Bat.

Every now and again I receive a fresh batch of statistics from the United States Golf association intended to show that the government is unduly severe in the matter of taking golf clubs, but this propaganda goes to the floor along with the mimeographed squawks from prizefighters who think they should be recognized as the junior welterweight champion of the world everywhere west of the Mississippi. Any game in which a man has to take a course of lectures from a band of medicine men is open to suspicion as a fake.

Nobody ever has to take any instructions in hitting a baseball. A kid grabs a bat, steps up to the can, rock, or newspaper, which has been designated as the plate, digs in his toes, and just naturally hits the ball with no regard for the angle of his neck in relation to his knees at the top of his back swing.

Another complaint of mine about golf has to do with the custom of placing apple trees, shrubs, sandpits, and puddles in spots about the playing field where they are most likely to cause the greatest inconvenience on occasions when one does, by some freak of chance, contrive to hit a golf ball with a club. This shows the malice that permeates the game.

Good shots are all too rare anyway, but just when a man has felt the throb of a perfect stroke running up the shaft to his fingers and through his veins to his very soul, he turns to see the ball drop behind some extraneous vegetation or into some crater. You may examine the fields of all the other sports that are played with bat and ball, and on none of them will you discover any obstruction or ditch placed there with the special purpose of interfering with the pleasure of the players.

Trees and Puddles Would Offend Poloists.

The polo people would hop on their horses and ride off home if you asked them to play through sand banks and and puddles around a lot of trees. Ball players complain of match stems and the iniest, pebbles on the grass, and the gents and ladies of the tennis tournaments positively will not consent to have around any shrubs, much less sturdy oaks.

But my complaint is mainly against the professional instructors and of all those the one I loath with the bitterest feeling is Herman Barron. He is the one who told me I would hit midiron shots 200 yards straight to the pin if I would only contract my neck, keep the left elbow rigid, and shift the weight in some fashion which I have now happily forgotten. I had tried fourteen other ways, but he assured me that this was the correct way, so I decided to trade with him, bought three dollars worth elementary midiron culture, went down to Florida, did as he said, and whiffed my first midiron shot of the season in the presence of ladies.

But, of course, the pros' answer to failure always is, "You don't pull in your neck." This is part of the evil formula. You may be sure that your neck was well pulled in, but tradition is on the instructor's side. His lessons never are wrong. The victim always is. He didn't pull in his neck, and the victim's exploitation of dumb gullibility and hope goes on with never a protest from press, pulpit police, or prosecutor.

Aurora, Ill., April 5.—[Special.]—E. E. Schultz, head coach at the West Aurora High school, has resigned to take effect at the close of the present school year. Schultz will enter the business field. He has been highly successful here, but has been handicapped by a small enrollment and lack of material. A successor will be considered at the meeting of the school board on April 14.

Oxford-Cambridge Beats Middies at Lacrosse, 5-4

Annapolis, Md., April 5.—[Special.]—The Oxford-Cambridge lacrosse team, now touring this country, and playing its third game on this side of the Atlantic, defeated the Naval academy by 5 to 4 here this afternoon, the dodging ability of Rains and the Ainsworth brothers being the decisive factor.

PROMISING BACKS SEEN IN ILLINI GRIDIRON CLASH

Four of 5 Letter Men Get Into Game.

Champaign, Ill., April 5.—[Special.]—With Coach Robert Zuppke directing plays from the fortieth row in the Memorial stadium, two University of Illinois spring football teams played a regulation game here today. Several outstanding backs will represent Illinois next year if today's game is a criterion.

Fussy Evans, Olaf Robinson, and Clark Root and Berry, a freshman, conducted themselves like backs of promise, but blocking and tackling were ragged.

The Illini will have only five lettermen next year and four of them, Pete Yanuskus, Chuck Hall, Henry Steinman, and Robinson, played today.

MICHIGAN NINE WANTS TRIP.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 5.—[Special.]—The baseball contingent upon which Michigan pins its hopes for a major championship this year will head south next Friday on its annual ten day invasion of Dixie college diamonds.

Only fifteen men will be taken on the southern jaunt, and although ten are considered certain of places, the fight for the remaining berths during the last four days of practice next week is expected to be keen.

While the diamond clan is on its Dixie tour, Coach Steve Farrell will knuckle down to serious preparations for the outdoor season with more than twenty members of his track team staying here for work while the rest of the students are away on the annual spring vacation.

Coach Farrell will enter a large squad in the Kansas Relays on April 19, and plans to hold sessions twice a day during the holiday week to get his team in shape.

HOOSIERS, WABASH TO MEET.

Bloomington, Ind., April 5.—[Special.]—The University of Indiana baseball team will meet Wabash college Friday and Saturday in its first appearance of the season on the home diamond. The team will return Wednesday from its southern sojourn at Oxford, Miss. Games will be played with the University of Mississippi Monday and Tuesday before the return to Bloomington.

Those who did not make the trip south will be given a chance to show their ability in the two games with Wabash, according to Coach Everett Dean.

The Big Ten schedule will open here April 19 with the University of Chicago providing the opposition. Minnesota will follow April 25 and 26 and then the Hoosiers will go on the road, visiting Chicago May 3. The remainder of the conference card is: May 9, Ohio State, here; May 13, Purdue, here; May 17, Ohio State, there; May 20, Purdue, there; May 24, Northwestern, here; May 28, Northwestern, there.

The track team will remain idle next week and await the intensive schedule which begins with the Kansas relays April 19 at Lawrence.

With the spring football sessions drawing to a close, Coach H. O. Page is anxious for all men with varsity aspirations to report for the drills during the next couple of weeks. Only three sessions were held this week because spring vacation started Thursday afternoon.

BADGERS LEAVE TUESDAY.

Madison, Wis., April 5.—[Special.]—Bradley Tech, Peoria, Ill., will be the first stop for the University of Wisconsin baseball team on its annual jaunt southward next week. The Badgers will leave Madison Tuesday and are scheduled to meet Bradley Wednesday afternoon.

Coach Guy Lowman will pick between 12 and 15 athletes to make the trip. Dates and places for eight remaining games on the training schedule are:

April 10—Washington university at St. Louis.
April 11-12—Vanderbilt at Nashville, Tenn.
April 14-15—Spring Hill college, Mobile, Ala.
April 16-17—Mississippi A. & M. at Starkville.
April 19—Western State Teachers at Kalamazoo, Mich.

Farber Heads Mound Staff.

While Lowman expects Wisconsin to be weak in some departments, the pitching staff leaves little to be desired. Maury Farber, Chicago, a consistent winner last season, is the ace of the staff, while Bobby Poser, Columbus, Wis., ranks a close second.

The third pitcher in the ranking is Art Summerfield, who pitched and won for Lane Tech, Chicago, a few years ago in its intercity battle with the New York prep champions.

N. DAME ATHLETES OUTDOORS.

Notre Dame, Ind., April 5.—[Special.]—After several false starts and setbacks spring seems to be here and Notre Dame athletes are again taking advantages of its arrival by working outdoors.

Four football teams have been chosen by Assistant Coach Hunk Anderson, generalissimo of the Irish forces in Coach Knute Rockne's absence, and scrimmages will be frequent.

The four teams are merely equally balanced elevens on which last year's varsity men are playing side by side with untried sophomores.

To give a realistic touch to the practice skirmishes the teams are named Varsity, Southern Methodist, Carnegie Tech, and Pittsburgh. Colors corresponding to those of the schools are worn.

Ball Team Goes Outdoors.

The baseball season opens here with Armour Tech of Chicago April 14.

Gagnon Does Griffith a Good Turn; Both to Profit

Jack Gagnon, the "unknown" heavyweight who stopped Tuffy Griffith in the sixth round of their fight last week at Philadelphia, now seems to have done Tuffy a good turn. He probably will add several thousand dollars to Tuffy's bank roll, which the Chicagoan could have made only by several fights along the coal oil lamp circuit.

Of course, Tuffy has that black mark against his record, but if all goes well with him he will have an opportunity to make the fans forget it in the Stadium ring April 30. This is the date Matchmaker Nate Lewis has selected for a return fight between the pair of big boys.

Gagnon May Repeat.

If Tuffy puts the skids under Gagnon, fans undoubtedly will accept as truth the explanation that lack of condition accounted for the technical K. O. at Philadelphia. However, Gagnon may duplicate his knockout punches. This possibility is just what the Stadium officials are banking on to bring in the money necessary to pay off on their heavyweight card April 30.

Gagnon's record is as full of ups and downs as a roller coaster. He's been stopped six times himself. Otto von Porat and Ernie Schaaf were two who gave Gagnon more than he could handle last year. In addition, Schaaf knocked out Gagnon in 1925. Pat McCarthy, Tom Kirby, and Johnny Grosso are the others who hold knockouts over the Boston fighter.

Boys He's Beaten.

On the other side of the ledger, Gagnon has knocked out Italian Jack Herman, outpointed Armand Emanuel, and won decisions on fouls from Jim Maloney and Al Friedman.

Tuffy's style places him in danger of a knockout. Fighting with an abandon and daring that frequently leaves him open for a right hand sock, he may walk into another mess of trouble on the 30th. He won't, however, if his manager, Jack O'Keefe, has his way in preparing Tuffy for the contest.

Jack Dempsey now plans a series of elimination contests between featherweights at the Coliseum which he hopes will produce a challenger to take Battling Battalino's title. Dempsey's ideas get under way April 21 when Bud Taylor and Fidel La Barba are contracted for a performance.

Kid Chocolate and Earl Mastro are other feathers Dempsey would include in his eliminations. Mastro originally was scheduled to meet La Barba, but canceled the bout because of the death of his mother.

Both Taylor and La Barba are in Chicago and will start training this week. Bud will take time out on the eleventh to journey to Minneapolis, where he will meet Paul Wangley.

Al Fay, Jock Kearns' heavyweight who was ready and rarin' to perform Jack's revenge plot against Napoleon Jack Dorval tomorrow night when Napoleon Jack was injured in his practice drills and forced to cancel the engagement, didn't lose any time getting signed for a fight. He will meet Fred Rees, Pittsburg, Kas., coal miner, Wednesday night at the Fronton, so Frank Mastro announces.

Frank, brother of Earl, recently took over the matchmaking for the club.

Rees has submitted a record which includes a decision over Angus Snyder. He has met Joe King, Jeff Carroll, Babe Hunt, Walter Cobb, Buster Martin, and Buck Easterling, whoever they are.

Baxter Calmes meets Walter Madey in a semi-windup of ten rounds. Calmes had won several amateur titles, including the Kansas-Oklahoma, and Western A. A. U., before he stepped into professional circles. Madey took a six round defeat from Bud Doran of South Chicago the other night and now sees a chance to make good against the former amateur.

A pair of Swedes, Nisse Ramm and Joe Gorman, will clash in another eight rounder. Bud Doran takes on Jim Gibbons, a cousin of the more famous Tommy and Mike Gibbons boys.

Harry Garbell of Chicago and Harold Brown, Cuba, and Sonie Madamba and Paul Leberto complete the card. They will go four rounds. Leberto was the bantamweight champion in the Chicago Golden Gloves series and is making his professional appearance against the Filipino.

Harry Fierro, west side bantamweight, is planning a journey through New England. He is tentatively scheduled to appear in Holyoke, Mass., Portland, Me., and Boston.

PETER DE PAOLO TUNES CAR FOR 500 MILE GRIND

Return to 2 Men Mount Pleases Italian.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 5.—[Special.]—Peter de Paolo, 1925 winner of the international 500 mile race at the Indianapolis speedway and holder of the track record of 101.13 miles an hour for the five century grind, already is here preparing his car for the international race in May.

De Paolo, who is married and the unusually proud dad of two husky children, a boy and a girl—Tommy and Nancy—is an advocate of the two men cars which are the vogue with the new ruling under which cars will race at Indianapolis this year.

It was in the halcyon days of the two men cars of other years that De Paolo, nephew of the famous Ralph de Palma, who won the 500 mile race in 1915, got his chance to learn the tricks of high speed driving which made him one of the outstanding drivers in the world of hurry.

Joins De Palma's Stable.

Returning from the war with a record of distinguished service, Peter reaped the reward of a preënlistment promise when Uncle Ralph permitted him to join De Palma's racing stable. Months rolled around and he had nothing more important to do than wash motor parts in dirty gasoline. Finally he rode his first race with Uncle Ralph. From then on Nephew Peter rode beside Uncle Ralph in many important contests.

Riding beside De Palma, recognized as one of the greatest pilots of all time, gave Pete the theory of high speed racing. Then he wanted a car of his own. But Uncle Ralph would not consent. "You are not ready," was uncle's only explanation.

Determined, Pete obtained a mount. Then he began a series of fence busting antics on tracks throughout the country that seriously threatened not only his well being but the supply of mobile racing cars.

Persistence Is Rewarded.

Without a car and in desperation, De Paolo in 1925 pounced on serious Fred Duesenberg in an attempt to wrangle a car from him. "Pete," said the famous builder of racing cars, "a man would have to be nearly crazy to let you have a car after the way you have been smashing them up. But anybody that is as persistent about this business of racing after all the spills you've had, must be about due for some real sensible driving. I'll give you a trial."

The rest is history. De Paolo got hot in the 1925 race and never halted until they waved the checkered flag over Pete and his record of 101.13 miles an hour for the 500 miles, which still stands.

In 1927, after Leon Duray had hung up a record of 124.18 miles an hour for one lap, De Paolo, piloting a front wheel drive while qualifying, had an accident which kept him from the race. Last year he ran only 25 laps.

But this year he is back with Duesenberg—the man who gave him his big chance.

Phil Scott Plans Beauty Culture in Spare Moments

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 5.—Phil Scott, British heavyweight, has decided to run a beauty shop when he is not occupied with the more strenuous pastime of prize fighting, according to an interview printed in the Daily Telegraph today.

His new mission in life is beautifying women and keeping young men spritely—all of which he intends to accomplish with his own secret process consisting of massaging and diet added to regularity of life and long hours of sleep. The fighter's beauty parlor will be built near his home at Thornton Heath, and is expected to be doing a heavy business in a couple of months.

SOUTH AMERICAN DRIVER TO RACE AT INDIANAPOLIS

Indianapolis, Ind., April 5.—(AP)—The Indianapolis motor speedway today announced the entry of Juan A. Gaudino, South American racing champion, for the annual 500 mile automobile race to be staged here May 30.

Gaudino will drive an American car. He won the last gran premo nacional, an 800 mile road race, in South America.

Army Enters Full Team in Penn Relays

Philadelphia, Pa., April 5.—[Special.]—Leo Novak, coach of the United States military track team, has entered a complete team in the thirty-sixth annual University of Pennsylvania relay carnival April 25 and 26.

Last year the future generals made an excellent showing in the nine events they entered, creating a record in the 480 yard shuttle hurdle relay and getting first places in the hop, step and jump and the running broad jump.

C. E. Greene, who captured the two jumping events, will defend his honors against strong fields. Last year Greene leaped 23 feet 5⅝ inches to capture the broad jump and 47 feet 2⅝ inches to win the hop, step and jump.

Clarkin Piper, who finished second in the 400 meter hurdle race last year, will compete in the same event this year. Luckett, McConnell, Lichirie, and Levenick also will race in this event.

Novak has Lichirie and Luckett, two of the four men who helped win the shuttle hurdle race, available for this year. Murrell, the football star; Duff, McConnell, and Levenick, will fight it out for the other two positions on the team.

The Army is listed to compete in sixteen events, including seven relay races and nine special events. A total of 67 names including duplications, where a man competes in one or more events, have been named for the sixteen events.

The total entry is greater by than at this time a year ago, accord... to H. Jamison Swarts, manager of the carnival. One year ago the total was 438 as compared with 456 this year.

Chrysler does on the road what others do on paper

ONE RIDE in a Chrysler quickly clears up all confusing claims about motor cars.

The dictionary is everybody's property. Words are free. On paper it is a common thing to see motor car performance referred to as "dashing" and "amazing" and "thrilling"—but a ride in a Chrysler quickly proves that Chrysler performance is the real thing.

Don't take your ride on paper—but on the road. Get behind the wheel of a new Chrysler and let the car supply its own adjectives. Let a Chrysler show you the vast difference there is between merely claiming fine performance and actually having it.

It's the unmatchable quality of Chrysler performance—it's the fact that Chrysler does on the road what others do on paper that keeps Chrysler firmly in its leadership. Don't let high-sounding adjectives mislead you.

There's a trend to value . . . a growing preference for things that are known to be good . . . and America is pronouncing with buying orders its verdict that "When better automobiles are built, Buick will build them."

FOXX'S HOMERS HELP ATHLETICS TRIM PHILLIES

Champs Win City Series Opener, 13 to 1.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 5.—(AP)—Two home runs by Jimmy Foxx of the Athletics put interest into the opening of the city baseball championship today when the world champions put down the Philadelphia Nationals, 13 to 1.

The A's walloped the ball in all directions to the delight of 15,000 fans in Shibe park. They hammered Willoughby off the mound in the second inning and gave Koupal a lacing in the fourth, when Bing Miller smacked a triple with the bases full after one man had been forced home with a base on balls. The Phillies ate out of George Earnshaw's hand. Their hits were limited to three, and their solitary run was gained in the third through Earnshaw's wildness.

SHERDEL FACES TAMPA.

Bradenton, Fla., April 5.—(AP)—Manager Gabby Street of the St. Louis Cardinals plans to send Bill Sherdel, his veteran southpaw, over the full route tomorrow against Tampa. If Sherdel, who won 21 games in 1928, and had much difficulty getting batters out last year, shows old time form, Street will be pretty well satisfied with his pitching staff. The Cardinals, scheduled to meet Rochester of the International league in an exhibition game here today, were idle because of rain.

GIANTS AND MEMPHIS TIE.

Memphis, Tenn., April 5.—[U. P.]—The New York Giants went through one of the longest and closest tussles of their exhibition series today, finishing deadlocked with Memphis after eleven innings, 4 to 4. Larry Benton worked ten innings for McGraw's club and was effective except in the third. The Giants were outhit, 11 to 6, after getting away to an early lead.

ROBINS RAINED OUT.

Macon, Ga., April 5.—[U. P.]—Rain prevented the Brooklyn Robins from continuing their spring training games today, washing out a scheduled contest with the Macon team of the "Sally" league. Brooklyn will be idle tomorrow and will open Monday against the Atlanta Crackers. The Robins' cripples are enjoying a needed rest.

RED SOX, 8; INDIANS, 4.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 5.—[U.P.]—One big, explosive rally in the tenth inning gave the Boston Red Sox an 8 to 4 victory over the Indianapolis American Association club here today. The clubs went into the ninth deadlocked, and each scored twice in that inning. The Sox got to Ambrose for five runs in the tenth, the Indians scoring once off Lisenbee, who had relieved Morris in the seventh.

BLUES BEAT BROWNS.

Kansas City, Mo., April 5.—(AP)—The Kansas City Blues of the American association made it two straight over the St. Louis Browns here today, winning 3 to 1. The hitting of Joe Kuhel, Kansas City first baseman, caused the defeat of the Browns.

Tractors Buy Infielder from Birmingham Club

Peoria, Ill., April 5. — [Special.] — Pat Patterson, manager of the Peoria Three I league club, today announced the purchase of First Baseman Russell from the Birmingham, Ala., club. Russell last year was with the Dubuque club in the Valley league. He is a left hander. Tractor recruits have been ordered to report Monday.

Three Beloit College Track Athletes Ruled Ineligible

Beloit, Wis., April 5.—[Special.]—Three Beloit college track athletes have been disqualified by the midwinter exams, it was learned today. They are Harry Schoonover, Rockford, letter man and distance runner; Francis Buck, Beloit, letter man and middle distance point getter, and Hobart Porter, Beloit, pole vaulter.

FACES OLD MATES

White Sox fans know this chap, for it's Bib Falk, who for several years played left field and hammered the ball for Comiskey's American league entry. He will be in the Indians' lineup when the Tribe helps the White Sox pry off the lid April 15 at Comiskey park.

Cubs Lose to Hollywood Stars, 12 to 6

with luck. A lad named Hollerson started to pitch in this round and, with one out, Cuyler walloped a line drive down into the left field corner. The ball bounced off the wall and just as Rehg was about to pick it up it disappeared under a wire gate at the end of the grandstand. Then Wilson drew a pass, Carlyle plucked Stephenson's long drive off the wall, and Tolson was safe on a bad throw to first by Lee. Schulte grounded out to end the inning.

The jarring of Moss for three runs and the decision in the home seventh opened with Rumler singling for the fourth time. Heath was given a walk. Rehg bunted and the ball would have rolled fair let alone, but Moss picked it up, so it went for a hit, filling the bases. Brannon grounded a double play ball to short, but English kicked it, Rumler scoring. Bassler hit in the same direction and English threw him out, Heath scoring. Then Hollerson bounced to Blair, who intended to make a play at the plate but fumbled momentarily, and had to throw out the runner going to first. This allowed Rehg to score unmolested.

Details of the sufferings of Teachout in the eighth when the Stars tapered off their work by scoring five more are hardly necessary. It is sufficient to mention that nine men batted, one hit a triple, two of them hit doubles, two of them exploded singles and one walked.

Cubs Score in Ninth.

Just to prove that while they might be down they weren't out, the Cubs came up for a lone run in the ninth. This happened because Blair tripled to right and Cuyler sent him home on a sacrifice fly.

The Cubs' annual visit to California comes to a close tomorrow. After another game with Hollywood, they will board a train for Kansas City.

Miami Beach, Fla., April 5.—(AP)—The attempt of Gar Wood to establish a speed boat record of 100 miles an hour has been tentatively set for Tuesday or Wednesday, following postponement of a scheduled trial run in Biscayne bay today.

Keeps Hair Neat

Rich-looking, Orderly

IF your hair lacks natural gloss and lustre, or is difficult to keep in place it is very easy to give it that rich, glossy, refined and . . . orderly appearance . . . so essential to well-groomed men.

Just rub a little Glostora through your hair . . . once or twice a week . . . or after shampooing, and your hair will then stay, each day . . . just as you comb it.

Glostora softens the hair and makes it pliable. Then—even stubborn hair—will stay in place of its own accord.

It gives your hair that natural, rich, well-groomed effect, instead of leaving it stiff and artificial looking as pastes do.

Glostora also keeps the scalp soft, and the hair healthy by restoring the natural oils from which the hair derives its health, life, gloss and lustre.

Try it!—See how easy it is to keep your hair combed—any style you like—whether brushed lightly or combed down flat. If you want your hair to lie down particularly smooth and tight, after applying Glostora, simply moisten your hair with water, before brushing it.

ZEP COMMANDER GETS RIGHT TO CARRY U. S. MAIL

Trans-Oceanic Service Moves Step Closer.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

The day of transoceanic transportation of mail, express, and passengers by lighter than air craft was brought closer by the recent joining of American and German financial interests to foster the opening of regular service across the Atlantic and the assurance of coöperation given by the United States postoffice department.

Definite steps to carry out the plans of Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, are being taken by the International Zeppelin Transport company in conjunction with a group of concerns including the National City company, the Goodyear Zeppelin company, Luftschiffbau Zeppelin [the German concern], the Carbide and Carbon Chemicals company, and United Aircraft corporation.

Two Zeps Being Built.

On this side of the water the Goodyear Zeppelin company is at work on two 6,500,000 cubic foot zeppelins now under construction at Akron. Plans call for the construction of two more at Friedrichshafen, Germany, and the building of operating docks both here and abroad.

While it appears that the Atlantic will be the first ocean to be crossed by regular dirigible service, work is also under way for the extension of trans-Pacific lines. California and Hawaii are to be lipked first by such a service and later the line is to be extended to the Philippines and Japan. Plans call for the construction of Zeppelins here and the building of hangars in California and Hawaii.

These are steps in a larger plan contemplated by the commander of the Graf Zeppelin. He is working toward the girdling of the earth with a great transportation system coördinating airships, airplanes, steamships, and railroads with the Zeppelin lines as the nucleus.

Noninflammable Gas.

In a conference with Postmaster General Brown last week Dr. Eckener was assured the coöperation of the postoffice department in opening up dirigible service for the mail.

The conference brought up the problem of obtaining adequate supplies of noninflammable gas for lighter-than-air craft in order to eliminate the fire hazard incident to the use of hydrogen.

Dr. Eckener informed Mr. Brown that German chemists are now at work on a process for making hydrogen gas noninflammable and he was confident that the experiments would prove satisfactory. He expressed the belief that such a gas would be produced in sufficient quantities as soon as the cost of production could be reduced.

"I believe that supplies of helium gas will be discovered in other places than the United States," Dr. Eckener said.

The German commander completed arrangements with the postoffice department for transporting mail on the Graf Zeppelin on its forthcoming flight from Europe to South America and the United States which will be undertaken from Friedrichshafen early in May.

The trip is being undertaken to gain further experience in flying the Atlantic with Zeppelins. Several preliminary trips are expected to be carried out before the opening of regularly scheduled service which awaits the construction of flying equipment and ground facilities.

AVIATION QUESTIONS

Questions relating to aviation are answered in this section by Maj. R. W. Schroeder, famous world war flyer, who formerly held the world's altitude record. Inquiries should be addressed to the Aviation Department, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Q.—Could you advise me where the office of the Pilots' Association of America is located?—A. G. P., Racine, Wis.

A.—510 West Merle court, San Leandro, Cal.

Q.—If a person wears glasses, is there much chance for him to become a commercial pilot?—F. E. C., Aurora, Ill.

A.—See Dr. W. P. MacCracken, 24 North Wabash avenue, Chicago. If he says you can pass the physical examination necessary to procure a commercial license, your chances are very nearly as good as those of a man who does not wear glasses. Character, level thinking, and flying skill are much more important factors. Some of the best pilots in the country have worn spectacles.

Q.—What is a floating aileron?—M. M. L., Elgin, Ill.

A.—Structurally the ordinary aileron might be described as a part or section of a wing which has been cut out from the main structure, left in place, but hinged so that it can be moved by control arrangements. The floating aileron, on the other hand, is not part of the wing but is an independent auxiliary surface attached to the wing tip. It "floats" like a weather vane whose axis is horizontal instead of vertical. Most of the time, like the weather vane, it assumes a "neutral" position parallel to the air passing around it and exerts no influence whatsoever on the direction of motion or flight attitude of the plane. However, if the control stick in the cockpit is moved away from a central position, to one side or the other, it automatically "takes hold" of the ailerons and turns them in such a manner as to raise or lower one of the wings. Floating ailerons are an improvement over the ordinary aileron in that there is no danger of spoiling the flow of air over the wing when the plane is flying at a slow speed and destroying the lift. They are also somewhat more positive in action.

SPAIN PLANS TO START FIRST AIR LINE OVER OCEAN

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The first transoceanic air service may be established by Spain if present plans carried on between the government and an air transport company are realized, according to reports reaching the department of commerce here.

The company has been authorized by the Spanish government to establish a dirigible service between Seville and Buenos Aires, employing dirigibles of a minimum capacity of 40 passengers and 10 metric tons of cargo.

The preliminary survey of the line is to be completed by July 30, 1931, the report states. Approximately $4,162,000 has been set aside by the government to aid in financing the project.

AIR MAIL DOUBLES.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—America's 25 air mail lines carried twice as many pounds over the 26,000 miles of mail routes in 1929 as they did in 1928, the American Air Transport association reports to the department of commerce. While 7,000,000 pounds were flown during the last year, only 3,542,079 pounds were carried in 1928, the announcement read.

DETROIT SHOWS NEWEST STYLES IN AIR CARRIERS

Aviation Notables Dedicate Municipal Field.

Detroit, Mich., April 5.—[Special.]—Detroit's third annual exposition of the nation's aviation industry opened today at the city's new million dollar exposition hangar building, three miles from the heart of the city. The show, which will continue throughout the coming week, enjoys national recognition as an all-American display and promises to be the outstanding aeronautical event of the year.

The dedication of the municipal airport and the opening of the show, which were semi-private, were participated in by Mayor Charles Bowles, Charles McYoung, assistant secretary of commerce for aviation; Edward S. Evans, chairman of the board of commerce show committee, a score of famous flyers, and the entire city council.

Seven large planes flew with 75 prominent federal, state, and city officials from the Ford airport in Dearborn to the new municipal airport for the dedication ceremonies. Among the guests were Col. Charles M. Young, Gov. Fred W. Green, Mayor Bowles, William Mayo, chief engineer of the Ford Motor company; Eddie Stinson, Eddie Rickenbacker, William P. McCracken, former assistant secretary of commerce in charge of aeronautics; Alvin Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Car company; Stanley E. Knauss, Maj. Thomas G. Lanphier, and W. I. Glover, assistant postmaster general in charge of air mail.

Eighty-five planes of every type and size manufactured in the country are on the floor of the hangar, which is 1,017 feet long by 299 feet in width, the largest airplane hangar in the world. Huge planes, from the majestic 32 passenger Fokker liner down to the single seater, are arrayed close together in the building and around them are grouped the booths of the hundred or more accessory exhibitors.

Several new models, never before shown are included in this year's display, and the new Packard-Diesel motor today made its initial bow.

..SWEEPING UPWARD in popularity—

There really never has been anything quite like the success of the Chrysler-built De Soto Six. It rushed into sudden popularity the moment the motoring public laid eyes on it—and went on to set up a new first-year sales record for the industry. That success grew and grew and today continues without lag or let-up. All this is simply a matter of cause and effect. The De Soto Six is a huge success in sales because it is a huge success in engineering and manufacturing—a six that definitely offers the owner more for his money in all those qualities that make for enjoyment, pride of possession and greater value. By no means consider buying any Six without taking a ride in a De Soto Six.

Gardner Wins South American Race Classic

Lucino Murro, Noted Race Driver, Pilots Gardner Stock Roadster at a Mile a Minute Clip to Win Buenos Aires Event.

Speed

A Gardner Series "150," eight-in-line roadster driven by Lucino Murro, one of the best known and most successful race drivers in South America, won first honors in the 210 mile Grand Premier National Races, held recently by the Automobile Club of Argentina on its dirt race track at Salto near Buenos Aires, according to news received by T. F. Fowler, manager of Export Division of the Gardner Motor Company, Inc., from Pablo Camino & Co., distributors for Argentina.

The "Grand National," an annual event and one of the most important races of the year in South America, is open to all classes of cars, without regard to power capacity. It is of 12 laps' duration.

Murro, driving the Gardner roadster, was the tenth entry in the race but went into the fifth lap ahead of the entire list of contestants which included a number of machines above the price class of the Gardner.

At the end of the twelve laps, the duration of the race, Murro in a final burst of speed, dashed over the finish line seven minutes ahead of the nearest competitor and scored another victory for the Gardner car made in St. Louis.

Murro's official time for the 210 miles of the race was 3 hours, 21 minutes and 37 seconds, which gives some idea of the terrific speed at which he circled this difficult dirt track. In winning this event Murro lowered the previous record established by himself in a similar race last year.

GARDNERS for Minneapolis' Finest

The speed, stamina, endurance and special fitness of Gardner cars for the exacting requirements of police work were again demonstrated recently when the Minneapolis Police Department, which has used Gardners since 1925, placed an order through the Downes Motor Company, distributors, at 1656 Hennepin Avenue, Minneapolis, for six Series "120" Sport Sedans. The cars which recently were shipped by boat to the Minnesota metropolis are now in the service of the police department.

"In 1925," said "Pat" Downes, president of the Downes Motor Company, on a visit to the factory, "the Minneapolis police department placed its initial order for six Gardner cars. In 1926 the City Council and Police Committee were so impressed with the remarkable performance of the St. Louis cars, that they placed another order for six touring cars, trading in all other makes of cars and using Gardners exclusively.

"In 1929, the rapid growth of the city of Minneapolis made it necessary for the police department to purchase six more new automobiles. This time the City Council and the Police Committee again voted unanimously for Gardner cars, and this action resulted in the recent purchase of six Series '120' Sport Sedans."

In April, 1927, Mr. F. W. Brunkskill, Superintendent of Police of Minneapolis, said in a letter to the factory:

"This department has just received six new Gardner sedans recently purchased. At this writing we have in service twelve Gardners, having had six Gardner touring cars previous to the last purchase.

"We are of the opinion that the Gardner automobile is one of the best machines for police service that is on the market today. Our operating cost is a little less than four cents per mile, exclusive of depreciation and insurance. We are very well satisfied with our present equipment."

Gardner Wins Beauty Contest in Brazil

In a spirited contest with ten leading American and foreign cars, Gardner, eight-in-line De Luxe sedan entered by Amaral, Lima, Ltda., Braca Julio de Mesquita, 2 Sao Paulo distributors for Brazil, won by a margin of 35 votes over the nearest competitor with a 1612 margin over the third contestant. By polling the highest number of votes in the contest, the Gardner sedan carried off first honors and the first prize, a gold medal. The Gardner car polled a total of 3,120 votes out of a total of 13,944 votes cast for the ten entrants in the beauty contest.

The object of the contest, which was held under the auspices of the Dairio de Sao Paulo, leading newspaper of Sao Paulo, Brazil, was to let the people of that city determine by direct vote the most beautiful automobile among the ten entries in the contest. Points of much discussion on which the voters laid particular emphasis were: Smartness in design, artistic coachwork, grace of line and contour, decorative motifs, color combinations, exquisite interiors and accouterments for both utility and merit.

The voting was carried on over a perjod of several weeks in order to permit the people to make their decisions after seeing the cars on display at the various dealers' showrooms and on the streets. The ballot box was opened in the presence of the representatives of the Diario de Sao Paulo and the representatives of Amaral, Lima, Ltda., Gardner distributors for Brazil, and the representatives of the other nine automobiles entered in the contest before a large crowd in the Hall of the Popular Library of the newspaper before a large crowd of enthusiastic motorists who cheered their favorite automobile as results of the balloting were posted on a large bulletin board.

The final count of the ballots showing the votes cast and standing of the contestants is as follows: Gardner first with 3,120 votes; second, 3,085; third, 1,508; fourth 1425; fifth, 1,221; sixth, 1,103; seventh, 1,096; eighth, 736; ninth, 380; tenth, 270.

CHICAGO FACING SAME PROBLEM IT DID IN 1856

Must Raise Its Streets Out of Traffic Morass.

BY HAL FOUST.

Chicago today is facing a problem not unlike that which confronted the infant city in 1856, when it was recognized that a major program of street improvements was essential to the future growth and prosperity of the community.

Seventy-four years ago the town squatted in a swamp and horses and wagons mired in the muddy trails between the rows of cabins. Business suffered from the difficulties of transportation.

Today the city's streets, considered as a whole, are torn, worn, and antiquated. Rapid motor transportation is blocked by congestion, frequent streams of cross traffic, parking, and pedestrians.

Street Levels Raised.

In 1856 the council, under the administration of Mayor Thomas Dyer, passed an ordinance raising the level of the city's streets from 4 to 7 feet. It was done, an accomplishment that attracted the world's attention to he ingenuity and energy of Chicago.

Today another elevation of streets is proposed to meet the new crisis. The Chicago plan commission's engineers have mapped a system of express highways with continuous grade separations that would furnish rapid motor transportation to all parts of the city. It is an heroic program, but no greater for a city of three million than was the 1856 job for the town of 70,000.

In the early '50s the city threw planks across its mud holes. The drainage was so poor that the boards and logs were of little avail. The elevation of the streets was agitated for years before a civic leader of broad vision, Thomas Dyer, a railroad director in private life, literally lifted the town from the swamp.

Express Boulevards Growing.

Chicago, in the last few years, has labored with temporary expedients, with street widenings, and with new pavement, that helped but did not untie the tangle of through traffic and local traffic, parked cars, and pedestrians. The agitation for modern express boulevards is growing; bond issues for the Austin-Kinzie and the Avondale superhighways have been submitted at the polls, and defeated. A Moses has not appeared to lead the way.

"The time is ripe," said Eugene Taylor, manager of the Chicago Plan commission, "for Chicago to revolutionize its street system and eliminate grade crossings on its through routes. The commercial and social advantages of the modern automobile are not being enjoyed fully in Chicago because of the obsolete streets.

"We are running express traffic on pavements suitable for local traffic and parking only. And the surfaces of these local streets are breaking down.

Financing Change Needed.

"Private property owners are refusing to pay special assessments for pavement in front of their homes when to do so invites through traffic to their street. This is putting Chicago's side streets into a deplorable condition.

"We need a revolution in street financing, as well as in street engineering. Fast traffic arteries are a benefit to property over wide areas, but speedways do not always enhance the value of abutting property.

"No one wants a stream of fast moving vehicles whirring by his home, any more than he wants a railroad in his front yard. It is a hazard and the fumes are unpleasant. Nor is through traffic a benefit to outlying business streets when it interferes with parking and when it frightens housewives from motoring to the neighborhood market.

"An equitable financial scheme must take into consideration the effect of traffic upon property values and adjust special benefit assessments accordingly. Since a long superhighway in Chicago would be enjoyed by the public generally, a general tax should pay the bulk of the cost."

Different Methods.

It might be that the gasoline tax, with cities receiving a larger portion of the levy, will answer the financial problem. Maybe a toll is the solution, with the improvement owned either by private or public capital. Maybe it will be bond issues, with the burden juggled to fit benefits. Or a combination of these methods of raising money.

"If we can get through traffic off the surface streets," Mr. Taylor continued, "property owners will be willing to pay for pavement for local use. The improvement of the secondary system by special assessment will be an easy development after the primary system is built.

"Chicago, as in '56, must pull itself out of the morass of traffic."

AUTO INDUSTRY TO SHOW LARGE GAINS IN MARCH

Detroit, Mich., April 5.—[Special.]—Leading automobile executives claim that the industry is making long strides toward a return to normal. Substantial gains in new car sales throughout the country are reported with unusual progress in the liquidation of new and used cars, as a result of vigorous pressure throughout the industry.

The majority of companies are expected to show a March production total considerably in excess of February figures, averaging about a 25 per cent gain, but in a few instances climbing as high as 40 and even 50 per cent. Few concerns will show no gains at all. Almost without exception the various concerns have reported incoming orders gaining steadily and setups now being considered for April provide for substantial increases in output during that month.

BELGIUM WANTS MACHINE GUNS AS FRONTIER GUARD

Feel Old Fortresses Were Failures.

BY ANN SOMERS HOUSE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRUSSELS, April 5.—There is a big hole in Belgium's eastern defense line; and through that hole, the Germans will invade and overrun the little kingdom a second time at the start of the next big European war. This is the opinion of three leading Belgian army chiefs, who object to the "old-fashioned" line of fortresses along the Belgian-German border. They rather would build there an invisible Chinese wall of concrete dug-outs for machine guns and other light artillery.

Generals Maglinse, Hellebaut and Van Acker believe that fortresses are a matter of the past. "Battlefield organization" of a country is the condition toward which European war experts are heading. "Battlefield organization" means using every one of nature's wiles to build a concrete dug-out back of a hill, in a ravine, underneath rocks and along the rivers and forests of a country.

Allies Will Defend.

"Every such dug-out is like a strong rib in the anatomy of our war time forces," the generals say. "If our entire eastern frontier were organized that way and watched by elite troops, our soldiers would fight the enemy as soon as he invades the first yard of Belgian soil. They would defend the country, foot by foot; and in the meantime our full wartime army would arrive together with the allied troops and beat the enemy at the very entrance door of Belgium."

That the allies will defend Belgium again in the next all-European war is the official creed in Belgium. "On the first day of mobilization, our frontier will be defended by six Belgian army divisions, which are always kept ready to fight at a moment's notice. They will be joined by 'x' allied divisions all along the frontier," said Gen. Galet of the Belgian army recently. How much the 'x' exactly stands for is the secret of the Belgian and French general staffs.

France Is Busy.

Belgian and French soldiers learned their lesson of modern warfare when the German concrete dugouts with their machine guns stopped the bravest assaults of allied soldiers, despite the noisy support of the heaviest allied artillery. The Belgian infantry, above all, lost fantastic percentages of men in 1918 when it attacked the German concrete line called "Flandern II. Stellung" and the "death trenches" of Thourout-Thielt.

(With France now building up a special secret fund to defend her frontiers and drawing an up to the minute invisible concrete line all along her northeastern border, from Dunkirk to Longwy, the Belgian generals feel Belgium ought to do her share, too. For economy's sake, Belgium's parliament has kept down military defense expenses to a minimum since the armistice. The damaged fortresses have been patched up as far as possible, because this proved cheaper than building those "invisible concrete walls" along the German border.

HERTZ CALLS AIR TRIP HIS "RICHEST LIFE EXPERIENCE"

Miami, Fla., April 5.—[Special.]—The John D. Hertz family's air tour through the West Indies and as far south as Trinidad is the richest experience in the life of the taxicab magnate. He so expressed it today when his twin motored amphibian Three Johns landed at the Pan-American airport, completing a 5,500 mile trip.

"The West Indies is a veritable paradise from the air," Mr. Hertz said. "Vivid tropical coloring made a brilliant carpet beneath us. One volcano was seen in action, Mont Pelee. No member of the party was ill and the only discomfort was from mosquitoes found in some parts of Cuba."

Flying was done in the morning, and the afternoon hours were enjoyed on the ground.

Those in the party were Mr. and Mrs. Hertz, their daughter, Helen, and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Talbott of Dayton, O.

I. C. C. LOSING ITS RAIL CONTROL, EASTMAN FEARS

Power Is Threatened by Holding Companies.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—[Special.]—Through the Allegheny corporation and other holding companies the Van Sweringen brothers now have control of all the railroads the interstate commerce commission denied them, Joseph E. Eastman, member of the commission, declared today. He gave this as an important reason why the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce should make a searching investigation of railroad holding companies and investment trusts.

He told the committee that members of the commission feared that body was losing control over railroad unifications through the activities of certain holding companies.

The Pennroad corporation, controlled 100 per cent by the Pennsylvania Railroad company, and the Allegheny corporation of the Van Sweringens, he said, are the principal holding companies. He named several others.

It is a question in Mr. Eastman's mind, he told the committee, whether certain acquisitions of the Pennroad corporation are not in violation of the Clayton anti-trust law. The commission is studying this point.

Asked whether he considered the acquisition of control of railroads by holding companies against the public interest, Commissioner Eastman replied that in his opinion it was decidedly not so. Whether the acquisitions actually made by the Pennroad corporation, for example, are or are not in the public interest he thought must be left to future developments.

The investigation was authorized several weeks ago by the house of representatives and is expected to last for months.

Charles D. Reed, weather recorder here, said deficient rainfall during March and so far in April was responsible.

Services at the Augsburg Evangelical church in the afternoon were attended by President Wilhelm Miklas and Chancellor Schober. The remains will be taken to the United States for burial next week.

SLAYS BANDIT SOON AFTER HE TRAPS FORGER

New York, April 5.—(AP)—A jeweler's son who three weeks ago brought about the capture of an alleged forger, today killed a man who attempted to rob his father's store at 160th street and Broadway.

Murray Kalish apparently was alone in the establishment when the man entered, drew a pistol and ordered him to the rear room. He started to tie Kalish's hands behind his back.

Just then Joseph Lazar, a watchmaker, emerged from the washroom. The bandit wheeled and ordered him to stand beside Kalish. But Kalish, taking advantage of this distraction, jerked his hands free. He pulled his own revolver from its armpit holster and fired twice. The bandit was dead when police arrived.

Three weeks ago a man entered the store and tried to induce the son to cash a $20 traveler's check. His actions aroused young Kalish's suspicions and when the latter reached for a telephone the man ran out.

Kalish gave chase and fired two shots in the air. A detective was nearby and the man was captured. Police said the check was part of the loot of a Matawan [N. J.] bank robbery.

WHAT WE STAND FOR!

1. THE BALLOT:—The Republican column on the ballot belongs to the People for Principle, not to the Bosses for Profit.

2. BI-PARTISANISM:—The two-party system of government has stood the test of time. Bi-partisanism leads to corruption and results in third party movements.

3. LOCAL INSOLVENCY:—Bossism, coalition, secret deals and trades have split both major parties and resulted in a financial collapse of departments of local government.

4. NEW LEADERSHIP DEMANDED, ALL THE OLD GANG MUST GO:—A crisis has come in the management of the Republican Party, the people are disgusted, and all hope of harmony between selfish, ambitious leaders of warring factions has been abandoned. The only remedy is a new leadership.

5. GIVE YOUTH A CHANCE:—Greater recognition of the enthusiasm of youth and the wisdom of age in party councils and leadership is imperative for Republican success in November.

6. SAME OLD SYSTEM RULES:—Responsibility for government rests with the people, therefore the initiative must be restored to them. Business malfeasors, crime kings, ballot box thieves and special interests have perfected a SYSTEM through an alliance with crooked political bosses which continues in power after election with only a change of faces.

7. PROFITEERING REFORMERS:—Reformers for profit only, who savagely attack public officials and then deal privately with the bosses to enrich themselves and further their personal ambitions are ENEMIES OF GOOD GOVERNMENT.

8. HIGH TAX BILLS MUST GO. ROUT THE TAX SHARKS:—Reducing taxes by fixers for profit, which shifts an unfair burden on property owners less able to pay, is a growing evil of boss rule. Political favoritism for the few must be eliminated in behalf of equity, justice and liberty for all. The payment of taxes must become a cheerful privilege of good citizenship and not an increasing and burdensome levy for graft and misgovernment.

9. WELFARE OF CHICAGO AREA:—Encouragement of education, music, art and literature as a development of the cultural and spiritual welfare of the Chicago area is a proper function of good government.

10. FAITH BEFORE BOND ISSUES:—Faith in public officials must be restored before great needed public improvement bond issues can be carried as a means of relieving unemployment and in preparation for the Century of Progress, World's Fair, 1933.

11. LAW ENFORCEMENT:—Self - government, reason and conscience, man's inalienable rights, and the sanctity of his home must not be invaded by the fanatical abuse of power under the guise of law enforcement.

12. A SCHOOL OF POLITICS:—Through a People's School of Politics voters must be reminded of the principles of Republicanism and good government. The word politician in its true sense means unselfish, efficient public service.

13. YOUR OWN CANDIDATES:—The will of the people of the Republican party has been expressed in the selection of men and women as candidates of the People's Republican Organization who were recommended by business, commercial, manufacturing, professional and labor organizations, improvement associations, clubs, societies and other worthy groups and ratified at a mass meeting of the people.

14. CLEAN HOUSE:—Give the management of the party of Lincoln, Grant, Roosevelt, Coolidge and Hoover back to the people for principle and KICK OUT the leadership which has brought insolvency, suffering and international shame to Chicago and Cook County. Republican Primary Tuesday, April 8th.

WHEAT PRICES RISE SHARPLY ON DROUGHT NEWS

Close Shows Gains of 2 to 2 5-8 Cents.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Kansas experienced the driest month of March in the last 43 years according to a report from the United States weather bureau, and as the state has about 30 per cent of the total winter wheat acreage of the country the market has been affected in a radical manner.

Prices swept forward yesterday in an impressive manner to a new high on the present movement and closed 2@2¾c higher with May finishing at $1.15¾@1.15¾, and July, $1.17@1.17¼. Commission houses and local operators were persistent buyers with the bulge checked by selling against offers and on resting orders. Winnipeg led the advance and closed 3¼c higher for the day.

The trade sold wheat early in the week on an estimate by the Santa Fé railroad suggesting a bumper wheat crop in Kansas, but President Storey of that road who has just completed a trip over the system says that the outlook has changed somewhat due to the lack of rain. If the latter comes shortly the wheat crop will be all right, but the lack of moisture is disturbing.

Bull Markets in Grains.

Grain values were on the upgrade the greater part of the week and the finish was well toward the best figures with wheat at the finish showing 5@5¾c; corn, 3¾@4¼c; oats, 1¾@1¾c, and rye, 4¾@6¼c higher than the close of the previous week, while lard was 30@32½c, and bellies 45@52½c higher.

Cloudless skies throughout the winter wheat belt continue to dominate the action of the market, and the forecast suggested no relief over the week-end, with each day adding to the seriousness of the situation. Dust storms were reported in parts of Nebraska and in South Dakota, and the undertone of the market was decidedly firm throughout the day. While there was a noticeable lack of actual damage reports from the greater part of the winter wheat area, apprehension of rapid crop deterioration is increasing both here and abroad, and part of the strength in the Winnipeg market was on the dryness in the southwest.

The weekly forecast promises showers over the greater part of the agricultural sections of the country Monday or Tuesday, but operators who sold futures on the prediction were forced to cover at higher prices later. Heavy profit taking was in evidence early, but the buying was persistent and the best prices on the present movement were made toward the last in the face of selling by holders of weekly offers, in which there was a good profit.

Corn Higher with Wheat.

Liverpool closed ⅝@1¼d lower due to the reaction in American markets on Friday, while Buenos Aires finished 1@1¼c higher. There is plenty of low grade wheat available in Argentina, but choice grain is scarce. Export sales at the seaboard during the day were limited, although there was a good demand for all varieties from Europe.

Longs were rather persistent sellers of corn, but the market averaged higher in sympathy with wheat and closed with net gains of ⅛@½c, with May, 86⅝@86⅞c, and July, 88¾@88¾c. Commission houses bought May and sold July at 2c difference. The country sold 45,000 bu cash grain to arrive during the day, although weather was decidedly favorable for plowing throughout the west. Buenos Aires futures gained 1c for the day.

Trade in oats was not large with the market influenced mainly by the action of other grains. Prices held within narrow limits and closed unchanged to ⅛c higher, May and July being 45¼c. Seeding is making rapid progress throughout the west.

Rye made only a moderate response to the strength in wheat, trading being light and the bulges ran into commission house selling orders. The finish was 1¼@2c higher, with May, 69¼@69½c, and July, 75¼c. A small lot of American rye was sold for export on Friday, the first in some time.

KANSAS CROP PROSPECTS

"We consider that Kansas has the largest acreage ever planted to winter wheat, and present prospects are for the smallest abandonment," says the Shannon Grain company of Kansas City, in a message to the Ullmann Grain company. "The southwest can raise the largest crop ever produced. Only top soil condition is dry. However, without high winds, no material damage is expected with normal rains, which naturally follow present prolonged dry spells. The southwest produces larger yield and better quality on short straw rather than on heavy growth."

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP)—SUGAR—Raw, was quiet today with the undertone unsettled by the break in futures and buyers as a rule inclined to hold off and await fresh developments. The only sale reported was 26,000 bags of Porto Rican for May shipment to an outport refiner at 3.64c, while store sugars were offered at the close at 3.55c. In one of the most active Saturday sessions ever witnessed raw futures broke into new low ground for the season, and while final prices were a shade above the lowest they were still 4 to 6 points below the previous close. Approximate sales, 94,150 tons. Closing prices, No. 1, follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Foreign demand for cash wheat was active yesterday, but no estimates were received as to the quantities sold abroad. The pool was understood to have done a good business. Local handlers sold 6,000 bu wheat; 35,000 bu corn, and 6,000 bu barley.

There was little wheat offered in the local spot market, with the basis steady. No. 2 red was 2@3c over; No. 2 hard, 2@2½c under, and No. 1 northern, 1@2c under May.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Wheat prices are the highest on the present upturn. It is a weather market and sentiment is more favorable to the buying side on breaks. Traders, as a rule, dislike to see a sharp advance at present, as it is liable to cut off export business unless foreigners change their attitude and become bullish over the change in the crop prospects in the southwest. Millers are buying wheat steadily from the government, which is doing the bulk of the business.

There is said to have been heavy covering of short wheat in Chicago and Winnipeg the last few days by stock traders who have been bearish for some time. A change in the crop prospect has reversed the ideas of practically all of those who were bearish.

COTTON MARKET IRREGULAR

Old crop deliveries were stronger yesterday and closed 4 to 11 points higher. New crop months were easier and unchanged to 5 points lower. Liverpool closed 8 to 13 points higher, with spot sales 3,300 bales. There was an advance early of 4 to 10 points, followed by a reaction. Weather was warmer over the belt with showers over the eastern belt and predictions of fair and cooler for Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle. The south has been a good seller of cotton in New York for several days. Coöperative brokers have also been good sellers. Trade sentiment, however, leans to the buying side on breaks. Prices follow:

BUTTER PRICES ADVANCE

For the third consecutive day November butter futures advanced to a new high for the season on the Chicago Mercantile exchange and closed at 41¾c, a gain of ¼c or $48 a car. A similar gain in April and a new high in that delivery were not held to the finish. Better spot figures and average receipts caused the strength. Sales were 29 cars and receipts 10,461 tubs.

A pause in the bull movement in egg futures, induced by heavy receipts, brought declines of ⅛@¼c in good Saturday trading. Sales were 93 cars and receipts, 34,069 cases. Prices follow:

ASK INJUNCTION TO BLOCK STEEL MERGER MEETING

Cleveland, O., April 5.—(AP)—Suit for injunction to restrain officers and directors of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company from merging the company with the Bethlehem Steel corporation and to forbid a meeting of stockholders of Youngstown Sheet and Tube from being held Tuesday was filed in federal court here today.

The suit was filed in the name of B. R. Shover of Pittsburgh, a Sheet and Tube stockholders, by Attorney H. J. Crawford, who represents the interests of Cyrus S. Eaton, leader of the stockholders in opposition to the merger.

The bill accompanying the request for injunction alleged the stockholders of Youngstown Sheet and Tube have not been sufficiently informed concerning the merger to decide how to vote.

Among the prominent figures mentioned in the application are James A. Campbell, chairman; Frank Purnell, president, and H. G. Dalton, director, of Sheet and Tube. According to the petition, Dalton and Campbell used an auditor's report as the basis of their negotiations and did not exercise their own judgment or discretion in the matter.

PROFIT TAKING FAILS TO HALT CHICAGO RISE

Grigsby - Grunow Volume Sets Trading Pace.

Profit grabbers failed to reverse the upward trend of Chicago stocks yesterday in one of the most active week-end sessions of the year. At the end of the two hours net gains outnumbered losses about two to one among the active issues. A total turnover of 238,600 shares was chalked up, which was at the rate of nearly 600,000 shares for a full five hour session.

Grigsby-Grunow set the pace with an individual turnover of more than 17,000 shares. But buying enthusiasm over plans of the company to branch out into other than radio manufacture was offset by selling on the theory that the news was out. The shares finished with a small fractional decline.

Additional Details.

According to additional details made known, the Grigsby-Grunow company plans to manufacture not only electrical refrigerators, but other household equipment. The G. G. Household Utilities corporation was incorporated yesterday as an Illinois concern to deal in electrical refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, mangles, ironing devices and other household utilities.

The authorized capital is 600,000 shares of no par value. The location of the company is the same as that of the Grigsby-Grunow company, 5801 Dickens avenue, Chicago, and the directors are B. J. Grigsby and W. C. Grunow, heads of the Grigsby-Grunow company, and J. R. Cardwell, J. C. Winans, J. L. Overlock, R. R. Trimarco, and Albert J. Mecklenburger.

The investment group was soft. Corporation Securities common and allotment certificates and Insull Utilities lost small fractions, while Chicago Corporation finished unchanged. In the public utilities group Middle West Utilities eased a bare fraction, but Utilities Power and Light A jumped 2½ and Cities Service, Central Public Utilities A, Inland Utilities, North American Gas and Electric A and Seaboard Utilities made fractional gains.

Rumor Cutten Purchases.

In the general list Merchants and Manufacturers preferred jumped nearly two points on rumors of buying by Arthur Cutten. U. S. Gypsum moved up 2¾, National Standard rose 2¼, Reliance hopped 2⅞, and Jefferson Electric advanced 1½ points. Electrical Household, Great Lakes Aircraft, Kalamazoo Stove, Libby-McNeill, and Yates Machinery made fractional gains.

The fifty most active stocks traded on the Chicago stock exchange last week had a market value of $2,985,812,225 at the close of business yesterday, compared with $2,956,359,246 at the close of the previous week, according to a compilation by Swift, Langill & Henke. This represents an increase of $29,452,979, or 0.99 per cent. The analysis shows that 31 of these stocks were traded in last year.

Claim Dissolution Decree Spurred Standard Oil Empire

OFFSHOOTS NOW RANK WITH THE PARENT FIRM

Striplings Grow Into Giant Branches.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 5.—One of the largest stockholders in Standard Oil said the other day that the growth of the far flung Rockefeller petroleum empire had been accelerated rather than retarded by the Supreme court dissolution decree of 1911.

He cited the fact that of the thirty-two subsidiary branches which the high court stripped from the old Standard of New York tree, three have today attained a stature as great or greater than that of the parent company.

The Standard of New Jersey as it is constituted today, with all of its old subsidiaries functioning independently, is infinitely greater in scope and influence in the oil industry than its principal owners reckoned it ever would be when it was cut adrift and put "on its own" nineteen years ago. Its twenty-five million shares have roughly a market value of $1,880,000,000.

The Standard Oil Company of California today has outstanding close to 13,000,000 shares with an aggregate market value about the same as that of the parent company when the weaning process was carried out in 1912. The Standard of Indiana, another robust offspring, has outstanding more than 16,800,000 shares with a total market value that is within striking distance of $1,000,000,000 and also a rival in size of its parent.

The Standard Oil Company of New York, another lusty child of the old trust, is lifting itself into the billion dollar class by absorbing the Vacuum Oil company which, like itself, belongs to the old line Standard Oil family. This merge has been approved by the directors of both companies, but is being attacked in the courts by the federal government as violation of the Supreme court dissolution decree.

Illinois Lags as Insurance Sales Center

BY SCRUTATOR.

Life insurance sales in the United States were larger in January and February, 1930, than in the same months of 1929. It is likewise noteworthy that even in October and November, when the financial deflation was at its worst, the new business written by life insurance companies was larger than during the corresponding periods of 1928.

The increase this year is not measured in small fractions. The life insurance sales research bureau, using figures covering 78 companies which have about 88 per cent of all the legal reserve insurance in the country, shows that February new business was 7 per cent higher than a year ago and the two months together 6 per cent higher.

Crosses 100 Billion Mark.

Last year, for the first time, the amount of insurance on the lives of Americans crossed the 100 billion mark. In the aggregate, more than a year's income for all the people of the country is guaranteed by the companies. Such a comparison, except in the matter of mere size, is worthless, but it furnishes an indication that thrift is still being practiced on a grand scale by conservative investors.

Life insurance probably is the most conservative of all investments. Leaving aside the protection features, it is likely that most policyholders receive a return on the premiums paid in that does not compare favorably with savings bank interest. Yet there have been statements by bankers that the insurance companies have attracted money out of their savings departments. Certainly savings accounts fell off while insurance premiums were being taken in larger volume.

Cites Advantage.

The imperative necessity of keeping up the insurance payments has its advantages. Any bank account, even one of the savings variety, is a temptation to spending, or to investment with a larger return. On the contrary, a failure to pay premiums means an actual loss to the insured and a borrowing against such savings is recognized as a possible deprivation of comforts to the beneficiaries, who in the usual case are partially or wholly helpless in an economic sense.

However, in times of stress policy holders do freely use borrowing power with the insurance companies. The sales research bureau asserts that many speculators were saved from ruin last fall by the sums they raised on their policies. It sees these borrowings as a possible danger a little later to the continuance of policies in force, because the lessened protection and the interest on the loan often acts to persuade the holder to give up his policy.

Compiles Figures.

Illinois was one of the states that increased its insurance considerably in 1929 over 1928. The Illinois Chamber of Commerce has compiled statistics to show that the total protection written last year was $1,967,218,000, a gain of eighty millions over the year before, with seven companies of small size missing from the tally. Fire insurance companies increased the amount of protection written by more than 800 million dollars.

The weakness of Illinois as an insurance center is demonstrated by the fact that less than 238 millions of the total of new life policies were written by the state's own companies and an even smaller proportion of the fire protection.

ACTION IN N. Y. PEPS UP LONDON STOCK MARTS

General Revival of Trade Predicted.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 5.—Wall street's persistent strength and revival of activity had a pronounced influence in the trend of the London stock markets this week.

New York has been an active buyer of the leading trans-Atlantic favorites such as nickels, Brazil tractions, hydro electrics, etc. As a consequence the resumption here of increased active street dealings has encouraged a considerable amount of professional speculation by London operators.

American interests were active here the whole week, and the buying intensified on closing day, Friday, with a spread to the leading gramophone shares and radio corporation shares.

The situation in the United States is attracting considerable attention on this side. Some authorities express confidence in a general trade revival within the next few months, on which the recent substantial improvement of Wall street is based. Others hold opposite opinions, declaring that with the return of 5,000,000 share days the stock market is again becoming dangerous, with the prospects of a fresh speculative movement.

End of Boom Seen.

Leading financial interests here express the opinion, while admitting that New York often confounds a prophecy, that the present Wall street revival will not go much further.

The decline in money rates seems to have been arrested both in New York and London, bringing about the practical abandonment of the expectations of a 3 per cent bank rate. The hope for the latter in the immediate future is considerably diminishing now with Wall street's returning activity and the fact that the sterling-dollar exchange is inclined to move against London.

Coincident with the fall of the sterling-dollar rate is the low level of some of the continental exchanges and the purchase of the whole of this week's large amount of African gold for shipment to Germany, which are additional factors rendering still cheaper money a somewhat doubtful policy at the present time. The Bank of England, therefore, prefers to wait the action of New York authorities before making a further cut in its own rate.

New Issue Competition.

British government stocks have been rather reactionary, with the leaders showing slight falls. The growing new issue competition has also influenced this section of the market. Last month's new capital issues totaled $132,000,000, compared to around $112,000,000 in February. The total for March of last year was around $169,000,000. New issues for the first three months of this year amount to around $347,000,000, against $571,000,000 for the corresponding quarter last year.

Business in foreign government bonds were not so active. Sao Paulo coffee loan bonds were the feature of the Brazilians with a two to three point rise, but the other loans lapsed into quietude.

The miscellaneous section shows a brighter tendency. Rumors are again busy concerning merger negotiations of the Unilever combine, with the suggestion that the American house of Procter & Gamble, manufacturers of vegetable oil products, is to be embraced.

The oil market shows considerably more activity, the leaders finishing the week with boosted prices. Home rails were disappointing with decreasing traffics, the interest in the iron, coal, and steel groups remains low.

ALUMINUM CO. IS CLEARED OF ANY MONOPOLY INTENT

Washington, D. C., April 5.—(AP)—Charges of intent to create a monopoly lodged against the Aluminum Company of America five years ago have been dismissed unanimously by the federal trade commission without comment. Complaint of violation of both the Clayton anti-trust act and the federal trade commission act was first brought against the company in June, 1925. In September of the same year the company filed an answer, denying every charge.

ANDREW MELLON.

The extended hearings that followed, ending Tuesday, carried heightened interest because of the connection of the Mellon family with the concern. Andrew Mellon had resigned active interest in the company with his appointment as secretary of the treasury by President Harding.

The complaint against the Aluminum company charged that it produced 95 per cent of the virgin sheet aluminum in the United States and that it either owned outright or held large interests in a long list of aluminum fabricating companies, not only in this country, but also in Canada and Norway.

The company had entered contracts, the complaint charged, whereby it sold virgin sheet aluminum at a lesser price to manufacturing foundries than to jobbing foundries, with intent to create a monopoly. It was said further that the company had discriminated in the price of aluminum sold to certain manufacturer of automobile bodies and cooking utensils, and that it had employed a scheme to gain a complete monopoly of the aluminum sand blasting industry in the United States.

In its answer the company not only denied these assertions, but said it had violated no law that "would justify the issuing of any decree by the commission" against it.

HEAR STABILIZATION CORP. SELLS OUT PART OF HOLDINGS AT PROFIT

Boosting of price levels in the American wheat pits in the last few days as a result of hazardous weather conditions in the winter wheat areas has given the federal farm board's auxiliary Grain Stabilization corporation an opportunity to sell out considerable of its holdings, purchased at lower price levels.

This information from Chicago Board of Trade members was passing up and down La Salle and lower Clark street brokers' offices yesterday, although officials of the stabilization corporation were noncommittal.

Estimates of sales of more than five million bu of May contracts were credited to brokers whom observers point out as agents for the government's grain corporation.

Much of this was purchased when prices were down close to the dollar a bu market in February and early March, it was said, which brokers declared would give the government a sizeable profit for its stemming of the recent precipitation in grain prices.

"It's a case of the weather man helping out in a ticklish situation," was one grain merchant's comment. George S. Milnor, vice president of the Stabilization corporation, told THE TRIBUNE that the officials and himself considered the outlook for the farm board's stabilization activities "quite satisfactory from every point of view."

BIG FINANCING FOR ARGENTINA IS IN THE AIR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 5.—New financing for the Republic of Argentina which may run as high as $100,000,000 is now being considered by various Wall street banking groups who have marketed the republic's bonds in the past.

However, advices have reached here from London to the effect that a British group, headed by Baring Bros., is making a bid for the financing. Meanwhile Carlos Alfredo Tornquist, president of the Buenos Aires Tornquist bank, is en route to New York and is expected to arrive here on April 16. Although no announcement has been made, it is expected that his visit is in connection with the loan negotiations.

REVIVE TALK OF REPARATIONS BOND OFFERING

New York, April 5.—(AP)—Activity of German Republic external 7 per cent bonds on the New York Stock exchange is reviving talk of the reparations loan expected next month. The listed bonds, issued at 92 in 1924, are now around 109, or just under their record high established in the recent bull market.

News of the prospective continues scarce, but the strength of German obligations is seen in some circles as a movement to prepare the way for the Young plan bonds, of which a $75,000,000 block is to be sold in this market.

Offerings of Bond Issues Show Decline

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 5.—New offerings of bonds dropped below the $100,000,000 mark this week for the first time since the final week in February. The aggregate for the week was $90,835,000, compared with $130,658 last week and with $62,980,000 during the corresponding week last year. The weekly average for the year to date is $125,652,246.

State and municipal issues this week comprised nearly 50 per cent of the new offerings of bonds, with a total of $44,015,000, the heaviest weekly financing in this group for the year to date, with the single exception of the week ended Jan. 24, when municipals in the amount of $52,785,384 were marketed. Of the latter total $35,000,000 consisted of short term notes.

State Obligations.

The obligations of five states were placed on the market this week, of which four sold long term bonds, viz., the state of Missouri, $10,000,000; the state of North Carolina, $8,900,000; the state of West Virginia, $4,425,000, and the state of Tennessee, $2,000,000. Offering of $1,000,000 of notes of the state of Idaho was made at the close of the week.

Offerings by groups of this and last week follow:

State and municipal	This week.	Last week.
Industrial	$44,015,000	$ 42,603,000
Railroad	13,000,000	13,000,000
Public utility	12,000,000	19,000,000
Foreign	4,570,000	12,055,000
Insular possession	1,250,000	.....
Financial company	1,000,000	.....
Total	$90,835,000	$130,658,000

Bulks Larger.

Industrial financing bulked larger than usual this week, consisting of $10,000,000 Caterpillar Tractor company 5s and $5,000,000 J. J. Newberry company 5½s. The railroad financing consisted of a single issue, that of $13,000,000 Louisiana and Arkansas Railway company 5s which were offered on a 5.50 per cent basis. The total of new public utility financing fell somewhat short of last week's aggregate, as did the offering of new foreign loans. The latter financing comprised two Canadian provincial issues.

SEES TREND OF BOND MARKET CONTINUING UP

The present upward trend in the bond market is likely to continue, the monthly business review of A. C. Allyn & Co., says.

"One factor to be considered," the review says, "is the possibility of another 'runaway' speculative market in equity shares. It is just possible that the easing of money rates may so stimulate the stock market as to again interfere with the long down trend in money rates and the consequent uptrend in bond prices. We are of the opinion, however, that the federal reserve has confidence in its ability to hold down the market should it given evidence of running away."

EXAMINER SAYS LOREE'S NEW LINE IS UNNECESSARY

Washington, D. C., April 5.—(AP)—Plans of L. F. Loree, veteran president of the Delaware and Hudson company, to construct a new line across Pennsylvania under the name of the New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago railroad, would be rejected under recommendations submitted to the interstate commerce commission today by one of its examiners, C. V. Burnside, assistant finance director of the commission, held that public convenience did not necessitate construction of the new 344 mile road across Pennsylvania, which would have been in direct competition with existing routes between New York and Chicago.

L. F. LOREE.

The New York Central, the Pennsylvania, and the Baltimore and Ohio all opposed the proposed route on the grounds that it would take traffic from them and would develop no new traffic along its route.

The proposed route would have cost more than $200,000,000, and the opposing railroads held that the New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago could not secure sufficient traffic to support this gigantic expenditure.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 5.—Big scale buying continued on the stock exchange today. Blocks of 5,000, 10,000, 12,000 shares and more came trotting out at times, carrying prices higher and higher. Many brand new peaks for the year were registered, and final prices were 1 to 8 points above those of last night. Sales totaled 2,524,480 shares.

The list had its sprinkling of soft spots, however, and during the first half of the abbreviated session profit taking by traders who had followed the market this week made for no little irregularity of movement. Motion picture stocks and other recent bull favorites were under particularly heavy pressure. Oils and utilities showed the way for the last hour recovery, with Standard of New Jersey and Consolidated Gas the features in the respective groups.

Help for Bull Side.

News of better things on the Chicago wheat pit and some fresh merger talk from various quarters helped the bull side of operations.

One of the outstanding features of the day was the spurt of more than 3 points in Standard of New Jersey, carrying that issue to a new top for the year. Standard of California, Sinclair, Houston, and other favorites of the group fell in behind the leader and swept forward for net gains of from 1 to more than 4 points.

Talk of an advance in prices of Mid-Continent crude oil, with its implication of an advance in rates elsewhere, helped buying in this department. Since the cut in the Mid-Continent field, initiated by the Standard of New Jersey last January, was excused on the ground that production of oil and gasoline exceeded demand, oil men argue that correction of that condition should be followed by restoration of old prices generally.

TAKE BACK WORKERS

Although no "help wanted" signs have been hung out, Wall street is doing much these days toward relieving the unemployment situation. As a result of the increased stock market activity, many houses are steadily increasing their staffs.

The managing partner in a large Broadway firm intimates that more than 25,000 of the workers who were let out following the disturbances on the stock exchanges last autumn have been taken back. There are no dependable figures as to the number of employés who were released after the market break, but the total was undoubtedly large. The curtailment was greatest in brokerage houses and these also are the first to expand their organizations now that interest in the market has revived.

MAKES FLYING TRIP

Sir Henri Deterding, managing director of the Royal Dutch Shell oil group, who sailed for the United States today, is not coming here on a business visit, it was learned. It is understood the leader of the British firm will arrive in New York April 8 or 9 and will sail again for England on April 26.

The primary object of his trip is said to be to attend the opening of the new building of the Shell Oil company recently built in San Francisco. Lady Deterding has been invited to dedicate the building and Sir Henri will accompany her. The Deterdings will proceed to San Francisco almost immediately after their arrival in New York and will return to Europe after a flying visit to the Pacific coast. They have booked return passage on the steamship Europa.

While Sir Henri's visit is not a business trip, he will meet American oil executives while here. Arrangements have been made to give a luncheon in his honor the day after he arrives, to which leading oil men will be invited, and since his whole interest is in the oil industry, matters of concern to the trade will naturally be subjects of discussion at the gathering arranged for him, it is believed.

To Resume Negotiations for Graphophone Merger

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 5.—Negotiations for the consolidation of the Columbia Graphophone company, Ltd., and the Gramaphone, Ltd., European subsidiary of the Radio Corporation of America, have been resumed, it is reported. Officials of both companies will hold a conference about April 15 to consider the projected merger, it is understood. Plans are said to include the formation of a holding company to control the stocks of several European talking picture concerns.

Weekly Debits Increase, Reserve Bank Reports

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago for the week ended April 2, 1930, by 249 banks in thirty-eight leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,832,779,000, an increase of 21 per cent compared with a week ago [$1,514,352,000]. Compared with the corresponding week of last year [$1,967,439,000], a decrease of 6.8 per cent was shown.

PARIS BOURSE IMPROVES

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 5.—After a long period of stagnation, the Paris bourse seems well on the way to recover its pre-war importance; it is more and more apparent that Paris may soon resume a dominant position in world banking.

The discussions of the financial authorities are still proceeding toward the reorganization of the market, and traders are favorably impressed with the improved political outlook together with the promised reduction of taxation on joint stock securities, as well as stock market transactions, which will soon be in effect.

AGRICULTURAL QUESTIONS

T. B. IN ANIMALS.

Is tuberculosis contagious among live stock, or are animals born infected with it?—E. O'N.

REPLY.

That most dreaded disease of livestock, tuberculosis, is largely a filth born infection. It can be prevented if proper measures are taken.

"Experimental evidence seems to prove that few animals of any of the species are born infected with tuberculosis," says J. W. Lamb, extension veterinarian, Kansas State college, in telling of the scientific findings. "Animals can be prevented from acquiring the disease if proper measures are taken. The organisms are usually taken in by the way of the mouth with feed and water, occasionally with the air, or by way of mucous membranes."

Available experimental records indicate that hogs acquire tuberculosis mainly through the mouth with feed and water, and sometimes by way of the nostrils, according to the specialist. In the case of cattle it is acquired largely through the mouth, with feed and water, or licking each other while in contact. There is a rare possibility for the animal to acquire the disease through the nose, mucous membranes of the eyes, and through the skin.

FUCHSIA CULTURE.

Will you kindly tell me how to care for a fuchsia plant? It was a beautiful one when it grew outdoors during the summer, but just as soon as I brought it inside to escape the frosts it wilted in spite of the watering and care I gave it. Does a plant of this kind need a season of rest? Should it be put in the basement without water until spring?—L. M.

REPLY.

Fuchsia plants must have a rest after each flowering. This is done by keeping the plants in a cool, dry place for several months. During this rest period limit the water supply; give them just enough to keep the wood from shriveling. It is necessary to repot the plants each year and trim back the branches slightly.

If you started with young specimens last spring, you should be able to use the plants as indoor bloomers this winter. Of course, the fuchsia is highly prized for its summer blossoms.

SKYSCRAPER TO HAVE SIX STORY BUILDING INSIDE

Will House Activities of Blum's Vogue.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Boul Mich pedestrians and motorists who stroll or whiz past the fourteen story Blum building, just north of the Blackstone hotel, get no inkling from a glance at that structure that a $500,000 six story edifice is being constructed inside the skyscraper itself. This unique bit of construction, which, in other words, is a building within a building, is to house the entire activities of Harry H. Blum, formerly known as Blum's, and the Vogue, and now to be known as Blum's Vogue.

HARRY H. BLUM. [Moffett Photo.]

As announced recently, the space now occupied by Mr. Blum's activities in the Congress hotel are all to be moved a bit south along Boul Mich in the Blum building. Mr. Blum will have practically three times as much space as he does now for Blum's and the Vogue. He hopes to move into his new quarters some time after July. He has been in business for twenty years.

Stone to Replace Terra Cotta.

Alfred S. Alschuler is architect of the new six story inside building. It will be entirely divorced from the parent structure, having its own entrances, elevators, halls, and walls. All of the terra cotta now used in ornamentation on the first two floors of the Blum building is to be torn out and replaced with buff Bedford stone.

In fact the two lower stories of the Blum building will be entirely new. The design is after the Louis XV. period, with rusticated ashlar relieved by carvings adorning the four principal window openings and surrounding the main entrance, which is recessed in a vaulted arch.

The carvings at the top of the four main second floor windows are around four central niches, each containing a figure representing the four seasons. These are being modeled by W. Galinsky, former director of sculpture at Warsaw university, Poland. The window frames will be of solid bronze.

To Have Bronze Gates.

The main entrance will have heavy bronze gates, behind which there'll be a bronze revolving door. The backing for the four display windows is an adaptation of the Marie Antoinette bedroom in the Petit Trianon, at Versailles. The floors of the windows will be of matched marble.

Now a word about the inside of this new six story building. The basement, formerly occupied by the Samovar café, is to be remodeled into a dining room for Mr. Blum's employés, which number not far from a thousand.

The first, second and third floors will be given over to luxurious salons for the display of women's wearing apparel, jewels, etc. In detail the arrangement will be as follows: On the first floor will be a jewel shop of novel design, with the customary counters done away with; a kiddies' room, a millinery shop, a sports salon and space for bags, costume jewelry, hosiery, gloves, etc.

To Be Cooled Artificially.

The second floor will be given over to ready to wear coats and dresses and a debutantes' salon. On the third floor will be fur, negligee and dressmaking salons.

The fourth, fifth and sixth floors will be given over to studios where Mrs. Blum will hold sway and where the designing and creating are done. The work rooms also are on these floors. Mr. Blum's executive offices will continue to be on the fifth floor where they now are.

Throughout the entire Blum-Vogue building the air will not only be kept fresh by a modern ventilation system but it will be chilled during the summer months, a valuable asset in merchandising, making conditions pleasanter both for the customer and the employé.

There are many other interesting features which Mr. Blum will provide, among them being special lounging and rest rooms. There will be two elevators installed which will operate independently of the regular Blum building lifts. These will be of the modern noiseless type, with double doors operated by air.

$500,000 BOUL MICH IMPROVEMENT

Buff Bedford stone is to replace the present terra cotta trim on the first two floors of the Blum building, just north of the Blackstone hotel. Alfred S. Alschuler is architect for the six story building being erected inside of the fourteen story Blum building. It will house the activities of Blum's Vogue. F. O. Tupper-White, of Alfred S. Alschuler, Inc., made this sketch.

NORTH SIDE APARTMENT

Johnck & Ehmann designed the above structure, a sixteen story apartment building, which is to be erected at the northwest corner of Junior terrace and Lake Shore drive. The building will overlook the new section of Lincoln park which is being reclaimed from the lake. S. Chester Danforth made this perspective.

DEVON-WESTERN DISTRICT TO GET 2,000 SEAT MOVIE

Balaban & Katz Announce Theater Plans.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

For many, many months past there has been a sign on the property at the southwest corner of Devon and Western avenues which reads, "a 2,500 seat theater will be erected on this site." The signboard has become weatherbeaten from storms and the many movie fans who have taken up residence in this new section of the city had become somewhat skeptical as to the prospects for a cinema in their own part of town.

But now the Publix-Balaban & Katz Theater corporation comes along and assures the neighborhood that it will get a theater immediately. Details regarding the new movie were announced yesterday from the firm's offices in the Chicago Theater building. As yet the theater has not been given a name.

The new cinema will be erected on a site fronting 140 feet on the west side of Western avenue, beginning 200 feet south of Devon avenue. It will not go up on the corner parcel long talked of for a movie.

Will Have 2,000 Seats.

The theater will contain 2,000 seats and in view of the development of the talkies the matter of acoustics will be given particular attention. A special acoustical plaster finish will be employed throughout the auditorium to assure good reception on the part of the auditors.

J. E. O. Pridmore designed the structure, the architecture of which will bear the influence of the Mediterranean region of Europe. Mr. Pridmore is noted for theater designs which give a semblance of the outdoors to an interior. In the case of the new Western avenue theater the effect will be of an Italian courtyard overlooking the sea.

Lloyd Lewis, of the Balaban & Katz organization, who discussed the theater yesterday, says:

"This will be the first 'sea-scape' effect achieved since the 'out-door' type of auditorium was introduced. Within the auditorium the ceiling will be of blue twilight effect and the walls will preserve the illusion of a garden scene by rising like the exteriors of villas on all sides. Between these beautiful representations of tile rooftops can be seen the blue Mediterranean sea, with gayly lighted barks sailing on it."

Few Steps to Climb.

An interesting innovation is the balcony arrangement. The balcony will be of low pitch construction, being entered from a height much lower than is found in the average theater. Patrons will be enabled to enter it with a minimum of steps to climb.

As to the exterior of the building, the front elevation will be finished in glazed terra cotta. Here, too, the Mediterranean feeling in design will prevail. The whole will be brilliantly illuminated at night.

There will be a number of small shops along the facade, the greater part of which, it is said, have already been taken.

Publix-Balaban & Katz theaters now have some thirty movies in the Chicago district. Included in this number are the Chicago, Oriental, United Artists, Roosevelt and McVickers in the loop and the Uptown, Tivoli and Paradise in outlying sections. Smaller theaters in their chains are the Norshore, Harding, Riviera, Tower, Senate, Maryland, Central Park, Century, Congress, State, Covent, etc. They also operate the Granada and Marbro theaters.

ALBION AVENUE DEAL.

Clifford A. and Harriet J. Williams have sold 50x155 feet of vacant on the north side of Albion avenue, 355 feet east of Sheridan road, to Eugenia R. Judd. Fred V. Maguire was broker.

WHERE BANKERS FOREGATHER

Art Firms Close Leases for Space in Diana Court

The Swedish-American Arts and Crafts shop, now located at 161 East Ohio street, has leased a store on the ground floor of Diana court, in the Michigan Square building, for the sale of Swedish artwares and needlework. Howard W. Whattley, north side interior decorator, has taken space on the mezzanine floor. Hogan & Farwell were brokers.

NEW BUILDING ON JUNIOR TERRACE TO BE 16 STORIES

Construction is expected to start shortly on the tall apartment building announced last December as contemplated for the northwest corner of Junior terrace and Lake Shore drive. William L. Wallen & Sons, Inc., who handled the real estate details in connection with the improvement, yesterday added to the bare announcement of the project with a description of the structure, which is to occupy a commanding site overlooking the new section of Lincoln park.

The new building is to be sixteen stories high and will contain ninety apartments divided into fifteen six room flats with three baths, sixty five room flats with two baths and fifteen four room suites.

Designed by Johnck & Ehmann the architecture of the structure will be inspired by the American colonial period. Because of the outstanding location all four walls will be finished in face brick. The color is to be light red. Indiana limestone will be used for the ornamentation.

The site of the building fronts 123 feet on Lake Shore drive, and 203 feet on Junior terrace. It is a block south of Montrose avenue, and will overlook the new small boat harbor which will from part of the huge new Lincoln park playground. The owner is the Murray Hill Apartment Building corporation. It is stated that the investment will be about $1,700,000. Financing is through an insurance loan negotiated by the Chicago Trust company. The Shellberg Construction company, Inc., has the general contract, and legal details were handled by Ogren & Cross. Completion of the building is scheduled for fall.

CHURCH FOUNDED BY DR. AINSLIE TO GO ON MARKET

The Argyle Community church of 5013 Kenmore avenue has been disbanded and title to the property has been transferred to the Chicago Congregational Missionary and Extension society, which will probably put it up for sale for commercial uses. The community church was founded by the Rev. Dr. James Stuart Ainslie in 1916. Dr. Ainslie was for fifteen years pastor of the North Shore Congregational church at Sheridan road and Wilson avenue, but resigned in 1915 after a controversy with some of the members of his congregation. Now Dr. Ainslie is seriously ill. The Kenmore avenue property consists of an old residence, converted into a chapel, on a lot 100x150 feet.

Quick Profit Reported on Near North Side Land

In November, 1928, Blenda Larson bought the three story residence on a lot 24½x71 feet at 77 Cedar street for $42,000, through Mellicent Martin. She has just sold it to the First Realty company for a reported $62,000, a profit of $20,000 in less than two years.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To April 6, 1920; 10 Years Ago Today

Frederick Potthast, whose chief bid for fame before July 1 was his alleged record of selling 10,000 barrels of real beer every year over his basement bar at the northwest corner of State and Van Buren streets, which is said to be the greatest amount of beer disposed of in any saloon in Chicago, has announced that he will continue at his old stand for at least ten years more. Yesterday he renewed his lease, through E. F. Keebler & Co., with the United Cigar Stores company at a rental of $10,000 for the term. He will operate a near beer bar and a restaurant.

The Republic Flow Meters company has started work on a two story building at the northeast corner of Diversey boulevard and Oakley avenue which will double its present capacity.

Keogh Building to Have Three Story Addition

Gordon Keogh will start work at once on a three story addition to the Keogh building at 732 West Van Buren street. The addition will adjoin the present structure on the east and will extend through from Van Buren to Boston avenue, with entrances on both thoroughfares. The Keogh Printing company will occupy the two upper floors, while the ground floor and basement will be leased. Alfred S. Alschuler is architect. E. F. Keebler & Co. have been appointed renting agents for the space to be leased.

To April 6, 1910; 20 Years Ago Today

The new Lytton building, to be erected by Henry C. Lytton of the Hub, promises to be one of the handsomest structures in Chicago. It will occupy 81 x144 feet at the northeast corner of State street and Jackson boulevard, will be twenty stories high, and will represent an investment of $1,500,000. The plans were developed by Architects Marshall & Fox. The exterior will be of polished granite and glazed terra cotta. The façade is developed in Italian renaissance, terminating in two towers. In these towers will be located the sprinkling tanks, elevator machinery, etc., usually housed in unsightly penthouses; so that these essential items of equipment will become in this structure the means of beautifying and diversifying the skyline, instead of detracting from the appearance of the building, as in most cases.

HENRY C. LYTTON.

The National City bank has closed a lease for the banking floor of the Mohawk building, at the southeast corner of Dearborn and Monroe streets, formerly occupied by the Commercial National bank.

To April 6, 1900; 30 Years Ago Today

Paul O. Stensland has leased to the United States government for post-office station "F" a part of the premises at 291-95 North Carpenter street for five years at $3,500 a year.

John G. McWilliams, formerly a partner in the firm of Marshall Field & Co., has made application for the registry of land title under the Torrens act of his residence and homestead at 3945 Lake avenue, running through to the Illinois Central railroad. The value of the property is placed at $150,000.

PAUL O. STENSLAND.

The estate of Henry S. Durand sold through the agency of Dunlap Smith & Co. to William H. Rehm the residence property at 537 North State street, 30x130 feet, for $29,000 cash.

South Shore Towers Is Reported Wholly Rented

Mrs. Bertha L. Greenbaum, the manager, reports the South Shore Towers as 100 per cent rented as of May 1. The structure contains 108 unfurnished apartments of two, three and four rooms. It was completed about a year ago.

OLD TIME LABOR LEADERS RECALL EARLY TROUBLES

McKinley Paves Way to Peace Here.

BY THOMAS WREN.

Labor conditions as they existed for Chicago wage earners three and four decades ago were recalled recently by veteran trade union leaders when they met in a reunion given in their honor by Edward J. Condon, head of the Condon Engineering company, at the Midland club.

EDWARD CONDON.

Banker Recalls Strife.

Back in the days of McKinley's "full dinner pail" campaign for President, William G. Edens was an official of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

He is now one of the vice presidents of the Central Trust Company of Illinois. Mr. Edens, who attended the reunion, recalled the following:

"Thirty years ago Chicago faced a crisis from which it was saved by Mark Hanna and his protégé, President William McKinley. The Building Trades council and the Building Contractors' council were at 'war.' Building was at a standstill; there was violence and rioting; a foreman for a leading architectural firm was killed. Peter Finley Dunn, at the suggestion of William Hollister and Charles King, selected Thomas A. O'Shaughnessy to act as a peace emissary between the labor leaders and builders.

Differences Adjusted.

"O'Shaughnessy, a labor reporter, opened negotiations with John Griffiths and Victor Faulkenau, builders, and immediately peace overtures were made to laborites with the result that all differences were adjusted between the building contractors and officers of the building trades.

"President McKinley on the advice of Mark Hanna refused to set a non-union corner stone on the Chicago post-office. A conference of newspaper men followed which included Billy McKay, Billy Etten, Peter Finely Dunn, Bill Stuart and Louis Weadock. The controversy was settled when the President was made a member of the Stone Cutters' union. This action was followed by a lengthy period of tranquility in the Chicago building industry.

Sandwich Shop Leases Store at 116 West Monroe

The Monroe Sandwich shop has leased the store at 116 West Monroe street, in the New York Life building, for six years at graduated rents. Gus C. Manos was broker.

PLANS 300 MORE RESIDENCES FOR ROUND LAKE BEACH

A building program aggregating in the neighborhood of 300 residences has just been announced by the L. B. Harris company, which has its headquarters in the First National Bank building, for its Round Lake beach development on Round Lake, Ill., 40 miles away from the loop on the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad.

Contracts were let yesterday for 27 summer homes and in addition Mr. Harris states his company will build approximately 300 more. These are on lots which already have been sold; in fact, practically all of the lots of Round Lake beach are reported sold.

This summer subdivision comprises 150 acres of land, with a mile and a half of water frontage which is owned by the community for public use. The property has the 18 hole Shore Woods golf course on one side and the nine hole Long Lake golf course near by in another direction. Lot owners already have built 146 homes during the last two summers. The subdivision has mostly curving roads, all graveled.

A channel has been dug connecting Round lake with Long lake, winding through the subdivision. Even along this waterway the riparian rights are held by the community.

VIKING EIGHT CLOSE COUPLED 4-DOOR SEDAN

THIS IS VIKING "pet proving ground" MONTH

All Oldsmobile-Viking dealers are now presenting a special showing of Viking Eights in beautiful new spring color combinations.

And all during this month these dealers invite you to make the "Pet Proving Ground" test with the Viking.

Take the wheel of a Viking Eight. Then head for your own "pet" proving ground . . . drive over the roughest street—the ruttiest road—the steepest hill—and the smoothest stretch of broad, straight highway that you can find.

Put the Viking through its paces. Test speed, acceleration pulling power, riding comfort, handling ease. In short, find out the things you want to know about a car. And prove to your own complete satisfaction that Viking will do everything you ask of it—and more.

SEE IT! DRIVE IT! COMPARE IT . .

The Viking Eight offers certain attributes of appearance, performance, and value which set it apart from other cars in its field. These qualities become evident when you see the car—examine it in detail—and put it through your own performance tests.

You will find smart bodies by Fisher—sparkling new spring color combinations—luxurious upholsteries and appointments—and sturdy hardwood-and-steel construction.

You will find a big 90-degree, V-type eight-cylinder engine—capable of thrilling speed, flashing acceleration, and power for the hills. An engine that not only delivers superb performance—but delivers it with smoothness, quietness, and flowing ease.

You will find the Viking easy to handle in traffic—easy to park. At the same time it is a wonderful road car—hugs the curves and sticks to the road in a way that is almost uncanny. And balanced weight, flexible springs, and four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers combine to provide supreme riding comfort.

You will find provisions for long life and dependability that result in complete satisfaction throughout the months and miles . . . as thousands of owners will testify.

Finally, you'll find when you drive this car, that Viking is different—individual—a car that you like to drive, and keep on driving.

Make the test today. See the Viking Eight. Examine it—drive it—and compare it, feature for feature, with other automobiles in its field. Then you'll really know how much more the Viking Eight offers you in value.

The Bunny Family's Easter Party Cut Outs

SET no. 6

UNCLE TIMOTHY BUNNY

Girls! Boys! Cut Out and Dress the Bunny Family!

$2,500.00 In Cash Prizes!

Easter is coming! And here we have the Bunny Family Easter Party Cut-Outs. Can you cut and dress the Bunny Family?

Each Sunday until and including Easter Sunday, the Chicago Tribune will print a page of Bunny Family colored Cut-Outs. These interesting groups, which appear in the same place each week (as page 7 of the colored comic section) began on March 2, when Set No. 1 was published. Many who failed to start in the game of Cut-Outs the first week found out what a fascinating game it proved to be when they looked over the section the second or the third week, and they then joined in. Because of the heavy demand for papers, many had been unable to get copies from news stands on the first two Sundays.

As a result the early groups were reprinted the second and third Sundays, so that as many as wished might then start in the competition which offers much fun and enjoyment, as well as liberal cash prizes.

Those who failed to start in the first three weeks, however, still may do so by obtaining back copies containing the earlier sets.

Just follow these simple instructions: Each Cut-Out contains several dresses or costumes. Take scissors, cut out the Bunny and the costumes. Then dress the Bunny in the costume which you believe looks best. The small extensions marked "FOLD BACK" are to fasten the dress to the Bunny and should not be visible in front when the figure is complete.

Each fits the Bunny of that set. Try them. Which do you like best? Hold the one you like best.

You may paste or pin the costume on the Bunnies. You may paste them on paper, on cardboard, in scrap books, or any other form to send them in.

CAUTION: Do not send Bunnies one at a time. Wait until all 8 have been printed and you have dressed them and then send the entire set of 8 to "Bunnies," the Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 1720, Chicago, Ill.

The Chicago Tribune will pay $2,500 in Cash Prizes to the children who send in the neatest and best entries. See the prize list opposite.

You can use the prize money to buy anything you want. Or you can start or add to a Savings Account at the Bank. This offer is open to every girl and boy except children of Tribune employes. You pay nothing. All entries must be in within 15 days after Cut-Out No. 8 is published.

You do not have to buy The Tribune to compete. You may copy or trace the Cut-Outs and send in your copies. The Tribune may be examined at our Offices or Public Libraries free of charge. In case of ties duplicate prizes will be paid.

FASHIONS FROM PARIS

BIGGER FLOWERS than Burbank ever thought of, scattered over a field of smoke-gray chiffon, make this charming afternoon frock from Redfern, with its smart two-tiered skirt. The long gloves, purse, and slippers are of black suede, and the hat of black taffeta.

ALL-BLACK CREPE retains its prestige for the summer afternoon ensemble, and this cape and dress from Suzanne Talbot unite distinction with chic by their scalloped pleated ruffles. The long black gloves, the almost ankle length skirt, and the Talbot bonnet with its frills of black horsehair lace at the sides are leading French fashion features.

A RED AND WHITE PRINTED CHIFFON ENSEMBLE from Chantal which would bring a garden atmosphere into any cocktail party—and it is designed for both atmospheres. The dress and jacket both are long sleeved. The wide brimmed hat is made of transparent straw in red.

LELONG gives to this pale green crepe satin hostess frock a coat of flowered lame with Japanese sleeves and a bow tie collar. This coat, which serves for tea, may be removed, leaving a sleeveless frock for the home dinner.

MOLYNEUX MAKES A LADY of the smart pajamas that everybody wears around the resorts of France by adding a lacquer red, ruffled satin overblouse to wide black satin trousers and creating a sunshade hat of the same red satin.

TARTAN PLAIDS OF SCOTTISH CLANS are brightening up the white sports ensemble this spring. Madeleine uses red and blue plaid serge to line and cape the coat of this ensemble, and knits a red and blue sweater blouse in smaller plaid, which she attaches to the white serge skirt. The beret is red tricot.

GULISTAN

revolutionizes every existing idea about rugs

Oriental Rug Luxury at

for the 9 x 12 foot size: other sizes in proportion
(prices higher in Canada)

Every woman knows why she has longed for Oriental rug luxury.

Because she wants that transformation of glorious beauty which it works in any room.

And now you can have it in an American rug at $150 on the authority of the largest maker of Oriental rugs, Karaghеusian.

The same jewel-like colors!

The same masterpieces of characteristic Oriental design!

And above all, the unmistakable lustrous sheen!

Gulistan can only be made by Karaghеusian. It is the American product of this famous House, whose native weavers in Persia and China supply America with so many costly rugs.

In Gulistan you have the same sturdy Oriental wool yarns, the finest dyes, the very same finishing processes as you get in a thousand-dollar imported Oriental.

Go to your favorite department or furniture store and see Gulistan for yourself.

In the past, families have saved up for years to own such luxury—and now friends will envy it in your home!

Look for the silken label reproduced below.

And remember, the stores have many Gulistan designs to show you as well as the famous one featured here.

This label is the signature of the largest maker of Oriental Rugs: Karaghеusian. It guarantees that you are getting GULISTAN.

300 YEAR OLD DESIGN...WORTH A FORTUNE

recreated in a Gulistan Rug! See it at your store now!

A carpet that "scholars rate among the first half dozen of ancient carpets now in existence."

So says the Official Handbook of the Pennsylvania Museum of Art, where the original of this Gulistan hangs today!

It was woven 88 years before America was discovered, when Tamerlane the Great reached the height of his power in Samarkand! Note particularly the cypress trees, expressing life eternal, which make up the rich field of this rug!

Wealthy collectors have spent fortunes acquiring a rug like this old Persian masterpiece! Museums cherish such rugs as their most priceless possessions.

To have reproduced this famous design in a Gulistan rug, with such amazing fidelity and beauty, represents an outstanding achievement in American loomcraft.

Six different color schemes to harmonize with your interiors. See all six and make your choice.

Pattern number is Gulistan 25082. It is available in twenty-two different sizes, ranging from 22½ inches by 36 inches ($10) to 11 feet 3 inches by 21 feet ($435).

MILLIONS NO LONGER

MISS BEER

This is to people who miss old-time beer. It was helpful and delightful. One little factor is now forbidden. But that is nothing which you craved, nothing you will miss.

There is an old-time malt-and-hop brew even better than the old. All the benefits, all the purity, all the delights are there. You have no need for makeshifts.

Just Like Old Times

Atlas Special Brew is like it used to be. The finest barley malt, the best Bohemian hops. It is filtered again and again. After long-time aging it is put into bottles, absolutely clean. Then bottles are sterilized after being sealed.

Here you have all the qualities of the old-time brews, save a lessened amount of alcohol. That we evaporate, according to law, but no lover of this matchless brew can miss it. Were you told that this Atlas Special Brew was some old reserve, you could not tell the difference.

All Else Is There

Atlas Special Brew is not a "near-beer," not a substitute. It is made by master brewers, exactly the same as in pre-war days. It has all the old-time benefits, all the old-time delights. The flavor, the sparkle and the foam. You could not discover the slightest difference, were you not told.

Let us prove this. It costs only 15c a bottle, much less by the case of 24 bottles, delivered to your door. Just ask your dealer or phone us. It is supplied by over 15,000 neighborhood stores in Chicago, and surrounding states. Look for the green Atlas Special label on each bottle. Where GIANTESS LINERS head for EUROPE . . . .

2 DAYS FROM THE SEA

Steaming past Berthier up to Montreal © ASSOCIATED SCREEN NEWS, LTD., MONTREAL

DO YOU KNOW ABOUT AMERICA'S 1000-MILE SEAWAY?

CAN you believe there are giantess ocean liners which start their European voyage 2 days within the heart of America? Can you believe they sail from America's second largest seaport...Montreal ...1000 miles from the sea?

To believe it, you must realize the St. Lawrence is an actual arm of the ocean. Millions of years ago, it thrust its way 1000 miles into the continent.

That thrust was the birth of the great American seaway...with 2 great seaports, Québec and Montreal, the latter just an over-night jump for 75% of America's population, and 279 miles nearer Liverpool than is New York!

Crossing to Europe via the St. Lawrence seaway is adding another country to your trip...quaint Norman-French Canada. For 2 days, picture-book habitant hamlets, headlands, ox-tilled fields, rivers and spruce forests cry you a memorable bon voyage on either deck-rail. From your steamer chair you watch them go by...2 miles, 5, 10, 20 miles away ...then, the first gentle swells of broad Atlantic. Then, after only 4 days open ocean, Cherbourg, Havre, Southampton, Antwerp, Hamburg, Liverpool, Glasgow, Belfast, London.

Ask anybody who has "discovered" the St. Lawrence seaway. They'll tell you it's a delightful way of going to Europe.

Also inquire about "all-expense" House Party Motor Tours, $395 and up, and Collegiate Tours, $335 and up, visiting principal European countries and Passion Play.

WHICH ACCOMMODATION?

In its mighty Empresses, Canadian Pacific's fleet of passenger liners offers spacious first class accommodations with every luxury known to ocean travel . . . in its 4 new Duchesses, 20,000 gross-ton sister ships, the last word in cabin class. Special attention to tourist-third and third-class as well. 3 to 5 sailings a week by a fleet of eighteen.

THIS mammoth arm of the Atlantic floats an ocean-going traffic of 220 vessels a month. They carry a monthly high-seas cargo of 1,600,000 tons. Canadian Pacific's distinguished fleet of eighteen plies the St. Lawrence seaway, headed by the white Empress and Duchess liners, famous ocean giantesses, using this shortest route to and from Europe.

WHY is this great dock building at old Québec? It's for the Empress of Britain, Canadian Pacific's new 40,000 gross-ton giantess. Ready in 1931, spotless in her shining white holiday attire, and with every luxury of ocean travel, she'll make Europe in 5 speeding days!

YOU can have these lines of modern beauty—just ask your favorite department store or specialty shop for a Practical Front Comfolette. Try it on—this only takes a minute as there is no awkward pulling and twisting, just a quick clasping of the inner belt and a snug lacing of the adjustable front closing.

Now stand before a mirror and note how this marvelous garment has given you the charming lines of the new style.

Sit down. There is no spreading of the hips, no ugly sticking out at the waist. The exclusive patented inner belt prevents all that. And when you rise there is no uncomfortable feeling that the garment has slipped up. It is so light and flexible you hardly know you are wearing it.

One of Helen Kane's thousand and one followers has just gone "foofh, foofh" right square in her male partner's face, and he's pretending to remove the attendant moisture.

The girl act, showing six and one-half members of a dancing unit doing art poses on the trapeze while the house orchestra renders "A Kiss in the Dark." After the last show the girls will go home to the hotel room and finish their laundry work. This act is just like a great big family—one-half the unit not being on speaking terms with the other half.

The Delfords, Joe and Coralie, have a somewhat different balancing routine. Joe combines feats of skill on the ladder with refined clowning, while Coralie, atop Joe's shoulders, gives an impression of how Miss Marilyn Miller would sing "Tiptoe Through the Tulips," if she ever did sing it. To see Coralie right now, you'd never think she had a care in the world. And yet at the moment Coralie is having to decide whether or no it's worth while to tip anyone back stage on Saturday night, seeing as how she and Joe may never play this hick town again.

"Pretty good bill this week, ain't it, Martin?" Mr. Gutenborg, the house manager, greeting friends in the lobby.

O'Hare and Prang, "The Society Girl and the College Boy," breakfasting at 7:30 a. m. (which is the middle of the night for us vaudeville actresses) on account of an early train to the next stand. Mabel, the waitress, has no illusions about vaudeville actors at 7:30 in the morning.

Gertie and Billy are the names of these two lovely town girls. They are pausing in the lobby to put two traveling salesmen in their place. The salesmen have been too fresh for words. Gertie and Billy are just crazy to make what is known in the small towns as "wuppie" this evening, and, besides, they hate the idea of walking that long three blocks home. Maybe the traveling men have a car with them!

The Three Co-Eds close harmonizing on "Have a Little Faith in Me." Though not really truly sisters, the girls get on just beautiful together. Reba, Dottie ("Cuddles"), and Iona are their names. Iona (right end) is the cut-up of the trio. While Reba and Dottie are singing "Cupid Has Stolen My Heart," Iona will yell right out before everybody, and right in the middle of Reba's and Dottie's most delicate strains, "Take back your heart; I ordered bol-og-na!" Iona practically manages the act, the other girls depending on her for everything. They are dreamers and not the least bit practical, so if a booking agent has to be beaten up, or a hotel clerk's eye blacked, why, it's always Iona who has to do it.

Meet the Dibble family—grandma, Bonnie Lou, grandpa, and mamma—who go every week to the vaudeville. They arrive in time for the supper show and stay right through till 11:30, when the theater is locked for the night. The Dibbles like to come early, get good seats, and hang on to them.

Just three young bloods of the town highly appreciative of the comic girl in the sister act, who is making believe pull a spike from her anatomy after a comic stage fall.

Here, sir, is "The Distinguished Set" of distinguished shapes. Van Dyck is mild all through, enjoyable all through—from the first fragrant puff to the final regretful sign-off. It has the delightful aroma you find only in a consummately fine cigar. Van Dyck Banker, Invincible, Corona—"The Distinguished Set" await your choosing in cigar cases everywhere. You'll like Van Dyck.

AMONG THE ALPS OF THE ANTIPODES—Mirroring dark forest and the gleaming snow of the Southern Alps, silver Lake Matheson, in South island, offers a superb suggestion of the scenic glories of New Zealand. This dominion of Britain in the southern Pacific beckons the tourist to a vast, unspoiled playground of mountain, lake, forest, and stream.

AND BY WAY OF CONTRAST, graceful palms stand guard on the coast of South island. Such is the range of New Zealand temperatures.
(New Zealand government photo.)

A PEACEFUL PASTORALE—And a highly significant one; for, so essential is the business of stock raising, New Zealand has more than twice as many cattle as people, and more than nineteen times as many sheep!

THE WOMEN SMOKE THERE, TOO, as witness this aboriginal Maori enthusiast. And even permanents are de rigueur among the Maoris; faces are permanently decorated by the tattooer's art.

(New Zealand government photo.)

A FIORDLAND THAT RIVALS NORWAY'S GRANDEURS gives still further diversity to South island's beauties. Commanding the expanse of Milford sound is abrupt Mitre peak, which thrusts its summit 5,560 feet into the clouds.
(New Zealand government photo.)

THIS MESSAGE IS WRITTEN FOR MILLIONS OF PEOPLE WHOSE TEETH NEED PROTECTION TODAY

An x-ray showing abscess of a tooth, unsuspected by a sufferer from rheumatism. Such a condition pollutes the blood stream with pus germs. It is far more serious than the chances for infection from a skin wound—for it represents a constant source of infection.

A cross-section of a tooth and the gum, infected with pyorrhea. Notice how the gum tissue (right) is pulling away from the tooth. The continuation of this separation will cause the tooth to become so loose it will probably be lost.

Here are some facts which will help you prevent gum troubles . . . protect the teeth you have . . . insure their lasting usefulness

YOU OFTEN HEAR some one say: "The trouble is I didn't start taking proper care of my teeth early enough."

Let's dismiss the fact that you have neglected your teeth, probably lost some. The thing that now matters is how you can protect your teeth and gums as they are today . . . make your teeth keep their usefulness through the years. Squibb's Dental Cream has a simple but important message to offer.

First—the decay you have suffered has been caused by germs which generate acids that attack the teeth. These germs collect especially in the crevices and fissures of the teeth where your tooth-brush can't reach.

Second—you may have injured your gums by using too stiff a tooth-brush or a gritty dentifrice . . . and by allowing fermenting food particles to irritate your gums with acids.

Here's what Squibb's Dental Cream can do for you in the future. Its formula definitely recognizes the causes of tooth decay and gum troubles and the best ways to combat them. And so it offers distinct advantages.

It contains 50% Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. Plenty of this safe, effective antacid to penetrate the crevices of the teeth and to render the germ-acids of decay harmless.

And because Milk of Magnesia has pronounced healing qualities, Squibb's Dental Cream soothes tender gums and at the same time neutralizes the acids of fermenting food particles which irritate your gums.

Squibb's cleans teeth beautifully and safely. It contains no grit, no astringents—nothing to injure The Danger Line—the delicate gum edge. And as long as The Danger Line keeps healthy, you needn't fear pyorrhea.

Let your dentist professionally clean your teeth and treat any cavities you now have. Then get a large tube of Squibb's and begin using it morning and night. Brush both your gums and teeth thoroughly. Do this regularly and within a few months you'll find your teeth keeping freer from decay, your gums pink and firm and healthy. E. R. Squibb & Sons, New York. Manufacturing Chemists to the Medical Profession since 1858.

Copyright 1930 by E. R. Squibb & Sons

The Danger Line is the line where gums meet teeth. As long as this knife-like edge of gum tissue keeps healthy, pyorrhea will not occur. In the cross-section above, notice the tiny crevice at each side of the tooth. The arrows show it. Food particles collect here, ferment and irritate the gums with acids. Eventually the delicate gum edge recedes. Then it is no longer a protection.*

A GOLDEN WEDDING IN THE SKY—To celebrate their fiftieth anniversary of married life, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Benedict of Chicago journey to Kansas City by plane. The camera finds them at the start of the aerial second honeymoon. (Underwood & Underwood photo.)

A BURNT OFFERING TO THE GOD OF THE MACHINE—Reminiscent of a similar spectacle produced some time ago in Chicago, several hundred antiques of the automobile trade are destroyed in a funeral pyre at Long Beach, Cal. The Long Beach Motor Car Dealers' association financed the bonfire to take the relics out of circulation. (Associated Press photo.)

"CHICAGO? WHOA"—This is the story of the uncovered wagon, a story of almost epic rank in this age of gasoline. A. T. MacCoy, 73, and his horse, Tony Mac, came all of the 300 miles of hard road from Keokuk to visit Mr. MacCoy's daughter, Mrs. Pearl Farnsworth of 14 West Ohio street. The trip took a week, but was worth it; though they came just to visit, they're going to stay. (Tribune photo.)

IF YOU'RE GOING TO BOSTON, this wouldn't be a bad pictorial map to take along. It is the aviator's view of the hub-of-the-universe, with the hub clearly defined at the center. (Wide World photo.)

AUTHOR OF AMERICA'S INITIAL NAVAL GESTURE, John Paul Jones, whose birthdate came within two days of being the Fourth of July, began service for the Continental Congress as a lieutenant in 1775. As commander of the "Ranger" and "Bonhomme Richard" he proved the fighting ability of American seamen and set a standard for marine prestige which has endured through the ages. As his ships were of admittedly inferior fighting capacity to the "Drake" and the "Serapis," which he vanquished, naval experts of the world have long speculated as to the outcome had our navy possessed a parity with the enemy.

THE INDIAN THORN IN THE BRITISH SIDE, Mahatma Gandhi, carries his case to turbaned university students. It was an incident preliminary to the nationalist idol's rebellious "march to the sea" to flout the salt laws.
(Underwood & Underwood photo.)

"SHE" IS "HE," as it's necessary to state, even at the cost of shattering a sentimental illusion. Which is prefatory to introduction of Raymond Rome and Vernon Hamel, both of Chicago, members of the cast of "Button, Button," annual show of the Haresfoot club of the University of Wisconsin. That diversion will be produced in Chicago at the Eighth Street theater a week from tomorrow night.

VISUALIZING INTERESTING LETTERS—Under this granite block in Sarajevo, Jugo-Slavia, lies the body of Gavrilo Princep, the young Serbian student who, sixteen years ago this summer, fired the shot that killed Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria and thus started the world war. Today's winner in The Tribune's contest for letters from faraway places is from Sarajevo.

THE EYES HAVE IT—The regally smoldering gaze is from Woodroffe Brutus, an Abyssinian of London and a traditional descendant of the sacred cat of ancient Egypt. There are only thirty of the breed in England, twenty of which were exhibited recently.

Look Lovely Tonight

Sallow, Dingy Skin made Lovely—Coarse Pores become Fine—Stops oily skin—Removes blackheads

Cremed magnesia beautifies the skin in the same easy way that milk of magnesia purifies the stomach

The newest discovery in beauty culture is that cremed magnesia beautifies the skin instantly, in the same easy way that milk of magnesia purifies the stomach. This is because skin impurities are acid. Doctors treat acid inside the body with milk of magnesia. And now, dermatologists are getting amazing results in banishing complexion faults with cremed magnesia. All you do is anoint your skin with it, massage and rinse with water. It's as simple as washing your face.

It reduces enlarged pores to the finest, smoothest texture. Being astringent, it drives away the tell-tale signs of age. It rejuvenates the skin so quickly that any woman can look lovely tonight, years younger.

And because it is so mild, it certainly is a blessing for fine, sensitive skins that soap so easily irritates and coarsens. It removes make-up and extracts impurities deep-set in the pores better than soap or cold cream. It changes dull, sallow skin to radiant clearness and fades out freckles better than a bushel of lemons.

Test it on those clogged nose pores that stand out so boldly. Let it whiten your neck. It will also keep your hands soft and white.

Until recently, cremed magnesia was used only by New York doctors' wives, and nurses. But now the large druggists everywhere find it hard to keep enough on hand to supply the demand.

10-DAY TRIAL OFFER

To get the genuine cremed magnesia ask for Denton's Facial Magnesia. The regular price is sixty cents and one dollar. But, if you act promptly by using the Trial Offer Coupon below at once, a large demonstration size will be mailed you for only fifty cents. So, wrap a fifty-cent coin in paper with the coupon and mail it today. When you see the startling improvement in your complexion, after using magnesia only once, you will understand why millions of women are changing from soaps and creams to magnesia. Remember, every bottle is sold on a money-back guarantee.

THE NEW

Burton Vanity Fair

INNER-SPRING

MATTRESS

No other mattress is like it—
Utterly New Spring Principle—
Ultra Smart style—

$35.75
for new luxury

NOW! The perfect mattress for every home or apartment, within the means of everyone!

It's new—brand new in every respect. No other mattress is like it. No other mattress can imitate it because its secrets are patented and owned exclusively by us!

The construction is based on an utterly new principle over 2 years in development! In producing this unit, over 400 different types of springs were experimented with before this perfect unit was discovered.

By an exclusive process, newly designed springs of carbon steel, highly tempered for extreme sensitivity, are locked and interlocked together by finest precision machines working with the care and accuracy of the human hand.

The result is positively amazing! Instead of a mattress with a wabbly, sagging and loose inner-spring construction you get an entirely new conception of what the ideal inner-spring mattress should be!

There is no sidesway—independent spring action prevents sagging, "hammocking."

Because of the 50% stronger coils—because of the specially treated high carbon wire and the after-tempering process, you get wonderful new buoyancy that is permanent. Buoyancy that cradles the body and causes complete relaxation—for perfect, sound sleep. Every square inch of surface supports the body and molds itself to the body contour. Adjusts itself to your individual weight!

Even delicate women turn Vanity Fair easily! There is no dangerous backstrain. Vanity Fair's scientific construction eliminates from 15 to 20 pounds of excess weight which makes average inner-spring mattresses awkward and hard to turn.

Orchid Jade Green Beige

Vanity Fair is noiseless. You hear no creaking as is the case with cheaper, poorly made inner-spring mattresses.

The spring construction is luxuriously covered with a first quality felt prepared by our special process to insure maximum comfort and durability.

Also, by eliminating excess weight the Vanity Fair is from 15 to 20 pounds lighter than the ordinary inner-spring mattress. It weighs only 45 pounds! Any woman can turn it with ease!

Glorious new covers

To give the new Vanity Fair an appropriate dress, we engaged one of the country's foremost designers—one who knows the fashion of the boudoir. The result is a finely finished and exclusive damask fabric beautifully decorated in an exquisite pattern in lovely colors—colors that make for warmth and harmony with other things in the bedroom!

To provide an extra measure of style, the sides are beautifully quilted in the manner of the finest old handmade down comforters. Also, unlike other inner-spring mattresses, the Vanity Fair has a perfectly formed quilted roll edge finely taped to enhance its appearance and wearing qualities. This new and exclusive smartness is found only on the Vanity Fair!

Special Air Windows on the sides of this extra depth mattress admit and discharge air freely to keep the inside as clean and pure as a windswept room.

The Vanity Fair was built to sell for $42.50, but by latest manufacturing economies developed by us we are able to produce this mattress to sell for only $35.75!

Each Vanity Fair carries a guaranty of satisfaction in every respect—backed by our wide experience of over 30 years in the bedding industry.

All these amazing features!

1. Sensitive highly tempered carbon steel springs compose our exclusive patented inner-spring construction built on utterly new hinge principle. They assure comfort and extra long service.
2. Finely finished damask fabric cover in lovely warm colors and exquisite designs—another exclusive feature of the Vanity Fair.
3. Perfect roll edge and fine "biscuit quilted" sides as seen in priceless antique down comforters.
4. Scientifically prepared first quality felt to enhance the "cushioning" of the inner-spring construction.
5. Special new Air Windows on sides to assure complete and perfect ventilation.

You owe it to yourself, to your health and to the health of every member of your family to at least see the Vanity Fair! Don't wait. Go to any of these stores tomorrow. Ask for it by name. Lie on it. Sit on it. Inspect it as you would any other piece of fine home furnishing and if you are not delighted with it—the super value it offers—you will not be asked to buy. Be sure to insist on the genuine. Look for this label—the Burton red stripe. It is your protection.

The new Burton Perfect Sleeping Units—mattresses, box springs and pillows—are designed to go "hand in glove" with each other both in construction and appearance. The box spring is designed to enhance the velvet softness of the mattress. With the celebrated Burton vitalized feather and down pillows you have the perfect ensemble for sound sleep, as well as ultra modish smartness in the bedchamber.

A FEW MORE MEN ARE NOW GIVEN THE OPPORTUNITY TO DUPLICATE THE FOLLOWING EXPERIENCES.

From scores of letters in this office we have quoted from twenty-seven—here's what men now with us say about their earnings.

These men did twenty-seven different kinds of work before they came with us—most of them never did anything like this work, and yet we trained them to quick success.

Come in and read the letters—meet some of the men—meet others, too, who have done as well or better. Many of these men have been with us five years. There's a permanency about this work that is very satisfactory to the man who wants steady employment.

An Unusual Salesman

One who has experience in sales promotion or selling high grade intangibles.

An organization rated AAA-1, operating nationally, is about to create a new national sales force to market an entirely new service.

Our business is 100% clean—repeats—has a real future for a real man.

If you can show an earning capacity in excess of $6,000 per year selling an intangible and have the ambition to double or triple that amount, call Randolph 4745 and ask for Mr. F. C. Schoen. Please do not ask us to describe our product over the telephone. The story is too important.

If you can answer our questions satisfactorily you will be granted a personal interview.

MEN

We will employ nine men who would like to connect with a well established company on a permanent basis. The company is the largest of its kind in the world, established a quarter of a century.

No large income is promised at the beginning. This is a permanent opportunity in which we desire to employ the kind of man who wants a real chance to get into a good substantial business and work up. All the executives of our company and its over 500 branch offices are men who have worked up through our own business. These men are now earning from $4,000 to $30,000 a year.

In the extension of our business on our new air-conditioning, heating-cooling systems, the opportunity is greater today than ever for the right type of man. Our sales increased 25% last year over the previous year. A comparatively new man [fifth year] made over $15,000.

However, this is not offered as a get-rich-quick job. Ours is a business you must study and learn. You receive a free course of instruction in heating engineering and salesmanship under practical men.

The men selected should be in a position to finance themselves for a sixty day period. The average man, however, can make a fair return right from the start.

Only men of A1 reputation and established habits of industry and optimism considered.

Give facts about yourself and past employment in confidential letter only.

STUDEBAKER PRESIDENT. 1930 Sedan lacquered a beautiful cobalt blue. Here is a sir. 8, seven pass., driven so little that it's just broken in. This is probably the best Studebaker buy in Chicago. PAIGE SEDAN. 1928 that's priced hundreds of dollars under its real market value. It's in wonderful condition and very fully equipped. $395.

STUDEBAKER COMMANDER. 1930 that was only driven a few hundred miles. It's a Six with beautiful orange wire wheels, mounted in fender wells, trunk, shock absorbers, and many other extras. You can make a big saving at our price of $1,095.

CHANDLER SEDAN. 1928 de luxe model with 4 wh. brakes, shock absorbers, heater, bumpers, spare tire, etc. It's worth at least twice our price. Only $585.

AUTOMOBILES FOR SALE.

PIERCE-ARROW
If you want to save money in the purchase of a used car, investigate our buys at once!

PIERCE-ARROW SEDAN-LIMO. 7 pass., model 33, that's in exceptionally good condition. Has good tires and the motor is smooth and powerful. Many extras. $795.

PACKARD EIGHT 1929 SEDAN-LIMO. Only driven 12,366 mi. that's de luxe in every respect. Has leather driver's seat, glass partition, fender wells, and a wealth of extra equipment. This car can be cornered into a regular sedan. Sold for $6,000 a short time ago, now $2,350. Also like brand new for $2,350.

CHRYSLER 80 SEDAN.
This distinctive model 80 is undoubtedly the best Chrysler buy in Chicago. It was owned by a wealthy Chicagoan in conjunction with two other expensive cars. So this particular auto received little mileage. It's beautiful, of extra equipment. Sold for $3,800 originally, today $900.

LINCOLN SEDAN.
Late models that was oiled and greased every 500 miles by the original owner. Has Disctich body, 4 whl. brakes, and many extras. A pickup at $1,400.

BUICK SEDAN.
1929. Only run a few thousand miles. This is the big Buick of the long wheelbase and it's absolutely in new condition. Has two spare tires mounted in fender wells, shock absorbers, trunk rack, bumpers, and many other extras. Can be obtained at a big saving.

HUPMOBILE SEDANS.
We have 5 Hupps in stock that are very attractive buys and we offer them at reasonable savings. One of them is a 1929 str. 8 five pass. Sedan. It's equipped with shock absorbers, spare tire, and other extras. Every feature is in the original new condition. In fact this Hupp was driven so little that we defy anybody to distinguish it from a brand new model. The other is a 1928 six cyl. 5 pass. Sedan, with fender wells, 2 spare tires, bumpers, shock absorbers, etc. Has very low mileage. The car sparkles like a new dollar and the upholstery appears unworn. Motor is very smooth. Both of these Hupps are priced unusually low.

PIERCE-ARROW BROUGHAM.
Model 80 with excellent tires, and hundreds of dollars' worth of extra equipment. This car was chauffeur driven, and it's in wonderful condition today. $750.

PACKARD SIX SEDAN.
Third series 7 pass. that was in storage for 13 mos., so it will satisfy the most exacting buyer. Has 4 whl. brakes, Houdaille shock absorbers, shutter front, windshield heater, spare tire, bumpers, etc. Only $550.

EVENING MODES FULL OF FEMININE WILES

Fashions Are Many Sided and Comprehensive, but They All Stress Simplicity, Flowing Lines and Womanly Charm.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—(Special.)—Looking around at the spring evening fashions of Paris, even casually, with the traditional bird's eye, one quality stands out like a major domo. They are replete with feminine wiles and witchery. Not a trick has been left out. The master minds which designed these styles certainly knew a thing or two about what men yearn for in ladylike beauty, and a whole encyclopedia-full about what makes the frail sex a successful eye-full.

Those women who seek one-syllable fashions are in for a tough time of it this spring. You cannot pounce on any one kind of costume and feel, triumphantly This is It—the Paris mode. The mode is, on the contrary, many sided and comprehensive enough so that all the women can exercise W. and W. all the time.

There are a few rules of one syllable simplicity, but they are only the skeleton upon which the living, breathing fashions of the day are hung. There is the rule that the bodice shall be no more than one-third of the dress silhouette. You all know that one. It includes the side issue of the waistline.

There is the rule that the skirt hem shall come down in front. And there is the regulation that when the dress is long the coat shall be short. All of these rules have exceptions, but you're not obliged to take an exception if you do not want to. Most smart women will not.

In what bold contrast to these meager rules are the thousands of personal and individual ways in which smart evening clothes are made and bedecked! Some of these can be classified, however, as typical, as, for instance, drapery—and ruffles. Nothing is more bewitching when worn by a sophisticated woman than a draped frock and no dress detail ever invented more alluring for a girlish female than ruffles. So, naturally, these two items are pretty generally employed in making Paris evening clothes this spring.

Another thing for those who want their spring styles analyzed and catalogued, to take hold of, are the sharp color contrasts that heaps of evening clothes show in Paris. Black with white, or pink, or blue, as an example, make color schemes that Paris dotes upon, and there's no denying that such opposing shades in close juxtaposition create an atmosphere of witchery.

And then there's lace, every thread woven with feminine allure, and it is unquestionably the lace makers' heyday this spring, with Chanel alone showing about fifty lace evening frocks and all of the others doing likewise. After lace comes satin with its siren sheen, and between us, girls, that's a material which radiates allure. Millions of yards of printed chiffon and crêpes, lamés and satins have been fashioned into spring evening gowns. Please take note that these prints are in the sweetest flower patterns and the softest pastel colors.

Speaking of flowers, artificial ones bloom all over the dress-scape, this spring. They are made into a bouquet and carried in a long-gloved hand at Maggy Rouff's. Clusters of field flowers grow out of the belts and sashes that circle the waistline chez Poiret. Many Paris dressmakers put them on the hip. Callot Soeurs make one shoulder strap entirely of flowers in a garland, and Jean Patou tucks little bouquets into the bosom of day and evening dresses. Flowers this spring are not, in general, monotonous one-toned blooms, but in nature's own colors, and variegated at that, which adds a big percentage of allure to fashions.

Paris has done a great deal to improve the evening wrap situation from the point of view of charm. The time when one evening wrap functioned with all kinds of evening dresses is now the dead past. Evening wraps are designed to go with special frocks nowadays, and for spring this is not too great a strain because capes or coats are brief affairs with no great amount of fabric involved. They often match the dress goods, and owe their unmistakable charm to drapery and line. With the instep-length and sometimes longer evening frock, a wisp of a cape or jacket draped about the shoulders is all that is necessary for protection and more than enough for attractiveness of appearance.

Some smart women this season will wear tiny shoulder capes or bolero jackets of white ermine, and they will have a huge portion of chic, but more will wear short coats or capes of the tissue of their evening dresses. A good number of these short wraps will be trimmed with fur, applied in clever ways to increase the witchery of the ensemble.

Such a wrap is worn with the evening ensemble shown in one of our sketches today—a model from Norman Hartnell, the young designer who has made a sensational success creating clothes for the English aristocracy. The dress and short coat of this ensemble are made of white satin. The coat has long tight sleeves and a rippling, cutaway front closing.

Its unique charm, however lies in the oddly shaped yoke and scarf collar of black broadtail. The sleeves, also, are capped with black broadtail, which is curved up in an inverted V on the outside of the arm. The dress has a simple bodice and a deep skirt yoke made of swathing diagonal bands, from which the irregular panels of the skirt hang in slender folds.

One of the knock-out summer evening wraps seen in Paris this spring is the tiger-lily red velvet one shown in another sketch. This wrap has a very short fitted jacket of velvet, with three-quarters sleeves, over which is draped a real Greek toga, attached to the left front opening of the jacket and draped in folds over the arms as shown.

The bunch of flowers in soft tones of beige is attached to the off-white satin frock, but shows through the folds of the coat. The dress has a simple Greek draped bodice and a slender instep-length skirt that falls in classic folds, one of the smartest skirt effects of spring fashions. Model from Elspeth Champcommunal.

The lace and tulle evening ensemble sketched illustrates the Paris vogue for fluffy ruffles. Norman Hartnell makes the long princess bodice of the dress of powder blue lace, and the plaited tulle ruffles of the skirt shade from powder to very dark blue at the hemline. The jacket is tulle, in the lighter blue, and is edged with plaited ruffles. This dress reaches to the insteps in front and to the floor in back.

A perfect example of the play of contrasts in the evening color scheme in shown in our sketch of an evening ensemble from Marcel Rochas. The dress is made of sea-green moire with two narrow diagonal ruffles of green, lined with black moire. The circular side panels of the lower skirt are also lined with black moire and this shows at the cascading sides of the panels on the front and back of the skirt.

Two green flowers with black leaves are placed on the left side of the décolleté. The green moire circular cape is lined with black moire, and so is its long green scarf, which acts as a collar.

[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Sea-green moire makes this Marcel Rochas evening ensemble, and cape and ruffles are lined with black moire, making a smart contrast and one of the season's style features.

PARIS SNAPSHOTS

Chanel's blouses made of plaid chiffon and georgette are one of the biggest hits of the style season.

Callots' black silk frocks and suits trimmed with ruffles of narrow ecru lace, Chanel's evening frock entirely covered with narrow Valenciennes ruffles, and Jenny's narrow lace ruffles around evening necklines give a good deal of importance to this fashion feature.

Molyneux' ruffled triangular shawls made of printed chiffon to match evening dresses for summer are doing their bit to further the ensemble idea.

Maggy Rouff's sweaters of spider-web wool lace in pastel colors have given this sports garment a new lease on chic.

Schiaparelli's necklaces made of varicolored straw tubes are something new in sports jewelry.

Norman Hartnell calls this stunning white satin evening ensemble "Cold Comfort" and proceeds to make it warm by the addition of a yoke and sleeve caps of black broadtail to the jacket.

Champcommunal designed this modern Greek evening ensemble with a frock of off-white satin and toga-jacket of tiger lily velvet.

This is one of the fashionable tulle and lace evening ensembles that Paris adores. Hartnell makes the bodice of powder blue lace and the skirt of plaited tulle ruffles shading from powder to dark blue. The jacket is of tulle.

By Jane Eddington

The Most Elementary Article of the Diet, Bread, May Be Made Into the Most Luxurious and Delectable

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

THERE are good reasons why fine breads in their infinite varieties are the most fundamental items in a satisfactory diet. The satisfactions that come from them are many sorts. The most elementary and most frequently unobserved is the mere bodily comfort we may have each and every hour of the day, leading up always to the moment of eating, as well as for the time after eating—two periods in which many people have digestive discomfort.

A sparse diet may be a reasonably safe one if one of its constituents is a milk bread, yet the individual who eats too much bread and exercises or works too little is more than likely to be obese. The overeating of bread is a first and often the chiefest cause of obesity. Therefore, we may say a safe law for the man who likes and eats much bread is that he must balance this eating with great activity. Or we may put it thus: The man of great activity needs a diet containing plenty of bread.

The Bread Unit.

The loaf is the bread making unit. In actual practice most people make more than one loaf of yeast bread at a time, but there is an advantage mathematically in getting in mind thoroughly the proportions of a single loaf. The person who cooks for one or two people only will have an advantage in not only getting this in mind, but in making a single loaf—the single loaf of white, oatmeal, graham or raisin bread, varying the breads with the strict intention of fostering the appetite of the eater.

One Standard Kneaded Loaf.

1 cup liquid. ¼ to 1 ounce compressed yeast.
2 cups flour.
1 tablespoon shortening
1 teaspoon salt 1 tablespoon sugar

Process or Method—Scald the liquid, usually milk. Melt the butter in it and cool the whole to a tepid temperature. Many a sponge and dough has failed to rise because the yeast was added to a milk hot enough to cook it, or kill it. Perhaps this is the most frequent cause of failure, though setting a sponge or dough to rise where it is too cool or too hot is the next cause.

Dissolve the yeast in a little of the liquid when it has reached the tepid temperature, but it is safer to use two to four tablespoons of tepid water for the yeast, starting it soon enough to rest well. In dissolving the yeast in this amount of liquid, add the sugar, which hastens the start of fermentation. This whole process of starting the yeast is called a testing of it.

When extra liquid is used, as in the case of this tepid water, it is necessary usually to add a little more than the three cups of flour for a single loaf of bread, but in doubling the recipe it may not be necessary to use more than six cups of flour when this extra liquid is used for the yeast.

Some people for this reason like to state the formula thus:

½ cup liquid
2 cups flour
1 tablespoon shortening
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1 compressed yeast cake
¼ cup luke warm liquid

In making this bread by the sponge method, save out half the flour, beat all the rest of the ingredients together thoroughly, set to rise at a temperature between 78 and 80 degrees, or one more than 10 degrees above ordinary room temperature. When the sponge is double, cut it down, begin to stir in the remainder of the flour, and when the dough becomes too stiff to stir with a spoon, knead it on a floured board until it is smooth and elastic and does not stick.

This is a process that may be described with many words. When kneading, make it into a loaf, put into a buttered bread pan, allow to rise somewhat but not quite to double, bake a single loaf in an oven near 200 for a little above 350 degrees for one hour.

For a quicker bread, combine all the flour with the wet at the start and knead in the same way as the second process. Put the kneaded dough into a buttered bowl, turning it around and around until it is slightly buttered, cover up closely so that there will not be any evaporation, let rise to double, cut down, knead into a loaf or divide the dough into rolls. If the dough is to be rolled it should not be kneaded or handled after this rising.

Unkneaded Doughs.

A dough of exceedingly light texture is best for rolls and buns. The less flour there is in a dough, the lighter of texture it can be. If a dough is well beaten instead of kneaded, then allowed to rise, it can often be handled as well as a dough that was kneaded and raised. The beginner sometimes finds it difficult to handle even the latter sort, that is, it may seem sticky.

The only difference in the proportions between an unkneaded dough and one that is kneaded can be that two and a half cups of flour only to one cup of liquid or five cups of flour to two of liquid need be used, but a regular standard bread formula may be used for the unkneaded dough. To make it more like a kneaded dough, it may in either case be worked with a spoon after it has been reasonably stirred as follows: Using a stiff spoon, brace your forefinger in the bowl and work the dough with a down pressure until it is almost as smooth as when kneaded.

Then, if the smooth top is buttered and it is set to rise, it will have a smooth top when risen and this top may be stretched somewhat in making it up expeditiously in loaves and rolls, so that they will have about as smooth a surface as when made from a kneaded dough, though for a true velvety texture the kneading is necessary.

Excellent for Kitchenettes.

This way of making attractive breads—the risen dough may be divided and subdivided just as can a kneaded dough to make rolls, buns, etc.—is a boon to those who have but tiny kitchens where there is not a quiet, cool and undistracting place for a bread board.

A five quart kettle of thoroughly scoured alumnium is a good utensil for making a two loaf batch of dough, and it is not so high that one cannot work or knead the dough well in it. It must have a close cover. A short handled, stiff tablespoon will go down into it, and it should be gripped near the handle when the forefinger is firmly braced in the bowl in order to work in all specks of flour and to work out all lumps from the dough.

Many sorts of rolls and plain muffins may be made of the unkneaded dough, and all sort of additions made to it, like mashed potato, boiled rice, or other cereals and the resulting doughs so made may be variously manipulated. It is much easier now to make such breads than to remember the exact proportions in the quick breads made with eggs and baking powder, although a thorough mastery of the batter principles will make these latter easy to remember, also.

Plain Unkneaded Yeast Muffins.

Pull off little bits of unkneaded dough from the main mass or pieces which will make a little sphere not larger than a golf ball. Roll these pieces in the palm of the left hand with the fingers of the right, and drop them into buttered muffin tins and bake quickly in a hot oven which may be nearly up to 500 degrees.

The smaller the roll, the more heat can be used. Before putting these to bake, pat them over with the bowl of a teaspoon wet in cold water. Baked for ten or fifteen minutes only in an oven hot enough, they should have a deliciously thin and crisp crust.

Unkneaded dough, as well as the kneaded dough, may be used to half fill the crispy bread tin in which is baked the round and fluted loaves. This bread tin opens with a hinge, and closes with a clasp, and a lively dough of any sort will rise enough to fill the upper half, if it is put into an oven just when the fire is lighted or after the fire has for five minutes burned out the dead air in the oven—the door being open.

Put in the filled tin, close the door and let the heat run up to a little above regular bread baking temperature, or to at least 360 degrees, for baking the loaf. This makes an excellent bread to toast. The round slices make a pleasant variation, also.

Clover Leaf Rolls.

Have buttered medium sized muffin tins, or the smaller ones, but not the smallest of all. Take up little bits of unkneaded dough and roll it into marbles and place three of these marbles in each compartment of the tin, making what are sometimes called "trinity rolls," by a method described when they are made of rolled dough as "cut three and make one." When the tins are filled, let their contents rise about a third, and then bake in a hot oven. The smoother the marbles are rolled and the more uniform they are the more set or conventionally pretty the final effect will be.

A kneaded dough is easily rolled into a marble without a seam on any side, and this can also be done in case of the unkneaded dough. In cutting these out from a rolled dough use a cutter the size of the hole in a doughnut. These may be buttered and baked in a moderate oven for a soft roll or wet with ice water and baked in a hot oven in a shorter time and until they have a crisp and browner crust.

Pat little rolls of unkneaded dough into a thin cake, put into muffin tins, pat down into a cake, butter over top, and then put another cake over each. Bake rather slowly so that they will be soft, split and use for creamed vegetables or meats with gravies spread over them.

Filling Vital Needs

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

Indirect Methods Prove Effective in Avoiding Mealtime and Nap Difficulties.

"MY little boy won't eat. Each meal is a struggle."

"My little girl won't take her nap. She plays and gets out of bed and I scold her and even spank her. But there is no improvement."

"I cannot seem to get my small son into the 'dry habit.' I talk to him and coax him and spend hours each day trying to train him."

Over and over and over again I see the joy of having children spoiled by this eternal struggle over the establishing of routine habits of eating, sleeping, and elimination.

This thing of establishing physical habits gets out of all proportion. And the more emphasis there is placed upon it, the more tension there is, and the more emotional tension, the less chance of getting results.

There Are Other Needs.

Now, no one who has ever had the sole care of her children is going to dismiss the physical care of them with a wave of the hand. Eating, sleeping and elimination—the need of their proper carrying through speaks for itself. And because the smooth handling of these precesses is so much desired by parents, undue importance is attached to them in the early years.

Or perhaps I should say, so much importance is attached to them that other needs of the little child are often neglected. And he has other needs than these prysical ones. If these other less obvious needs are given attention, the physical routine is easily handled.

These other vital needs are: Active, creative play; interesting companionship with mother, father, and other children, if possible; the satisfaction of an inquiring mind; the warmth of spontaneous affection from parents and for their response to his affection; free and reasonabe treatment; understanding of character and disposition.

These needs are often neglected, with the result that the balance of the child's life is thrown off. Then, with his life out of balance and undue emphasis on eating, sleeping, and elimination, these latter things, instead of taking their casual place in his world, loom large. And they often provide him with attention and excitement, while to his parents they become an end instead of a means to an end.

This is a mistake, because after all good health is not an aim all in itself. We want good health for ourselves so we can live fully and freely. We want good health for our children, not just so they can be healthy but so that, being healthy, they can live and love and work and play to the fullest.

This realization of the balance necessary in children's lives has to come with their earliest years. We must not specialize on physical care. We must give them, also, everything else they need to round them out.

Active Play Is Vital.

Of these various needs, one of the greatest is a child's need for active creative play. For this he needs simple but suitable play materials—both indoors and out. Sometimes a house in which a little child has freedom will supply almost everything he needs for satisfying indoor play. If a house has grounds with garden tools and animals and equipment he will find what he needs for outdoor play. Such favorable surroundings will supply almost everything,—but not quite everything.

Just physical care alone won't satisfy the deep needs of the child. He has other needs to be fulfilled if he is to become a round, rich, full personality—a source of happiness to himself and every one else. And now for a good, flat, practical statement for those who may think all this is "fine talk."

Strange as it will seem to many parents—and it surely will to many if not to you—what will happen is this. When these other needs that were listed, less tangible than the physical ones, are supplied it often happens that all the eating troubles and sleeping troubles and elimination troubles vanish into thin air!

Perhaps only one of the elements a child needs to balance him, like joy, or love, or freedom, is left out of his life. Perhaps more—perhaps all are lacking.

Supply them—and he usually eats well, sleeps well, and develops satisfactory toilet habits.

A Logical Result.

After all, it's logical enough. Apply it to yourself. If you're interested, loved, loving, happy, busy, and have lots of exercise and fresh air—your physical appetite and functions improve and take their place in the background. Why shouldn't it be so with children?

So, instead of overemphasizing the formation of routine habits, instead of putting the physical on a pinnacle, occupy your thoughts and your energy with what your small son or daughter needs in the way of play, interests, companionship, love, and understanding.

Lovely Marion Lee of "My Girl Friday" prefers the PLAIN BOB. Proper care keeps her hair in wonderful condition.

The easy way to have soft, wavy, gleaming hair...

THE modern sculptured bobs do wonders to bring out your personality. But like other present-day models of arranging the hair, they call attention to it. That's why it's so important nowadays to keep your hair soft, lustrous, abundant. The easiest and quickest way to give new lustre and color to hair, which has begun to look dull and lifeless, is with Danderine. And it makes the hair softer, easier to arrange; holds it in place.

Here's all you do. Each time you use your brush just put a little Danderine on it. It removes the oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; gives it more gloss than brilliantine. Waves "set" with it stay in longer.

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff; puts the scalp in the pink of condition. It stops falling hair. A small bottle is enough to show its merit. Start on it tonight.

Patterns and How to Use Them

By Clotilde

Charming Frocks Suitable for General, Travel, and Afternoon Wear Can Be Quickly Fashioned at Home.

An opportunity to have a smart dress is within the reach of every woman who makes her own clothes. Pattern No. 2692 is one of the latest Parisian designs and just the cost of a few yards of material is all that you will have to consider. Upper and lower parts of the dress are cut separately. In the back the bodice is plain and the skirt is rather full. The front of the bodice is cut in two pieces—the right front in both waist and skirt laps well over the left.

Baste the bodice seams together and try on. When satisfactorily fitted, stitch. Bind the seam edges separately and press open flat. Directions that come with the pattern tell plainly how to plait and gather the little flounce. After this is done, baste the skirt seams together, stitch and finish. Then the upper and lower parts are put together in a wrong side seam. The back of the dress is bound or faced—as you prefer—and a vestee is made and tacked securely in place.

The sleeves are made close fitting by means of a dart. After the seams have been finished, pin the sleeves into the armholes. Notches and perforations must be matched. Then, holding the sleeves towards you, baste it in across the top. If there is a slight fullness, run a fine gathering thread and arrange the fullness so that the gathering won't show. Then, to baste the under side of the sleeve in the dress, hold the dress next to you, and baste. A bias binding can be stitched in place at the time the sleeve is stitched to the armhole, and then the opposite edge hemmed over the seam, or the seam may be overcasted. Catch the edge of the seam to the shoulder seam before pressing.

A smart dress for immediate wear for sports, travel, classroom or general daytime wear is shown in pattern No. 3070. In the back the dress is quite plain, while in the front the low placed fullness is laid in box plaits and stitched to the front in a curved and diagonal outline. A wide suede belt nips the normal waistline. The turnover flaring collar, and turnback flaring cuffs are made of a contrasting color and the edges bound with a dark color.

Printed wool jersey in beige and brown, with plain jersey in blending tones, Spanish red Canton crêpe, dark dahlia flat silk crêpe, and covert cloth in wine red are practical suggestions.

Pattern No. 3223 is a delightfully pretty afternoon frock for the smart sub-deb. It shows the Spanish influence in the wide hip sash tied in a bow at the right side. The dress is the fashionable new length, and the two circular flounces are placed low to emphasize the flat, slender looking hipline. The molded bodice has the flattering cape collar that is decidedly new. It starts at either side of the front, falling softly over the shoulders.

The neck is cut in a rounding outline, is bound and finished at the left side by a pretty bow. The sleeves are long and close fitting, but for the warm days that are coming, they could be short sleeves, or no sleeves.

Orange red flat silk crêpe, with a deeper shade for the bows would be pleasing. For more conservative wear choose a midnight blue wool crêpe, printed rayon crêpe in beige and brown coloring with plain crêpe contrasting, bottle green Canton crêpe or rust brown faille silk crêpe.

2692—Woman's and miss' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years, and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3 yards of 40 inch material with ⅜ yard of 36 inch material for bows and ¼ yard of 8 inch material for the vestee.

3070—Woman's and miss' dress. Sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 16 requires 2⅝ yards of 39 inch material with ⅝ yard of 35 inch contrasting, and 3½ yards of binding.

3223—Girl's dress. Sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years. Size 16 requires 4¼ yards of 39 inch material, with ⅞ yard of 35 inch contrasting.

Erect Posture Pays Dividends

By Antoinette Donnelly

The Woman Who Carries Herself Well Is Most Likely to Rank High in Every Other Point of Personal Care and Grooming

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Do you know that there is an establishment in New York City catering among other things to figure improvement and that the course for figures consists almost exclusively in teaching women how to carry their bodies properly?

And women, it is reported on the best of authority, are paying out their hard earned money to take the course. Maybe we had better modify that last statement about hard earned money. Anyway, they are spending money. Nor are we complaining about the expenditure. For any one who can afford it, it is a good investment. Knowing women as we do, we know that "if you make 'em pay, they'll do what they're told." That is, if you make them pay enough.

It does go to prove, though, that even good common sense about posture rules is more salable to some women when it is done up in attractive surroundings. Our modern beauty salons are nothing if not attractive.

Gravitate to Indifference.

But the psychology of the erect posture in connection with figure reduction is excellent, whether you take it from me along with the other things you get with the price of your paper, or whether you lay down your five per or ten per or whatever the exponent referred to charges.

It is true that some women who are overweight do have a good carriage, but they are few in number. And they are the kind of plump women that are thoroughly pleasing to the eye.

Ordinarily, however, the body slump and superfluous fat are seen in each other's company. Poor posture, to be sure, does not create all the flesh that may be called extra. But there is a psychological reaction to a bad posture that makes one only half aware of the need of keeping the weight under control. With the sloppy posture, the mind is more likely to gravitate to indifference regarding those extra pounds.

On the other hand, when one's figure is keen and alert, the mind is also keen and alert to suggestions about how to keep the weight in bounds. Not only does the psychology bear weight on poundage but on other items of personal upkeep.

Standing Up Straight.

I have studied this thing of posture assiduously and my conclusion is that women who walk with abdomen held in, chest up and rise and fall on the soles of their feet are, nine times out of ten, the women who pass inspection on almost every point of personal care and grooming. It may seem curious, but it is true. And, as I have pointed out, times without number, the asset of an easy, graceful, erect carriage is beyond dispute.

But to get back to the instruction referred to in the beginning of this article. The posture lessons are not sold as posture lessons, but as reducing measures. The great value of them lies in making women conscious of that bulge in the diaphragm and of the abdomen which is overcome in many cases by the simple expedient of standing up properly. It is amazing what this simple "stretching" exercise does. Stand in front of your own mirror and try it. Use a tape measure if you must have conclusive evidence. Measure slumped and measure straightened up and note the difference in inches.

Diet and Exercise.

Now the year 1930 is going to be hard on the girl or woman whose midsection is not flat and reasonably slender. A bust is called for in all of the new type clothes. The hips need to be slender.

If you are more than ten pounds overweight you will need to go on a fairly rigid diet. But, if you are just getting thick around the middle and you wish awfully that you could tie one of those girlish belts around your normal waistline, you can manage it before many weeks are out if you reduce your daily food intake by one-third and practice the posture rule of pulling back your abdomen, lifting up your chest and walking about with the stretch feeling until you have acquired the leaner line without seeming to make an effort.

Then I would suggest that you do daily—morning and night—two good stretching exercises. No more is necessary if you do these two from 50 to 100 times. Start out with 20 times each and do three times a day, if you are in a hurry to get the waist in shape for girlish belting. Then do each 50 times morning and night and increase until you can do them 75 or a 100 times. Fifty is a good score and will accomplish a great deal.

The two which I will recommend to you are simple. One is an old timer—the best exercise I know for the stretching purposes we have in mind and for flattening that particular section of the body.

Be Persistent.

Stand with feet apart and arms raised sidewise at shoulder level. Bend trunk forward downward, touching right toe with left hand. Return to position and repeat with opposite hand and toe. Knees are kept straight. This is better than the straight forward toe touching exercise because it means a turn at the waistline. Of course, the good old fashioned toe toucher is not to be scorned. It has helped too many a waist and hip line.

Then this one: Stand, heels together, arms extended over head. Bend your abdomen forward as far as you can without losing balance. Bend it back until your body forms an arc. You had better go a bit easy on this one if you've been neglecting your exercises. But it is good for that particular fat ailment around the waist about which you will be complaining when you see all the other girls girdled in so snappily this spring and summer.

I think it is unwise for one who has been doing no exercise to arm herself with a variety of them. They are discouraging and are likely to be given up soon. But conquer a few that take in a good section of the body and work away at them. Your figure will respond to this method. If they seem monotonous in the doing, turn on the music.

And in the meantime, walk, sit, stand with that abdomen held in, with the chest up and be convinced that you are hastening the return of your silhouette to the proportions wanted.

Solving Space Problems

By Edith Weigle

This Empire bed is adapted to a small room.

Love seat and commode built on a small scale.

Unless Furniture Is Carefully Selected the Small Apartment Becomes as Cluttered as a Junk Shop.

HOUSES that our mothers and grandmothers lived in may have offered problems in their day, but in this age of cramped quarters and high rentals one looks back on those spacious, high ceilinged rooms, with a wistful longing.

They are slowly disappearing in the mists of time, and in their stead rise city apartments, tier on tier, toward the smoke laden sky, each containing a surprising number of cubicles, for the most part square and low ceilinged with steel windows and cork floors and ever so many problems for the interior decorator.

"How can I make a small room appear large?" is one of the frequent plaintive wails of the skyscraper dweller. How can she make 6x8 look like 15x20?

The empire bed, shown today, is ideal for an apartment bedroom. Its lines are delicate and graceful, and extreme simplicity adds to its beauty. It is largely made by hand by a group of skilled craftsmen. The wood is fine Cuban crotch mahogany.

A small French sofa helps solve the problem in the living room. A long down filled cushioned seat makes it extremely comfortable, and small satin and taffeta pillows add touches of color. The little walnut commode is beautifully carved and has a top of marble on which a French figurine lamp is placed. A quaint picture after the manner of Fragonard is set off by an oval frame and is seen above the sofa.

One of the most charming rooms I have seen in a long time was a Directoire bedroom, a corner of which is shown in one of today's pictures. The prevailing colors were cream, coral, and green. A little soft blue was also used. The end of the room pictured was really lovelier than the photograph, for there was not the feeling of crowding that, perhaps, is evident in the picture.

A stunning screen of silver paper with a top frieze of Grecian figures done in dark green is placed back of a day bed upholstered in blue and green striped silk. A French mirror with a floral picture above the glass hangs over the mantel, which is classic in its simplicity. Two adorable little satinwood tables of the Adam period fit in excellently with the other pieces.

The window treatment is refreshing. Instead of the billowing taffeta seen to the point of weariness in most French bedrooms, these draperies are made of glazed chintz in a chic shade of coral. They are a solid color—no figures—and are trimmed with a ball edging. The valance is simply a long strip of the material hung over two decorative knobs and falling in folds above the draperies.

There are two windows in the room and each has one drapery only, which is placed at the outer side of the frame, with the result that the windows seem part of a symmetrical whole.

In a bachelor maid one room apartment this day bed shown can easily be converted into a bed and thus serve two purposes and save space.

An interesting corner of a French bedroom.

The American Colonial Period

New England Cottage Furniture of Pre-Revolutionary Days Has a Charm That Has Carried It Over Into the 20th Century

ALTHOUGH much of the American colonial furniture closely followed the English, Dutch and Huguenot styles, there were many indigenous characteristics and adaptations which clearly mark it as American. It is true that homes of the early seventeenth and eighteenth centuries were furnished partly with pieces brought over from the old country, but the early colonists were unable to carry with them more than a few examples and the great majority of their furniture was made in America.

Imported pieces usually served as patterns and it is interesting to note the different elements which were introduced in pieces made in the various colonies. In New England the general trend was toward English styles, with the plainer forms predominating. Dutch types were prevalent in New York and Pennsylvania. More elaborate furniture, mostly imported, with a noticeable amount of carved oak and upholstered pieces, was to be found in the south.

For the sake of clarity in description it is best to consider the various influences in geographical sections, starting with New England. Being of especially thrifty nature, the early New Englanders made exceptionally well constructed, sturdy furniture. As a result, a great many pieces have been handed down to the present day in excellent condition.

Pieces adapted from the early Jacobean style were usually of the simpler type, with much of the elaborate carving and turning omitted. Court cupboards, settles and chests were among the items most popular at the time. In producing these, as well as pieces of later date, colonial cabinetmakers equaled and sometimes even surpassed their English contemporaries.

Following the Jacobean came the William and Mary trend in colonial production and this, in turn, was superseded by the Queen Anne style. Simplicity was pleasingly combined with grace of line and Queen Anne cabriole legs were greatly favored. So strong was the fancy for this type of leg that it continued to be used on pieces of furniture made long after Queen Anne's rule.

By the time that Chippendale styles were introduced, many New England families were well established and had amassed considerable wealth. Consequently, they were able to furnish their homes more elaborately than they could have done during earlier periods.

American Chippendale furniture, then, was made in detailed as well as plain types. Difficult details, such as claw and ball feet, were frequently omitted, and club feet were used in their stead.

After the Chippendale era and during the period of Heppelwhite's popularity, troubles with the mother country arose. As a result, Heppelwhite's styles did not reach a high wave of interest in this country. Sheraton's influence, immediately following, was much more strongly felt. Designs copied from or based on Sheraton lines were carried out in chairs, sideboards, bedsteads, sofas and tables.

Practically all of the New England colonial furniture follows that made in England. The chief difference lies in the materials used and in the emphasizing or modification of certain trends. In the early colonial settlements, in addition to oak and walnut, native woods were used to a great extent. Chief among these were hickory, ash, elm, maple, pine, cedar, cherry and birch.

Mahogany became popular about 1740, but during the years of trouble with the old country gum tree wood was often substituted because of the fact that mahogany had to be imported from those foreign colonies which were under the rule of England.

Another noticeable difference between English and New England styles was the widespread use of cottage furniture in the colonies during the contemporary Queen Anne age. Rush-bottom, ladder-back and banister-back chairs were everywhere in evidence and were especially favored. Windsor chairs, too, were carried to a much finer development than ever they had been in England. They appeared in a great variety of forms—side chairs, armchairs, loop-back, hoop-back, low-back, comb-back and the graceful fan back.

As a rule, they were made of hickory, ash or some such wood, and were either stained green or painted. Legs were turned and raked and the seats, usually of wood, were pleasingly shaped.

Peculiar to American colonial production, too, were the butterfly tables which are so useful even today. In addition, there were adaptions of the English gateleg, round or oval, cabriole legs and card tables.

It might be wise to state here that the word "colonial" is often misused to specify all furniture made in America previous to 1840. The term colonial can rightly be applied only to the pre-revolutionary styles. Those pieces which were based on Sheraton lines are not truly "colonial," though they so closely followed the days of the revolution and were so different from the ensuing American empire mode that they are generally classed with the earlier, colonial styles.

As was the case in England, the empire influence in America succeeding that of Sheraton was drastically different in nature from the style which had preceded it. Consequently it had best be treated in a separate section.

Today's illustration shows a pleasing New England colonial group. Walls are pine paneled, with recessed shelves for books.

At the small paned window there are calico print curtains with tiny flowers on a blue ground. The comfortable wing chair is upholstered in a heavily woven blue and white material. Beside it stands a butterfly table, holding a lamp made from a simple pottery jug, with a plain parchment shade. The decorative chest is of Jacobean inspiration.

My Funny Dolly

By Eleanor Jewett.

I have a rag dolly,
Her bright little eyes
Are the kind that can give you
An awful surprise.

Sometimes they are brown,
Sometimes they are blue,
Sometimes they are black!
Do you know what I do?

Her eyes are just buttons,
I sew them on tight—
I can match all her dresses,
From scarlet to white.

But she generally wears
(And how they do shine!)
Two round black shoe buttons
That almost match mine.

Waited for Service.

About twenty years ago my husband and I, after spending a Saturday afternoon shopping in the loop, felt hungry, and, being near a cafeteria, entered and sat down at a table. After waiting about fifteen minutes and wondering why no one took our order, the manager came over to our table and courteously told us it was a help yourself place and explained to us where to find the trays and how to assemble our meal.

We were both much embarrassed. M. T.

Passing It Along.

One of my sister's friends presented her with a lovely luncheon set for her birthday. She had so many of these sets that I agreed to buy this one from her to give to a friend of mine who was being married.

Imagine my surprise and embarrassment when my friend, upon opening the package and examining the set thoroughly, found the original card written to my sister, "Congratulations to B. from M." K. J.

Money for Cakes.

I had all my upper teeth extracted, and while waiting for my plate became sort of a recluse because of my appearance. I had refused my husband's invitations on several occasions, but finally decided to accept a kind neighbor's request to ride out to the Speedway hospital with her. I told my husband that I was going for the ride only and wouldn't think of going into the hospital. Arriving at the hospital, she informed me it might require two hours to finish her work and that I could visit the workshops and inspect the articles for sale which the boys had made by hand.

How could I refuse? There were many attractive things for sale, and the boys were so patient showing us all their wares that I wanted to purchase something, but reflected that it would reveal the fact that I had gone inside to my husband. Vowing to come back some other time to make my purchases, I said to my neighbor: "I wish you had told me about these things. I came totally unprepared." Naturally she thought I had no money, and rather than explain I allowed that impression to remain.

On our way home we stopped at a bakery shop to buy some goodies. In paying for my cakes I drew out a five dollar bill. Laying it on the counter before my kind neighbor's eyes, I remembered that she thought I was without money! Can I ever look her in the face again? E. F.

Thousands Use This Marvelous New Method to Keep Skin Free from Blackheads, Oily Skin and Facial Blemishes

Thousands have used Calonite—still use it, regularly—because it does for the skin what nothing else possibly can do. It keeps the pores clean—thoroughly clean—and guards them against the accumulations of dirt, dust, powder and secretions which ordinarily cause blackheads, pimples and blemishes. No woman can be really pretty if troubled with stubborn blackheads. And nothing is more embarrassing than these little black specks—particularly when they are located around the nose, chin or on the forehead. If they are deeply embedded in the pores, they resist practically every method of treatment—except Calonite. The moment Calonite is applied it seeps right through the clogged pores, dissolves the hardened accumulations and forces the dirt right out. Even in real bad cases Calonite Powder is almost unfailing if used regularly for a short time. You can depend upon Calonite Powder to clear up your skin and keep it clear!

How to Use Calonite Powder

Sprinkle on Hot, Wet Towel

So simple and easy to use—takes almost no time at all. Just dip a small towel or wash-cloth in hot water, then wring slightly and fold over palm of hand. Sprinkle a bit of Calonite Powder on the flat surface of towel or wash-cloth, spread with finger-tips until it becomes a soft, effervescent paste, and you are then ready to apply it.

Apply to Face

Apply at once, on towel, to parts affected with blackheads or blemishes. After holding over the blackheads for a few minutes, glide the cloth gently but firmly over the skin in a rotary, outward movement. Then remove, wash face with warm water and finish with several dashes of cold water.

Results Are Amazing!

When you look into your mirror you'll be surprised how many blackheads have disappeared with just the first application of Calonite. The results are always amazing—almost unbelievable! The skin clears up, the blemishes vanish and the features radiate health and beauty. If you are not as yet troubled with blackheads, use Calonite powder to keep the pores of the skin clean and you will never have these pesky blemishes. Try Calonite powder for a few nights to remove the make-up from your face—notice the refreshed feeling your face will have and the wonderful night's rest you will get.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness and will make some less fortunate one glad and you would gladly give it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send articles to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

EARLY springtime, the loveliest time of the year, with all nature awakening from its sleep beneath winter's blanket of snow! Days of warm and golden sunlight and air sweet with the perfume of budding flowers! Days when stern men are poetical and every one is agreed that it's good to be alive! You awaken on the bright morning and discover of a sudden that you are filled with a zest for living. You make plans for trips into the country, for long walks in the open. You bask in the sunshine of your good health and you breathe a silent thanksgiving that you have the use of all your faculties.

Yes, spring is a season of joy and happiness for you who are strong, and well, and prosperous, but for the sick, the shut-in, and the maimed it is an aggravation to the suffering they already know. They, too, have this feeling to stretch their limbs, to breathe deeply of fresh, rain washed air, but it is a longing that will never be fulfilled, an experience they cannot know unless you are willing to help them.

Perhaps, in your family at one time or another there has been the need of a wheel chair. You know what a joy and comfort it was to the invalid to have it—how it helped to keep him in touch with the outside world, how it alleviated his suffering. Happily that time is passed and the patient has recovered. You still have the wheel chair, lying idly about when it might be fulfilling another term in the service of some other invalid who cannot buy the accessories so helpful in a time of illness.

Then, there is an extremely urgent need for many other surgical and sickroom appliances and for articles which might provide a little diversion or enjoyment for the patient confined to his room and for the bedridden invalid. If you can contribute any of these and thereby rescue some man or woman from the depressing monotony that must necessarily accompany a long illness, you may be certain that he or she will be eternally grateful to you. The letters below will give you an idea of what some of these wants are:

For Tuberculosis Patient.

"Dear Friend in Need: For the last four years I have been taking the cure for tuberculosis and I am now a patient in this sanitarium in Colorado. Being sick so long and unable to work, I cannot buy many of the things I need and I wonder if you can help me get them. I would like a suit of clothes, size 38; shirts, size 15½, and an overcoat. I will appreciate very much anything you can do for me. S. G."

Briefcase for School Girl.

"Would you please be so kind as to help me get me a briefcase and a sweater through your department? I am a girl of 14 and I walk such a long distance to and from school that I really need them. My mother came home from the hospital only a short time ago and my father has not been working steadily, so we cannot afford to buy them. "C. E."

The solicitor who uses a briefcase in his work usually invests in a new one when the old case begins to show wear. This high school girl would be made happy with the one you are discarding and I know she'd find it a great convenience. Has some one a sweater for her, too?

Unusual Request.

"I have been at home for the last six months with tuberculosis and I am not able to be out of doors. My sister with whom I live works all day so I am alone with little to keep the time from dragging. I am anxious to get an old steel saw to play on, and, since we cannot buy one, I am appealing for your help. M. H."

Here is an unusual request for an unusual instrument. However, rare as those musical saws may be, I hope we will be able to unearth one somewhere for this tuberculosis patient.

Aid for Ambitious Student.

"I am a young man of 18 years who was forced to leave school at the age of 14. Now I am trying to fit myself for a job better than the ones I have had. I would like to have a bookkeeping course so that I can study at home. I have some knowledge of bookkeeping but want to learn it thoroughly and I cannot afford to pay for it. I should like to have a typewriter, too. L. H."

Here is ambition and a zest for education which I hope this young reader will continue to have. His desire to equip himself for a better position is one which should be encouraged, and a correspondence course, if you have one, would be well placed if given to him. I think he would find any other literature on bookkeeping helpful, too.

Seeks German Home for Dachshund.

"I have a lovely pet for which I want to find a good home. The dog, a dachshund, is part black and tan, a year old, female, and such a sweet pet. I would like to place her in a home where German is spoken, as that is what she understands. M. H."

The present owner of this dog is most enthusiastic about its virtues and qualities and tells me that with little or no coaxing it will perform in the most amusing way. A real find for a dog lover. Write me if you'd like to have it; please do not telephone.

Don't Squeeze Blackheads—Dissolve Them

Squeezing and pinching out blackheads stretches the pores large and cause irritation. Blackheads are caused by accumulations of dust and dirt and secretions from the skin—and there is only one safe and sure way and one that never fails to get rid of them—a simple way, too—that is to dissolve them. Just get from any drug store about two ounces of Calonite powder—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—wash off and you'll be surprised to see that every blackhead has disappeared, and the skin will be left fine and the pores in their natural condition.

The BACKSTAGE MYSTERY

by OCTAVUS ROY COHEN

INSTALLMENT XIII.
At the End of the Trail.

TERRY MOONEY dropped into his chair. He was trembling violently as his fingers fumbled nervelessly with the keyboard. Anice hovered protectively near him, appearing queerly matronly in spite of her radiant youth. Jim's voice fell soothingly upon their ears—as unemotional as it had been throughout his summary of the case.

"What started me thinking," he said softly, "was the thing which really resulted in Wylie Thornton's death. Had it ever occurred to you, Marty, that it wasn't the proposed elopement, and it wasn't the double-cross of Weldon, that really killed Thornton? It was the publication of the story in The Evening Record!"

"Why yes . . ." Marty was almost too excited for speech. "I never thought . . ."

"You see," continued Jim, "nobody knew Thornton was leaving town except the theater management, and they were pledged to keep it secret. Naturally, the last thing in the world Thornton wanted was for everybody to know what he was planning . . . especially his wife and Carey Weldon. He didn't want them to know until after he had gone.

"Now it happens that in this town there lives a nifty kid by the name of Terry Mooney. He ain't got much of a past, but the future looks like one long wow. He wants to make good in the theater and has started off pretty by getting engaged to a pip of a young actress named Anice Garet. Partly because he's nuts about her, and partly because he's studying the stage, he hangs around the stock company all the time and gets friendly with everybody . . . but mostly with Anice. In fact, Terry hangs around there so much that they don't pay no more attention to him than they would to a stage hand.

"He's at the theater as per usual Saturday morning when they're rehearsing the new show which is to open Monday night. He happens to hear a conversation between the manager of the theater and Wylie Thornton in which most likely the manager is begging Thornton to come back to the company in case his show flops in New York. Have you got all that down, Mooney?"

"Yes . . ." Terry lifted a pallid face from the machine.

"Right so far?"

"Yes."

"Fine. Now here's this lad hearing the biggest piece of news that has broken in the town since the last riot. He can tell by the way them two are talking that the whole thing is a secret—and don't ever forget that Mooney also has ambition to be a great reporter . . . and he starts right then.

"He knows good and well that if he asks permission to print that story they'll refuse and then his hands will be tied. But if he just prints it without asking nobody . . . then they can't figure that he put anything over. So he slips away, beats it to the office, and writes a whale of a yarn. It gets spread all over the first page . . . and believe me, ladies and gents, it starts plenty. But of all the folks in town who go crazy when they see that story—the one who goes craziest is Mister Wylie Thornton.

"See what it means to him? He knows Major Manning will read it and maybe investigate Doris—which is just what happens. He realizes that Carey Weldon will learn about the double-cross in case the major finds out about Doris. He knows that if John Norris was in earnest about wanting to kill him he'll pick that very night to do it. And from all I can tell—he ain't so awful easy in his mind about his wife. In other words, Thornton is plenty sore against that story and whoever wrote it.

"When he comes in from the theater his wife springs the story on him and it knocks him for a goal. They have an awful quarrel in the hotel and another one when she follows him to the theater. He's about ready to chew nails then . . . and at that opportune time in walks Lovely Holmes, kind of mad himself at what he thinks is a double-cross . . . and Lovely demands his money or else.

"Thornton is crazy mad and tells Holmes where to go. Tries to throw Lovely out of the dressing room and gets a good bust on the jaw. Then, while he's listening to the birdies sing—Lovely helps himself to the four hundred dollars Thornton owes him, and also—by his own admission—swipes Carey Weldon's certified check. And then, folks, after Lovely has gone and Thornton has picked himself up off the floor . . . who should come breezing into that dressing room but the very man who caused all the trouble!"

Jim shifted his position, lighted a fresh cigar, and continued his story.

"Yes, sir, Terry comes waltzing in, all hopped to a million over the swell publicity he's given the departing actor."

"How did you know that?" asked Gallagher.

"Easy enough, Marty. On the very night Thornton was killed, when you were trying to find out what happened, you yourself asked Terry if he had been around the theater earlier that evening. He said yes, he had. He said he had been there to see Anice Garet—but hadn't seen her. I reckon you forgot that, didn't you?"

"Yes . . . I sure did."

"In the past Terry had given Thornton lots of free publicity and Thornton always liked it. Naturally, the kid is awful keen on the wonderful first page sendoff and comes in pridefully to exhibit it to Thornton. He thinks Thornton is gonna do everything but kiss him. Am I right, son?"

"Yes . . ." Terry's voice was dry.

"Naturally, Terry hasn't the faintest idea what he has started by printing that story, but he finds out pretty soon. Here's the lad who has busted all of Thornton's fresh eggs. Don't forget that even the beating Thornton had just received from Lovely Holmes would never have happened if Terry hadn't printed that story.

"Being plenty sore—like a pet boil—Thornton starts raving. And please remember that he is better than six feet tall and weighs more than two hundred pounds. Mooney weighs . . . how much, kid?"

"One hundred and twenty-eight."

"See how much physical difference there is, Marty? Also don't forget that Thornton isn't merely angry. He's murderous." Jim turned his moonlike countenance toward the pallid face of the young man. "And suppose you go on from there, son. Give us the straight story of just exactly what happened in that dresing room."

MOONEY'S eyes burned into the sleepy ones of the portly detective. He moistened his lips and started to speak. The words came haltingly at first, but he gathered confidence as he talked and his story carried the ring of truth.

"I'll try to tell it all," he said slowly. "There are some parts of it that aren't awfully clear to me—just a sort of nightmare. But everything Hanvey has said is right—up to that point. Thornton cursed me. His cheeks were blazing and he said—well, there was mighty little that he didn't say and few things that he failed to threaten.

"He walked across the room so that he stood between me and the door, and he said he was going to beat me to death for the trouble I had caused. He kept coming closer to me, and all of a sudden I tried to duck and run out of the room. He grabbed me around the throat and started choking me. I fought the best I could, but I felt myself getting weaker and weaker. It isn't easy to describe—but I knew that he was going to kill me. It seemed that the more he choked me the more furious he got.

"I kicked him. I guess my foot must have landed on his shin or his knee, because it seemed to hurt a lot. He let me go suddenly and I sort of fell against the trunk. He was staring at me like a crazy man, and he said, 'I'll kill you for that.' He came at me again, and I looked around for a weapon with which to protect myself. Anything—a club or an iron bar—anything. And right there was the revolver. I didn't think about what I was doing. I guess, Mr. Hanvey, that I didn't think about anything except saving my own life. Anyway, I raised the gun and pulled the trigger. And then . . ."

Terry paused and shook his head as though to dispel the grisly memory.

"It was queer. There wasn't a sound—just a sort of a little crack like a cheap air rifle would make. And I remember that Thornton stopped short and a funny look came over his face and then he started to sag. I didn't know he was dead. I didn't really know what had happened. I ran out of the dressing room and up the corridor. I didn't see anybody. I left the theater through the scene door—no for any particular reason but because it was the nearest exit. And that's the truth, Mr. Hanvey—the whole truth, just as I remember it."

Jim nodded approvingly. "And just about the clearest, cleanest case of self-defense I ever heard of, son. What say, Marty?"

"Surest thing you know," Gallagher agreed. "But why the devil didn't the kid come and give himself up? He'd have been sitting pretty."

"He still is," insisted Hanvey. "But suppose you tell us what happened after you ran out of the theater, Terry."

Anice was standing beside the young man, her arm about his neck. He reached up and patted her hand, and then continued his narrative.

"I—I don't know whether either of you can understand what I felt like just then. It's easy enough to look back on a thing like that and to figure what was the best thing to do, but at that time I was so terrified that I just acted on instinct. If I could make you understand——"

"Don't you worry, kid," interjected Marty, "we will."

"Almost before I realized what had happened I was out on the street. I started walking. I was dizzy and felt kind of sick. My throat was still sore where he had tried to choke me. I didn't think he was dead, because I couldn't get over the fact that the gun hadn't made any noise; but I did know that I had shot him.

"I don't know how far I walked, but gradually I started feeling a little more normal and I tried to think. I didn't know what to do. I wanted to give myself up, but I didn't know whether that would be best or not. I wanted to talk it over with some one who could give sane and friendly advice. And so I went to the only friends I have in the city—the boys on the newspaper. Of course, most of my friends work on the evening paper, but I have a few buddies on the morning edition. Anyway, I went up there."

JIM HANVEY grinned.

"Keep going, son. You know, I always wondered how you happened to be in that office at that particular time. I knew you were off at five in the afternoon and it seemed funny that you were hanging around there at that hour. It makes things clearer to me. Now suppose you go ahead."

"I will." Terry was talking more easily. He spoke earnestly, as though desperately anxious to convince his audience. "I went into the Morning Record office, expecting to find the usual conditions prevailing. But instead of that I walked into a bedlam. It seemed like everybody had gone crazy. They were yelling to copy boys and copy readers; calling for the city editor and the managing editor, and just shooting their first extra into the street. Then I discovered what it was all about. I remember one of the other reporters told me—something like this. 'Somebody just bumped off Wylie Thornton,' he said, 'and the town's gone nuts. Looks like Maj Manning or John Norris did the job, and believe me, either one of them will go for a ride if they can pin it on him.' I—I think those are almost his exact words, Mr. Hanvey—almost the exact way he told it to me.

"My brain worked fast enough then. I had come up there to tell that I had shot Thornton. This was the first I knew of his being dead. That scared me all over again. But what scared me worse was this: If the two most prominent men in the city—Major David Manning and John Norris—were in real danger; if with all their wealth and political influence there was a chance that they could be convicted . . . then it struck me that I would get the electric chair. Can't you see how I figured? I was just a kid. I had no friends and no influence. I had no evidence to support my word. O! I know now I should have told, but right then I was frightened into keeping my mouth shut. I guess the temptation was too great anyway . . . because don't forget that I knew if they were suspecting Manning and Norris they certainly did not suspect me.

"You may or may not believe this—but it is the truth: I made up my mind to keep my mouth shut unless either Manning or Norris—or some other innocent man—was convicted. Then I was going to tell. But I thought that they couldn't convict either man. Of course, I didn't then know about all the circumstantial evidence against them.

"I kept my mouth shut. I suppose it was a mistake, but I think the average man would have done just the same thing."

"He would," seconded Marty.

"Then the city editor saw me in the office and sent me out with Ken Johnston because he knew I was familiar with the theater and the company. They were talking about convicting big men like Norris and Manning. And as the case went on I got more and more scared, because it seemed that it would look doubly bad for me because I hadn't told my story when the thing first happened. But honest, Jim"—and Terry's voice trembled with passionate earnestness—"honest, I would have told if they had convicted any one else."

Jim chuckled. "I know you would, son. And when you write your story for the paper, I want you to be sure and say that you surrendered voluntarily to me and Marty Gallagher and that it was you who gave us the whole story. And you can also quote us both as saying that we know it was self-defense and that there ain't a chance in the world for you to be convicted. What about it, Marty?"

Gallagher's big voice boomed heartily through the room.

"Absolutely," he roared.

Then . . . and not until then . . . Anice Garet broke down. Terry took her in his arms and the two detectives turned away.

Gallagher spoke softly.

"Jim," he said generously, "you're a marvel. But tell me—where the devil did you get your hunch?"

Hanvey shook his head.

"Just luck, Marty . . . and a little knowledge of human nature. When those kids get themselves untangled I'll explain if you want."

"I'll say I want." Marty peeped over his shoulder. "My gosh! Jim—ain't love a grand thing? Just look at them two."

"I ain't got the heart, Marty. Happiness like their's makes me lonely . . ."

ANICE and Terry had forgotten the two men, who discreetly looked the other way. She pressed close against him and her voice was pathetically gentle.

"Why didn't you tell me, boy?"

"I couldn't. I was afraid to tell any one. It seemed . . . when I didn't confess at first . . . that my hands were tied. But if they had convicted anybody, Anice, I swear I meant to tell."

Gallagher whirled.

"You did tell!" he thundered. "Get that in your ivory dome, will you, kid? You told me and Jim and you told us voluntarily. You savvy?"

"I do, even if he doesn't," smiled Anice. "And I'll stick to that story forever and ever—Amen."

"You'd better. If Terry don't, I'll break his neck. And now—if you kids will come out of that clinch for a minute, Jim has promised to tell us what it takes to be so durned clever."

"I ain't clever," murmured Hanvey. "Just lucky."

"Horsefeathers! Now, let's have it."

"It was slow work, Marty . . . and there was lots of times I thought I must be wrong. I tried to get all the dope and then to make myself think as Wylie Thornton would have thought—or anyway, as I imagined he would have thought.

"I tried to figure out who I would hate worst if I had planned what he did and then run into such a break, and it seemed I'd just about want to kill the guy who printed that story and started the mess just when my plans was working good.

"Now, we'll go back to the night Wylie Thornton was killed. Just after we talked with Maj. Manning and before Anice brought Mary Thornton down from the hotel, you, Marty, asked Terry if he had been hanging around the theater earlier in the evening. The kid answered 'Yes,' and volunteered the information that he had dropped in for the purpose of seeing Anice Garet. He said he didn't find her and therefore left the theater. Later we learned from Ken Johnston and others that Mooney was nuts about her, and when I got a flash of the little lady herself it struck me as awful queer that he was so goofy about a girl like Anice, and that he should beat it without seeing her when, according to his own story, he had come to the theater for that express purpose. I thought a lot about that later when things began to adjust themselves in this fat bean of mine.

"Then another thought occurred to me: If Mooney had been to the theater to see Anice and had left because she wasn't there, why didn't he come back later? Why did he go to the Record office instead? He was off duty and it was his custom to hang around the theater, anyway. Seemed like to me there might be some particular reason why he didn't want to come back to the theater.

"Later Mooney drifted into the office just when they were spraying extras on to the streets. The excitement got him—and he was plenty scared—so much so that he decided to keep his mouth shut, for a while anyway.

"Then I went over the things we found in the dressing room. Most of the stuff we found belonged there, Marty, and didn't mean a thing. But there was one article that didn't belong in that room and it puzzled me. It was the stub of a thick pencil which contained a heavy lead. Just a stump, mind you. Would Thornton carry that sort of a thing? Obviously not. For one thing, the penciled addresses in his address book proved that he wouldn't. When he did use a pencil it was the thin-leaded kind that average folks use. You see, I was never interested in that little book for the addresses it contained—but I was interested in the pencil.

"I kept an eye on Terry. Like all real newspaper men, he almost never carried a long pencil. Always two or three stubs in the side pocket of his coat. Pretty hard for one of those stubs to drop out—unless, of course, some one was trying to attack him and he was ducking and dodging. Not positive, Marty—but a likely theory and it bore out the self-defense idea.

"I investigated further and discovered that the Record not only uses the very type of pencil we found in Thornton's dressing room, but I learned that there isn't another firm in this entire district—even the other newspaper—which uses those pencils. They are made in quantities especially for the Record.

"Don't you ever think that it didn't take lots of time and work to check up on that, either. And even the pencil thing wasn't enough—it only helped my theory. The real clew, Marty—the real important clew—was the newspaper we found in Wylie Thornton's dressing room. You thought I was cuckoo to pay so much attention to that newspaper, but it meant a lot to me."

"How?" asked Gallagher, as Hanvey paused.

"I wanted to know who it had belonged to. I knew it wasn't Norris' because the story had been clipped out of his. It wasn't Thornton's, because that one had been left in the room at the hotel."

"But, my gosh, Jim—couldn't Thornton have bought that newspaper while he was walking from the hotel to the theater?"

Hanvey smiled slightly.

"No, Marty, he could not."

"What makes you think that?"

"I don't think it, I know it. You see, Marty, the thing that struck me between the eyes when I looked at that paper in Thornton's dressing room was that it was not the regular home edition of the Evening Record which is sold on the streets. It was a suburban edition. The suburban edition comes from the presses before the home edition, is bundled up in the plant, and sent to the outlying districts by auto truck and street car. Not one copy of that particular edition is ever sold on the streets of this town, and the only possible way one could have reached Wylie Thornton's dressing room was by the hand of some employé of the Evening Record.

"Now, obviously, Marty, the person who would most naturally have grabbed that sheet hot off the press was the young reporter who was tickled pink with his own exclusive story and wanted to feast his eyes on the first page spread. And that was why I was so interested in that particular newspaper, Marty. I wanted to be dog-gone sure that there wasn't another suburban edition anywhere around." The big detective smiled at Terry. "How about it, son—am I getting it straight?"

"YOU'RE absolutely right, Jim. And there were times when I was sure you suspected me. I wanted to tell you . . . then I'd get scared all over again."

"That was natural. But there ain't nothing to be scared of any more, because that story you're gonna write telling the world that you did it is due to wind up with me and Marty saying that we can testify it was self-defense. Ain't it so, Marty?"

"It ain't nothing else, Jim."

"And I've got one more suggestion before I get out of this burg."

"What's that?" asked Terry.

"I want you to round this story off real regular with an announcement of the impending marriage of Mister Terry Mooney and Miss Anice Garet, nuptials to be celebrated immediately or maybe sooner than that. You might also announce that Marty Gallagher, famous sleuth, is to be the best man."

Anice smiled up at Hanvey.

"And what will you be, Jim?"

"Maid of honor," he answered promptly. "What say, Terry—does that go into your story?"

The boy looked down at Anice as she met his gaze shyly.

"How about it?" he asked.

"Well . . ."—her cheeks were crimson—"I don't see that we have the right to refuse Jim anything he asks."

For the first time in weeks the famous Mr. Hanvey exhibited symptoms of animation.

"Attaboy!" said he. "And you two kids can take it from me that the entire police force will be standing by to make sure that for once at least the course of true love runs gay and smooth."

COLLECTOR'S LUCK.

(To a Champion Philanderer.)

From mood to mood you deftly flit
In search of love, and bit by bit,
Collectorlike, you gather it.

To gain a heart beyond all price
You'd risk no slightest sacrifice.
Your game is played with loaded dice.

Like ev'ry braggart connoisseur,
You rate the prizes you procure
By values vast that must endure.

And never guess, so great your haste—
Few maidens let real treasure waste—
The hearts they fling to you are paste.

COMPENSATION.

(Mamie Hickey's diary strikes a note of self-defense.)

A light heart is a sorry curse;
No task, I think, could e'er be worse
Than turning bubbles into verse.

The writer with a heart of lead
Earns slow and often bitter bread,
But folks will read him when he's dead.

For heavy words are hard to lose,
And feather ones, the kind I use,
The wind along the highway strews.

Real poets cry for golden moons.
My arms encircle gay balloons.

The Lonesome Girl

By Doris Blake

It's Up to Her to Show a Little Action and Make Some Effort to Come in Contact with Others

THE question of how to be popular is always with the young, which is the reason we introduce it so often in this column. Another reason is that if a word of ours, or of some one's else will serve to help a young person overcome the fault, the habit, or the state of mind that stands in the way of his or her popularity, we feel it is something worthy of the space allotted. For the saddest thing in the world is the sight of a young person forced to be a spectator only to the pleasures of other young people.

The age for being liked has no set period in our lives. But the highly profitable time for being liked by the opposite sex is in that period of youth extending from 16 to 25. The romantic period of life we call it, although we heartily agree that romantic years are in no wise confined to early youth.

Recent statistics, however, suggest that after 25 a girl's chances for marrying grow fewer and fewer with each succeeding birthday. So that the years of strongest appeal for the greatest number of girls would necessarily precede the mid-twentieth birth anniversary.

Popularity Is Made.

We are grateful to a young correspondent, who calls herself "Just Jeanne," for a contribution on popularity. This coming from one at the age when the problem of attracting members of the opposite sex is most keenly felt, has especial value, we think. Says Jeanne:

"I wish some one would do an article on 'Popularity Is Made; Not Intern Quality.' Maybe it sounds ridiculous, but only to people who cannot realize the good that would be done to thousands of boys and girls who have developed an inferiority complex perhaps through poverty, a slight physical defect, or because they fail of themselves to take advantage of opportunities for making friends.

"To be specific, I am going to produce a comparison between a girl friend and myself just to give a clearer idea of what I mean.

"My friend is 21 and I am 18. We are both from middle class families, both of our fathers being engaged in professions that supply similar yearly incomes. Perhaps that comment is superfluous, but I am only trying to show that our situations are about equal. Our educations stopped with graduation from high school. During high school days I joined several organizations, extra curriculum of different varieties and established friendships with the 'ritzy kids.' I also joined two church organizations and a club.

Dates Plentiful.

"Although my school associations have ceased I am still assured of about six nights a month at organizations. I go hiking, picnicking, roller and ice skating with friends and am just learning to play tennis. The day when I go to my clubs I have at least one—often more—offer to escort me home from desirable boys of my own age. And though I am not cute, do not smoke, pet or drink I seem to get quite a few 'dates.'

"Now, my friend remains at home day after day and night after night. She never sees young people and complains bitterly that she has no place to go and no one to go with. She is a charming dancer, but she has not much chance to exhibit her skill because she does not try to connect herself with any club or organization in which she would be apt to meet young men.

"How can she expect to have girl friends or boy friends when she makes no effort to come in contact with them?

"No matter how attractive a girl is, nor what her financial position, if she doesn't get out and meet girl and boy friends half way she will one day, to the disgust of herself and her family, find herself an old maid. Here is this friend, charming of manner, charming to know, good looking enough without being a beauty, just over the 20 border line and constantly dateless.

Make Social Contacts.

"No matter how interested a boy is in a girl, if she voluntarily isolates herself from all and every contact with him, he will not run after her. If only these stay-at-homes would get out and make social contacts I believe they would meet their Prince Charming easily enough.

"Another thing I think is important is the necessity of refinement and pride. Without wishing to convey an impression of egotism to you, Miss Blake, I will produce another example.

"I attended high school with a girl infinitely better looking than I, but otherwise we were practically on a level. We dressed about the same, had about the same spending money and so on. The girl had peculiar mannerisms, such as speaking loudly, laughing boisterously, too, in a room or on the street. She had a habit of sneezing, and cleaning her throat so she could be heard rather than trying to conceal these inconveniences. While she spoke to more boys and girls than I did and tried hard to make friends she failed because every one said she was coarse."

LOVE QUERY ANSWERS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

Not Worth Bothering About.

"Dear Miss Blake: When my girl friend is with a lot of her friends she acts as if she doesn't know me. Please advise. "WORRIED."

If she can't be as nice to you when she is with her friends as when alone she isn't worth bothering with.

No Sign of Love.

"Dear Miss Blake: Whenever the boy I love and who is angry at me sees me, he passes remarks to hurt my feelings. Is this a sign of love? "WONDERING."

Rudeness is not a sign of love. Avoid meeting him.

Her Actions Speak.

"Dear Miss Blake: The girl I love has been keeping company with another boy, but she says she loves me. "HONEY."

Her actions belie her words. I shouldn't have any faith in what she says.

Try a Little Indifference.

"Dear Miss Blake: I love a girl who tells me she loves me, but goes out with other fellows and teases me about it. She tells me to do the same. Please advise. PUZZLED."

Tell her it's quite all right. She may not be so anxious to continue if you're indifferent.

Quit His Girl.

"Dear Miss Blake: I quit the girl I loved when she said that other boys can give her a better time. Did I do right? WHOOPEE."

Quite right. She thinks more of good times than of you.

Bride Chooses Trousseau

By Helen Bartlett

Her Linens and Laces And Frocks Are Selected With an Eye to Their Fitness for Her Future Use.

It is the aim of this department to serve as a practical guide in problems of everyday etiquette. Self-addressed, stamped envelope must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Miss Helen Bartlett, Sunday Department, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

TODAY we are publishing the first of a series of articles on weddings. With the approach of their traditional month we are beset with inquiries from brides planning all sizes and types of them, from the simple ceremony in a parish house to the large and lavish processional up the aisle of a cathedral.

The perfect wedding is the result of careful planning and the wise bride will suit the ceremony and its embellishments to her own means and station. Taking this planning step by step we will deal this morning with the first consideration of the girl who has definitely made up her mind to accept her best beau. This, naturally, would be her trousseau.

The kind of life a bride is going to lead has the strongest influence on her selection of linens and of clothes. If she is going to have an elaborate establishment, do much entertaining, or belong to a social set where a lavishly equipped home and an extensive wardrobe are almost a necessity, her trousseau needs are far different from those of the girl who is starting her career in a kitchenette apartment. The old trousseau lists are useless today, but a good standard one for this age is hard to compile because of the varying kinds of establishments young people have.

After a good deal of observation as to the general run of bride's households and their necessities, we have devised this linen list, which may be elaborated or cut down according to the prospective housewife's individual needs:

One dozen bath towels.
Two dozen hand towels.
One dozen guest towels.
Three bath mats.
One dozen wash cloths.
One large dinner tablecloth.
One dozen large dinner napkins.
Two medium sized tablecloths.
Two dozen napkins.
Two breakfast sets.
Two luncheon sets.
Linen runner.
Lace runner.
One dozen small napkins [tea or cocktail].
Tray cloths.
Silencing cloth.
Mats [to put under hot dishes].
Bureau covers.
Table covers.

For the Kitchen.

One dozen glass towels.
Two dozen dish towels.
Six roller towels.
One dozen dish cloths.
Six pot holders.
Three ironing sheets.
Cleaning cloths.
Dust cloths.

For the Bedroom.

Each bed:
Three pair of sheets.
One pair of blankets.
One quilt.
Three pairs of pillow cases.
Eiderdown comforter.
Mattress cover.
Counterpane.

So much for linens. In buying clothes a girl must be even more careful, considering just what the circumstances of her life will demand. If she is moving, on marriage, from a small town to a large city she will need formal frocks and smarter things, generally, than she needed before. If she is moving to the country or a distant suburb, her wardrobe should be selected with just that in mind.

It would be impossible to give a trousseau list that would cover all cases. The one below would be suitable for the average girl with the average salaried husband who would live the average social life in a city.

This list, too, may be enlarged or cut down, according to the needs of the girl.

Lingerie and Accessories.

6 nightgowns.
6 underwear sets [for daytime wear].
3 underwear sets [for evening wear].
6 pair hose for daytime wear.
6 pair sheer hose for evening.
3 pair woolen or sports hose.
1 pair street shoes.
2 pair afternoon shoes.
1 pair sports shoes.
Evening slippers to match gowns.
6 pair tan or beige suede gloves [washable].
2 pair white kid for formal afternoon wear.
1 pair long white kid for evening wear.
2 dozen handkerchiefs.
2 daytime bags to match costumes.
1 evening bag [carried with all gowns].

The Summer Wardrobe.

If a girl marries in early spring her immediate clothes need will be for summer things. This list might include:

One coat for all occasions.
One ensemble for street town wear.
Two crêpe or chiffon dresses.
Two frocks in pastel colors.
Two simple wash dresses.
Three street hats.
One afternoon hat.
Three evening dresses.
One evening coat [not elaborate].
Two negligees.

For Winter Wear.

One fur coat.
One cloth coat.
One cloth dress.
Two crêpe dresses.
One heavy weight ensemble.
Three hats for street wear.
One afternoon hat.
One formal evening gown.
Two dinner gowns.
Two afternoon frocks.
Negligees.
One dressing gown.
One evening wrap [suitable with evening gown and dinner frocks].
One evening bag
One dress bag.
Two bags to match outdoors costumes.

Then, too, whether for winter or summer the bride who is going to keep house should have four or five attractive house dresses, three to five aprons, and one cover all apron for work in the kitchen.

The second article of this series, dealing with the next logical step in the preliminary wedding plans, will appear next Sunday.

Gay Colored Bags Protect Coats and Dresses and Add to the Appearance of the Clothes Closet

DRESS and coat bags are among the necessities for those women who take the right care of their clothes, and this time of the year especially there seems to be an urge to replenish and freshen up everything that needs attention.

Of course, it is possible to buy lovely bags made of cretonne, chintz, percale, Argentine and the glazed materials, but a real saving is effected by making them at home. Nothing is better for these bags than cretonne, sateen or percale. You may buy enough to have the bags of the same material, or if you prefer, you may have each one different.

About 3½ yards of 36 inch material is needed, but if you buy anything narrower you will need 5 yards. One width of material is necessary for the back and two for the front.

Some bags are made the shape of a clothes hanger at the top, and from there down are perfectly straight. The front lengths are hemmed down one edge, using an inch wide hem. These front lengths are cut wide enough to seam to the back and allow the hems to lap down the center front. These hems may be stitched together down from the top for 6 or 9 inches, then fastened the balance of the length with buttons and buttonholes or with medium sized snaps.

Another style of bag is made with a sort of yoke top, back and front. This is cut the shape of a hanger across the top and 9 inches deep. Gather the lower parts of the bag to this—allowing once and one-half across the width of the top piece for fullness. In the front there are two lengths, the same as in the other bag. These are hemmed down the center and lapped, and fastened with snaps.

A pattern isn't necessary for these bags, but if you aren't used to experimenting without one, cut the pattern for the top out of paper, being careful not to make the width too narrow. Of course these bags are also stitched together across the bottom.

Closets today are most attractive looking, with the gaily patterned glaze gingham or other material for the shelves, their plaited or ruffled edge hanging over, the lovely hat boxes, dress bags, door pockets of various sizes, and an amazing variety of prettily covered dress hangers.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

DOLLAR FOR YOUR DREAMS

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you'll mail us an account of your prophetic dream we'll pay you $1 for every dream published. Address "Dreams," Chicago Tribune.

Heard Lecture Twice.

I was employed as a copy writer in a department store. One night I dreamed that the manager of the advertising office was furious because I had misspelled a word in a style advertisement. Among other things, he said, "You know you're paid to do things right!"

I related the dream to the other copy writers when I got down to the office. We thought it was funny, because the advertising manager was a most amiable soul and rarely scolded about anything.

Then the manager rang for me! I went into his office—and found him raving! He said that the owner of the store had given him an awful lecture. The name of a French designer was misspelled in the morning ad that I had written. He scolded me for about half an hour, ending with, "You know you're paid to do things right!"

When I came out of his office I was weak! Not because of the lecture, but because everything had happened exactly as it had in the dream. I have never known anything quite so uncanny! G. B. C.

Foretold Exchange of Prizes.

I dreamed I had won a prize at the card club I belong to and was exchanging it with another winner for a card table she had won. The next day the club met and I was the winner of the first prize and the second prize was a card table. The woman who was the winner of the card table laughingly said she wished she had won the first prize. It so happened that I couldn't use the first prize so we exchanged prizes. I then related my dream to the ladies, just as I had dreamed it. L. O. W.

Old Debt Paid.

We had suffered a big financial loss in the recent slump in stocks. We were hard pressed for ready cash which was a great worry to us. One night I dreamed that I was shopping and after selecting my purchases found that I had not brought my purse along. I was ready to leave the store when I felt a nudge and turning, I recognised a friend whom I had not seen for years. We greeted each other joyfully and she offered to pay for my purchases and also insisted on me getting more things that I needed.

When I awoke the dream still lingered in my mind and I told my husband about it. He said, "I wish your kind friend would come across with the money she owes us; we could certainly use it."

About a week later a letter came. When I read it I thrilled, for it was from the friend of my dream. She was well fixed now, she wrote, and would send us the money she had owed us for so many years as soon as she was sure of our location. I was delighted to answer her and certainly had use for the check she sent back with interest added. K. S.

Disregarded Premonition.

One evening last August, coming home from work, tired and weary, I threw myself on the bed for a short nap before dinner.

Almost immediately I had a most vivid dream in which an automobile with glaring headlights rushed suddenly at me, only the front part of the car and the lights being seen. It was so close that I jumped from it in terror, and awoke, half sitting up in bed.

I made the mistake of believing that an accident might occur to a friend who is a rather speedy driver, never thinking of myself in the matter.

Late in October coming home one night in a drizzling rain. I had left the bus and crossed to the middle of the street in safety when an automobile quickly turned the corner and was actually right upon me. There was no time to see anything but the glaring headlights as in my dream.

I did not escape injury, and I would have been better off if I had accepted the dream as applying to myself, instead of thinking only of my reckless friend. M. B. W.

In the Feminine Realm

There are approximately 100 women physicians in Philadelphia, Pa., who are general practitioners treating cases of all kinds.

Mrs. Mary T. Norton of New Jersey has the distinction of being the first woman elected to the United States congress from the Democratic party.

Because of a regulation which requires all employes to qualify as "marksmen," "sharpshooters," or "experts" with a pistol, more than 100 women office workers in the department of corrections at the Municipal building in New York City are forced to take up pistol practice.

Two young women, Miss Nelle Stoigsdall of South Bend, Ind., and Miss Margaret Warner of Lincoln, Mass., were among the twenty-three candidates whose names were announced recently as having successfully passed examinations qualifying them for appointment to the foreign service.

Leading feminist organizations in France have started a drive to abolish the guillotine as an instrument of execution. Added to considerations of humanity on the part of the women's organizations, and the legal reasons of the lawyers, the guillotine is looked upon as a potential disturber of the peace by modern police authorities.

Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, daughter of the late Senator Mark Hanna of Ohio, has entered the race for United States senator from Illinois against Senator Charles S. Deneen. She will be a candidate for the Republican nomination at the primary elections April 8, 1930.

Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

Pain Stops Instantly!

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions. A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

Mary Ann's Man Power

by Ronald Millar

When a Young Woman Undertakes to Reform an Adventurous Rum Runner She Assumes a Difficult Role, Particularly if a Handsome Young Federal Agent Is in the Offing.

"It's all right," answered Jim's voice. "I'm just bringing you a little surprise."

ILLUSTRATIONS BY Y. E. SODERBERG.

AT a hundred yards few people can tell the difference between explosions in an automobile muffler and the sound of a medium caliber automatic pistol. Few persons hear enough shooting to get the contrast. In this respect Mary Ann Arundel enjoyed special advantages.

Having just wakened from a sound sleep at three in the morning, she sat on the edge of the bed, her bare feet dipping into the stream of summer moonlight that poured through the screened window, and listened intently to what she knew were shots being fired with deliberate care. The yapping reports were spaced with long, unequal pauses.

Silvery reflections from the floor, scarcely pausing on the spiderweb of chiffon that wisped around her, disclosed Mary Ann as a young woman of charming grace. Continuing upward, the soft light accentuated a smooth throat, a rounded chin, curving lips and a mass of tousled curls. There was nothing about her expression or attitude to suggest alarm—merely curiosity. Presently she stepped to the window, raised the screen and, kneeling down behind the low sill, looked out into the bright night.

The Arundel house, once called Howard hall, stood in the center of a wooded pasture, its white columned portico facing the marsh bordered waters of Fishers inlet one of the many fingers that Chesapeake bay inserts into what Maryland folk call "the eastern shore."

Mary Ann's room was on the ground floor at the back of the house. From her window she could plainly see the high silhouettes of the trees skirting Dixon's turnpike, a hundred yards away. By day this public highway dozed innocently under its pure white covering of ground oyster shell. But when night came it often awoke to stealthy activity, guiding through the darkness swift shadowy sedans and the lumbering, blind running trucks of rum smugglers bound northward from their more or less secret and shifting landing places down the bay.

Occasionally headlights would blaze, challenges sound out, and the old road would turn itself into a roaring race course, disturbing the canvasbacks who floated head-under-wing among the tapegrass.

But now the road itself was dark and silent—no headlights nor motors running. That was what puzzled Mary Ann. She was used to the swiftly passing rush and crackle of rum battles. This careful, stationary sniping was something new. The shots had seemed to come from the darker mass of small trees and bushes over to the right, through which wound the entrance lane to the Arundel place.

"Of course, it's Jim," Ann whispered to herself in annoyance.

Even as she looked there was another flashing report. She saw a shadow break from the bushes. It came straight toward her window. Before she could make a move it seemed to soar from the ground like a huge owl obscuring the moon and tumbled over the sill, knocking her head over heels. When she sat up with a gasp the shadow had vanished. From under her bed came a tense whisper:

"Gee, I'm sorry, Mary Ann," it said. "I didn't see you sitting there."

So many words tried to get out of Mary Ann's throat at the same time that the net sound was something like a groan.

"Did I hurt you?" said the whisper in alarm. There was a crawling movement under the bed.

Mary Ann scrambled quickly to her feet. "Stay under there, you fool," she said, and pushed a protruding head with her bare toes. "And tell me what's the meaning of this."

"Sh-h-h! Not so loud. He'll hear you."

"Jim, I want to know what this means." Mary Ann's voice was cold acid.

"Please, don't yell that way, Mary Ann." The voice was pleading. "I'm in a bad jam. If he hears you——"

"I hope he does," said Marry Ann. "Maybe he, whoever he is, will come climbing in here, too. Then we can all have a nice party. Are you going to explain this or . . .?" Mary Ann hesitated over an alternative.

"Listen, Mary Ann," the tone from under the bed was as near honey and cream as a whisper can achieve, "will you do something for me? I think he saw me run over this way. Get into bed and pretend you're asleep. I'll tell you all about it. Please."

In spite of bare feet, sheer nightgown, and bright moonlight, Mary Ann had an impulse to drag this idiot out into the room and cuff him. This was certainly the prize of all unmitigated impudence. To stage a gun battle on her lawn, to come diving through her window, to crawl under her bed, and then ask her to lie down and make believe that nothing had happened. The very preposterousness of it checked her anger.

"Please, Mary Ann," entreated the voice.

She hesitated. After all, she had made herself responsible in a way for Jim Barber's behavior when she undertook to reform him. You couldn't start a thing like that and then quit just because the going got a little rough. With a resigned shrug and an apprehensive glance at the window, she got back into bed.

"JIM, I'll make you suffer for this," she said. It was characteristic of Ann that she gave no thought to the impropriety of the situation nor to its rich possibilities in scandal.

"Here's what happened," said Jim. He had wriggled around so his head was near the wall on the side away from the window and his faint whisper had to travel only a few inches to reach Mary Ann's ear. "The prohis crowded us pretty close just up the road. I had another man with me to help me try out a smart trick. I dropped off here and ran in your lane with a red flashlight, while the driver kept going down the pike, blind. The prohis were supposed to think we'd driven in here, and while they backed and fooled around I could make my getaway.

"But they didn't think the way they ought. They dropped a guy off here, too, and kept going. This fellow took his job seriously. He came piling through the bushes, saw me, and started popping away. I tried to scare him off with a couple of shots, but he wouldn't scare. I tried to edge back toward the road—honest, I did, Mary Ann—but I fell over a wheelbarrow and dropped my gun. So, there was nothing to do but look for cover. He had me cut off. This was the only place I could find. I'd have given myself up, only——"

"Hush!" Mary Ann's hand made a warning gesture over the edge of the bed. Stealthy footsteps could be heard outside the window, the sound of shoes moving slowly through the grass, and a faint creak of leather. Mary Ann could feel her heart beating against the mattress. She tried to take long breaths.

"Hello, in there!" The voice came crisply into the room—a young, clear voice. Mary Ann lay perfectly still, but for some reason she breathed easier.

"Hello, in there!" A flashlight began to play on ceiling and walls, its yellow beam contrasting strangely with the moonlight reflections. Ann turned over quickly, rising on one elbow.

"What do you want?" she said. She could see a cap and the upper half of a man's head projecting above the window sill.

"Excuse me," said the man, hastily switching off his flashlight. "I'm in the coast guard patrol. A man I was after disappeared somewhere into the back of this house a little while ago." He stopped on an inquiring note.

"Well?" said Mary Ann, returning the question.

"I'm looking for him," said the man, his voice growing a little hard.

"No man lives in this house," said Mary Ann, "and we're not in the habit of receiving callers at this time of day."

"Didn't you hear the shooting?"

"I'm getting used to the shooting along the turnpike. It seldom disturbs me any more."

"Well, if you slept through that," said the man with a touch of sarcasm, "this fellow might have crawled in this window without your knowing it."

Mary Ann sat up, holding the covers high around her, and pretended to look around the room. "Yes, he might," she said. "But I don't see him now, do you?"

"Your screen's open," said the man coldly.

"Yes, I see it is," she replied. "Would you mind closing it. You're letting in the mosquitoes."

"I didn't open it." There was exasperation in the man's voice. "And you know I didn't."

"O, so that's it," said Mary Ann, thinking fast. "You believe I let your man in here? Well, this moonlight dialogue won't settle anything. Suppose you meet me at the front door in two minutes. We can talk it over and, if you still think I'm the queen of the rum runners, you can search the house. Now please go away while I dress."

The head and cap vanished. Mary Ann jumped up and began to pull on her stockings.

"Good work," said the whisper from under the bed: "We ought to be partners. We'd get rich."

"O, be quiet," said Mary Ann impatiently. "He's a nice boy. I felt like turning you over to him." She put on slippers and wrapped herself in a dark purple negligee. "You'd better vanish before the search begins," she added as she went out.

At the front door Mary Ann, turning on the lights, found a young man who exactly matched the voice she had heard; tall, with smooth, light hair and a lean, serious face. He held himself very straight, and even the bewitching vision that met his eyes brought no change to his formal expression.

"I just want to talk to you a minute," he said without a touch of graciousness.

"Certainly," said Mary Ann, smiling sweetly. "Come in. Do you tell your names in your—er—profession?"

"Harry Leslie," he replied.

"My name is Mary Ann Arundel. I live here alone with my maiden aunt who, fortunately, is very deaf," she said. "Will you sit down or will you search the house first?"

"No use searching the house now," he said.

"What do you mean?"

"You're too willing." He gave this an entirely impersonal note.

Mary Ann sat down in a deep chair. She felt her interest growing. "You really think I helped this man?" she asked.

"I know it." The coast guardsman remained standing, looking down at her impassively.

"How do you know it?"

"Because you didn't get mad enough when I looked in your bedroom window," he said.

FOR a second Mary Ann looked puzzled, then she laughed merrily. "You win," she said. "And I thought I was being so clever and you were being so dumb." She hesitated and looked intently at Leslie's face. "Are you surprised?" she asked. "In your work do you expect people to help you catch their friends?"

"It's not my business to expect anything," he said, but Mary Ann was sure she detected his first uneasy change of expression. She guessed that his impersonal attitude concealed great embarrassment. This decided her.

"Can I explain the situation to you, without making an official confession?" she asked.

He gave her a searching glance, seeming to go through some small internal struggle. "I think so," he said finally, and sat down.

"I suppose you know the name of the man you tried to catch tonight," she said.

Leslie nodded. "Rum runner named Barber."

"Then I won't really be giving away anything very important," said Mary Ann. She went on to tell Leslie a little about herself and all she knew about Jim Barber. She had met him first when he knocked at the door late one night, asking permission to use her telephone. His car was stalled on the turnpike and he wanted to get help. From his one-sided conversation at the instrument she had suspected something shady in his night's occupation. When she asked him about it he had laughingly admitted he was a rum runner and that he had a load of Scotch in his car which he was eager to see on its way before some cruising patrol came along.

While waiting for the rescue party Mary Ann had learned that Jim was the son of an army officer who had run away from home to escape the confinements and restrictions of a West Point career. He enjoyed the excitement of liquor smuggling and besides was making lots of money. The impromptu visit ended after she had given him a cup of hot coffee and permission to call again.

"He seemed such a nice boy and so—eort of lonely," said Mary Ann, "that I thought I would try to make him quit and do something worth while."

"I see you haven't had much luck so far," was Leslie's sour comment.

Mary Ann explained that Jim was going to quit very soon. He was saving now, and before long would have enough to set himself up in some legitimate business. All her efforts to hasten his reform had failed. He was headstrong. In fact, it was this quality, according to Mary Ann, that had convinced her that he was worth reforming. It would be a shame, she said, if a retributive fate, no matter how richly deserved, were to overtake him on the very eve of his regeneration.

Under the spell of Mary Ann's enthusiasm, public issues such as law, order and official justice retired into the background where they looked very small indeed. In their place loomed her engrossing private enterprise of salvaging Jim Barber. She made up her mind to bring that off at any cost, and nothing, she said, lifting her rounded chin and looking straight into Leslie's eyes, would stop her.

Gradually Leslie, too, came to take a personal view of the situation. But it was from a slightly different standpoint.

"Tell this nice boy for me," he said, "that he'd better do that quitting job pretty soon or I'll put him in a place where he won't feel lonely."

The animosity in the coast guardman's voice had not been there earlier.

"Of course, I know you have to do your—work," said Mary Ann with a light touch of scorn, "but what have you got against Jim in particular?"

"Nothing at all," said Leslie. "Where was he hiding just now?"

"Under my bed," said Mary Ann simply.

Leslie looked startled, as if the three words so casually dropped were in themselves more surprising than the fact they conveyed. He stared a moment, then his eyes turned away slowly. "I wondered about that," he said. He rose to his feet. "I have to be going."

Mary Ann got up, too. "You know," her voice had a delicate edge, "I can't stand people who get silly ideas."

Leslie flushed. "If you didn't want him there, then he was a skunk to do it."

"I'm glad he did," said Mary Ann, refusing a compromise. "I'm going to make myself a cup of coffee. If you care to stay, I'll be most happy to give you one, also."

Leslie studied the girl's face doubtfully. Then he surrendered with a shamefaced smile, the first Mary Ann had seen.

"I suppose I need reforming, too," he said.

"Well, there are better things," replied Mary Ann, "than trying to put a nice boy in jail."

. . . . . .

Among the easy going farmers and fishermen whose R. F. D. boxes hung rusting and unused on battered posts along Dixon's turnpike, prohibition was not much of an issue. If they wanted liquor, they made their own. The struggle by night over the white road was just part of a game between outsiders. Mildly interesting to watch from the sidelines, but nothing to worry over unless, of course, you happened to know a player on one of the teams.

When the orphan Mary Ann, three years before, had moved her many heirlooms and her slender fortune down to this picturesque but unproductive remnant of the Arundel possessions, she had found the provincial views of her neighbors refreshing and congenial. Of course, she should have known better. She had been taught in a fashionable Baltimore school that educated young women were expected to take an active part in public affairs.

Unfortunately, she had discovered at about the same time that her own life was so full of vivid and fascinating possibilities and that the people she actually met were so engagingly interesting, there was not much room left for anxiety about the conduct or opinions of people she did not know. And what was the use of a girl learning all about life (well, nearly all), and where was the fun of living at all, if everything was settled in advance by rules and conventions?

Her curly head and her slenderly rounded body were filled with the determination that, if she was going to leave the world a better place than she found it, she would have to do her work on the people she was able to control through level brown eyes or persuade through lips that could look so ridiculously firm in spite of their soft curves. Jim Barber, for example.

AUNT MARTHA, except for her extreme deafness, would have been a serious obstacle to Mary Ann's ambitions. But as it was, the old lady lived in a world largely made up of illusions fostered by her niece. Of course, Mary Ann didn't tell out and out lies, but she was more considerate than those modern young women who ruthlessly try to cram distasteful sophistication down the throats of their elders. She sketched a few vaguely truthful lines and let Aunt Martha fill in the details according to her lights and experiences. The results were peacefully satisfying.

Aunt Martha believed, for example, that Jim Barber was working for a commercial trucking company. He was a wealthy young man of fine family (wasn't his father an army officer?), who did this rather lowly work in preparation for more responsible positions. He was an ambitious lad and brave. Wasn't it his pistol that Jumbo, the old Negro who came every day to look after the place, had picked up this morning near the overturned wheelbarrow and brought to her before Mary Ann was awake? She had thought of burglars until her niece explained that Jim must have dropped it; that he often carried weapons to protect trucks loaded with valuable night shipments.

"Where did you meet him, dear?" asked Aunt Martha.

"I met him through Jim," replied Mary Ann, looking at her aunt with the loving pity of a mother who conceals some harsh fact of life from her child.

"But what a strange time to call."

"Yes, it was rather late," said Mary Ann. To Aunt Martha this suggested some such unconventional hour as nine o'clock. "He works evenings. He's a very serious young man. I know you'd like him, auntie."

Description and good words continued, intended only for one pair of ears; but those, being Aunt Martha's, required a volume of sound sufficient to drown out the low hum of a motor and the noise of wheels in the entrance lane. Around the corner of the house strode Jim Barber, giving signs that he had been unwittingly included in the conversation.

Like Leslie, he was tall, but his hair was dark, slightly wavy and disordered. It was evident that grinning was his habit, though his face now wore a frown of quizzical gloom. He bowed gravely and with somewhat exaggerated courtesy in reply to the old gentlewoman's welcoming smile, then favored Mary Ann with a sour gaze.

"Did I hurt you?" said the whisper in alarm. There was a crushing movement under the bed.

"I guess I was a fool, all right, to come here last night," he said in a low voice.

"I'm glad you've come to realize it," Mary Ann replied cheerfully. "By the way, I have something that belongs to you." He followed her as she went into the house. She showed him his pistol on the hall table. "Jumbo found it today and gave it to my aunt. Things like that are hard to explain. Why didn't you gather it up on your way out last night?" she spoke as if she were admonishing a small boy.

"Yes, why didn't I?" Jim echoed bitterly. "I was so steamed up I forgot all about it. After I got outside I decided to hang around and see how you came out with that federal gunman. Like an idiot, I thought there might be some trouble and I was all set to step forward nobly and take it off your hands. But, O no! You fall on his neck as if he was your long lost sweetie, entertain him for an hour with light conversation, and end up with a breakfast at sunrise. What are you running here—a night club?"

Mary Ann laughed through a high octave. "Worse than that, my dear Jim," she said. "We even receive guests in the hostess' bedroom."

Jim's embarrassment made him angry. "That was different," he said. "It was an emergency. I didn't do it to be funny."

"I'm not laughing at you particularly, Jim," said Mary Ann. "The amusement is provided by the whole male sex. Last night I had to defend myself against Harry Leslie—that's your gunman's name—and today here you come, deserving to be boiled in oil for your own monkeyshines, and start to read me a lecture."

"Well, I heard you clear out in the road telling the world what a great guy this snooper is. What business is it of his what you do?"

"Don't be silly, Jim," said Mary Ann. "You seem to forget what brought him here. He wasn't doing it to be funny, either. In my desperate efforts to square things, I took him into my intimate confidence. I told him the truth about everything."

"What?" Jim was aghast. "You didn't tell him about that, did you?" He motioned toward her bedroom door.

"Yes, I did," Mary Ann replied demurely. "Now, try to be calm. He knew perfectly well you had come in my window, a fact that seemed to disturb him more than your official crimes. When I detected symptoms of outraged morality in the curve of his nostrils I threw the naked truth right in his lap. The shock of the explosion blew all his suspicions away. He has a high regard for me now. I believe he wants to protect me against you, as a side line to rum chasing."

"I'll knock his block off," was Jim's unoriginal yet sincere comment. "In the meantime," he added sullenly, since you've taken up with the coast guard, I suppose it's my cue to do a fadeout?"

MARY ANN put her hand on the rum runner's arm. "Listen, Jim," she said, "you're not to do anything to interfere with our plans. You're going to keep your promise to quit this silly game. That comes first."

Quick, shrewd lines crossed Jim's face. "You mean you're stringing this copper along to give me a good break?" he asked with a questioning smile.

The girl's eyes called on heaven to give her patience. "I sometimes think you're absolutely hopeless," she said. "Of course, I'm not doing anything of the kind. I don't want you to get caught before you quit, but I'm certainly not going to delay your quitting by helping you to outwit Mr. Leslie or anybody else. He knows I won't help him, either. In your affairs out there," she waved a small hand with curving, slender fingers toward the highway, "I'm a neutral and this house is neutral ground."

Disappointed in his first interpretation of Mary Ann's behavior, Jim foundered morosely in the feminine maze.

"What I'd like to know," he said, "is who is going to be the hero of this picture?"

"You are," said Mary Ann blithely. "You're going to turn from a life of crime and become a respectable citizen. Come on, let's take a ride in your car."

Jim gave up the puzzle and followed the girl to the driveway, tiptoeing past the chair where Aunt Martha was taking her afternoon nap. His usual grin had returned by the time he reached the car—a gorgeous dark green roadster with ample storage space in its long sweeping rear, admittedly the fastest and most expensive vehicle in the whole countryside.

"If the moral of our story is going to be that crime doesn't pay," said Jim, "I'll have to get rid of this thing."

During the drive Mary Ann talked little. The swift, gently swaying flight over the white roads through the softly waning sunlight, the steady rush of air brushing her face, fluttering her locks and running invisible fingers through her hair soothed her body and filled her imagination with an exhilarating sense of power.

Fate had placed in her fingers threads reaching into the lives of two men. Delicately handled, those threads gave her control over two lives. And what fine material to work with! Not just ordinary creatures, but magnificent incarnations of great struggles, clashing beliefs, bitter hatreds, conflicts of pride, ambition, and—yes—gallantry, which were hers to direct, readjust and reconcile.

She felt supreme confidence in her ability and wisdom. Women who tried to influence the world through societies, committees and laws were fools. The only way they could really give effect to the special penetrating intelligence of their sex was by using their natural power to harness men to the task, as all the great heroines of history had done. The iron fist inside the silk glove was a weak delusion. The really effective instrument was a steel gauntlet manipulated by a delicate hand.

MARY ANN looked at her own small hands and held them up to the wind, fingers outspread. She laughed joyously. She felt like kissing Jim Barber. She was happy.

"You must make me another promise," she said, apparently out of a clear sky. "Between now and the time you decide to quit you mustn't do any more shooting."

"And let this nice boy pop me?" replied Jim frowning. "What's the idea?"

"For your own sake, Jim. If you hurt anybody—seriously—what would become of our plans? Will you give me your word to wait for the other man to shoot first? Even if you think he's going to catch you?"

The barb was effective. "Don't make me laugh," said Jim scornfully. "I'd be right glad to have that man try to take me in without using a gun." And so the promise was made.

When they got back to the Arundel place Jim wanted to drive in, but she made him let her out at the entrance. She had caught a glimpse of something that suggested the need for diplomacy—a strange and dingy touring car standing in the drive. Walking around to the front of the house she found Harry Leslie sitting alone on the veranda.

"Hello," she called, cheeks still flaming and eyes bright and dancing. "How are you?"

"Hello," he replied, rising. A smile came and went with his single word of greeting.

"I'm sorry I wasn't here when you came," she said, dropping into a chair. "Have you been here long?"

"No. I met your aunt and she was very nice to me. This is a fine old house you have here."

Mary Ann smiled to herself. Aunt Martha, of course, had welcomed Leslie as Jim Barber's friend, had told him that her niece was out riding with Jim, and in all probability had filled his ears with praises of the debonair rum runner. It was equally evident that Leslie intended to keep silent about this puzzling experience as well as about the events of the night before. She noticed that he was watching her intently, seeming to make inward comparison with some previous impression.

The need for baffling this well-contained young man's calculations was obvious. Mary Ann gave him a smile in banal formality. She expanded about the Arundel place. She talked of the glorious weather, the fishing, the duck hunting, and of a skunk that had invaded the henhouse. She expressed an endless chain of tiresomely normal opinions on trifling topics. At the proper moment she administered a dose of dull silence. It was too much for him. He broke cover abruptly.

"You don't think much of the job I have now, do you?" he said.

"Not much future to it, is there?" replied Mary Ann with a show of indifference.

Leslie's defenses came down entirely. He began to talk about himself, returning to the subject as Mary Ann let him feel her quickened interest. He told her of his desire to become a mechanical engineer and how the death of his father, a Washington lawyer, had stopped his studies temporarily. Friends of his father in the treasury department had offered him a coast guard appointment and he had accepted, hoping to get service at sea. Instead he had been assigned to duty upon the shore patrol and here he was.

He had looked forward to some fun in chasing rum runners, but he had been sorely disappointed. Too many rules, too many changes, too much politics, and just enough grafters in the service so that everybody was more or less under suspicion all the time.

"And," he added, "the pay is so small you don't have much of a chance to save."

A picture of the dingy car in the lane flashed across Mary Ann's mind and beside it a vision of Jim Barber's roadster. She wondered if Leslie was thinking of that, too.

"Why don't you get out of it?" she asked.

"I'd thought of it," he replied, "but I've decided to stick it out a little while longer. There are one or two jobs I'd like to clean up before I go."

Once again Mary Ann had that exciting sense of secret power.

"Please don't use a pistol to do the cleaning up, will you?" she said.

"Might have to," he answered, frowning up. "Why?"

"It might spoil everything," she said and hesitated a moment.

"I hate a man who caused a tragedy for the sake of a petty crime." Leslie began to look worried.

The Irish Beauties

By C. Barrington

INSTALLMENT I.

An Old Woman's Story.

It was the year of grace 1750 and old Mother Corrigan sat outside her door in Slattern alley, smoking her short black pipe with a relish; and it was a good day with her, for she had told his fortune that morning to Squire Tyrconnel on his way to fight a duel in the Phoenix park with Lawyer Daly; and when it was finished says she to him:

"Let you count the buttons on his body coat, your honor, and fix the third from the top in your eye. And when you stand up to him say a prayer and pink him with your swordsm in that very spot, and the Lord grant him a bed in heaven, the old villain, for he'll never be asking one on earth again."

And as she said so it was, and old Daly turned up his toes and never spoke more when the squire got him in the third button. And an hour after, Squire Tyrconnel sent his purse with five golden guineas in it and a pound of the best rappee to be found in the Four Courts, and all for Mother Corrigan, and she was a proud woman that day. Her house was stuffed as full of money as an egg of meat; but no one would think it to look at her, for she had it all hid away like an old fairy so that no one would give a thought to it.

She was sitting at her door at the top of Slattern alley where it turns into Britain street and she in the best of good tempers when a lady came by with two young daughters beside her—a tall woman with a fine blossoming color in her face and an air like a peacock spreading his tail and her eyes as clear as spring water. It would be hard to see a finer woman of her age in a day's walk, and all the gentlemen going to and from the castle must turn to have another look at the three of them. Her dress might be handsome at first sight, but closer you could see she had it held up with pins and stitches and a bit of good lace fell over it to hide the wear in the front. Also, she drew her feet under her hoop that they might not be noticed, though they were as small as a young child's. And so she minced along with steps like mice for fear of showing the burst in her shoe.

But for all that she held up her head like the deer in the lord lieutenant's park, and her pride was enough for a queen and too much for a poor lady walking the Dublin streets and holding her skirt up out of the mud.

But it was the two she had with her that any lady might be proud of. There were never two such out of heaven and sure it may be believed, for the world has said it often enough since that day and will say it to the end of time. For the elder was a sweet rogue, with hair like red gold clean out of the fire, and eyes like a blue June morning and cheeks like May flowers that a rose has kissed and one that better than a rose would need to kiss one day, and her smile lit up the street and she tripped along as light as a spring breeze.

But the younger—sure the Lord was well pleased the day he made her face, for it was perfection's self. Her hair was a dark brown veined with gold, and her eyes like purple violets with the rain on them, and when she closed her long lashes 'twas like a cloud over the stars; and her mouth, and the soft smile and the dimple that dipped when she laughed—a man would stand all day to watch her and not think long. It is a strange thing that one girl will be like that, all beauty and shining sweetness and another perhaps as good—for better she would not be in her heart—will be a poor sorrowful little victim that a cat would not look at in the dark.

And old Mother Corrigan saw them coming and she took her pipe out from between her teeth and says she:

"Halt here, my ladies, the three of you, and hear the fortune that's waiting you—the way you'll be ready when it comes."

"Fortune!" says the lady, stopping, a girl in each hand. "'Tis the black fortune and the sad fortune that befell me since the day the gold ring was on my finger. And I don't want to hear any more, so I don't, for if I had more to bear than I have this minute I wouldn't face the morn's sorrow."

But Mother Corrigan rose up as stately as a woman to a dance, and she looked the lady in the eyes as if she was as tall as herself, and "Come in," says she, "for though 'tis a poor place the beauty of the three of you will light it like candles, and 'tis here your luck begins."

So they went in and the lady said she had not so much as a silver penny to cross her hand with and, indeed, would have pulled her daughters back, but the old woman would not have it.

"Leave it so," says Mother Corrigan, "what matters an empty hand today when you'll fill the two hands of me with gold when the luck comes that's coming? Give me your word, my lady, and I'll take it for as good as five guineas."

So she gave her word to fill Mother Corrigan's hand with golden guineas, and the two young girls were standing by, their cheeks like burning roses for fear and hope, as the old witch caught the lady's hand and gabbled something that was not a prayer and the words came from her like a person talking in their sleep.

"High blood and poverty. Sure, your father had a crown on his head and no gold to gild it with."

But the lady pulled her hand away angrily.

"Then you know who I am. What's the good of play acting? I guessed this would be the way of it!"

"I don't know and I don't care," says the old woman with a grin. "I'm telling you what I see, and till this minute I never laid eye on you or yours. Don't you be speaking again, for there's no sense in that, but hearken!"

So she told her her father was poor and proud, an Irish lord with a castle in a bog and an old coach with the cloth hanging off it in flitters and plow horses to draw it; and that he never gave her a penny since she married, for he had it not to give. And she told her her husband was no better, but running after the cards and dice all day so that all the world cried folly on her for taking up with him.

"But no matter!" says Mother Corrigan, "for you did a good deed for yourself that day you stood up with him in the church."

"A good deed!" says the lady, very angry. "Don't you be a foolish old woman and you so near your end. For I got nothing out of it but care and crying and pinching poverty, and five children that I don't know how to put the bread in their mouths; and this minute I'm as lonesome as a widow, for my husband is off and away in the country and here am I in Dublin, and if I know how to get bite or sup for them it's as much as I do know."

But the old woman shook her head till her teeth rattled.

"Let you be easy and take what's coming. I see you sitting in a king's house and the walls all gilded gold, and the carpets like moss that your foot would sink into, and riches and grandeur, and every one bowing down to the mother of the beauties."

"Well, if the half of it's true," says the lady, "the first news that should come to me is that I'm a widow, for 'tis impossible it should happen as you say with a husband that hasn't one penny-piece to rattle on a tombstone."

"You'll not be a widow for many a day, and 'tis your husband's name brings the luck."

"You don't know what his name is. You couldn't! If you'll tell me his name, I'll engage to believe any mortal thing you tell me."

So the three looked at the old woman, but she took another look at the hand, as she might be reading a book, and:

"Good day to you, Mrs. Gunning, and good day to his lordship's daughter—my Lord Mayo—and good day to the mother of the two beauties that'll sweep the world."

And she clucked and chuckled to herself, highly diverted with their astonishment. How did she know it? What that old woman did not know would make but a short story. It was said she had information over the whole countryside like a minister of the crown.

THEY stared, for they were new come to Dublin, running from their debts in Roscommon and taking the chance to pick up husbands in the city, and there was not one there who knew them.

So she took the younger girl's hand in hers and says she:

"You'll marry the highest man, bar one or two, in England. And you'll not be content with that, for when you bury him you'll marry the highest man in Scotland; and if I sat here till tomorrow I couldn't tell you the half of the riches and glory that's waiting for you. You'll have to crawl through the black mud to get the first, but after that 'tis a clear course, and the mud won't stick to a duchess' gown, young Miss Elizabeth Gunning!"

A duchess! Elizabeth's eyes were like winter stars, they so sparkled—they would put out the light of diamonds. She held herself like a young poplar, and says she:

"And if you're right, old woman, or anything like it, I'll come and see you when I get promotion and my lord duke shall fill your pockets with gold."

But Mother Corrigan grinned like a dog.

"I haven't a pocket, my lady's honor. My hand's good enough; but I'll not be here when you come riding back to poor old Dublin in yer coach and six—and now for the fairy of the world!" And she took the hand of the elder, who was shaking like a leaf and expecting to hear of a prince and his blue ribbon at the least, and her eyes fixed on the old witch like two blue lakes with the stars dipping in them.

But she shook her head.

"A great man, but not so big a man as your sister's." (The girl looked jealous daggers at Elizabeth.) "A fine man and the gold lace on him and velvet and silk stockings and gold buckles shining in the shoes of him, and a big house to live in and fine clotnes for your back, and——"

She stopped dead like a horse pulled up on his haunches, but the young Maria twitched her by the raggedy sleeve.

"Go on. What is it? I want to hear."

"Don't ask me, and you so beautiful!"

"I do ask, and I'll have it out of you. I suppose you mean I'll get old and ugly like yourself."

"You'll never be old and ugly. Them that remembers you will remember the loveliest thing God ever made when he took clay into his two hands."

"I don't know what she means," says Maria fretfully. "But, sure, some women are handsome till they die. Tell us when will the luck come, and how?"

"With the Golden Vanity and a woman with a man's name. And now leave me, my three queens, and I'll have a drop to warm me old bones and a whiff of the pipe to put the life in me. But don't forget the old woman when the great lords is kneeling before you and pouring the diamonds out of baskets before ye—and send the golden guineas, and——"

So she went on mumbling and muttering and that was the first and last time the old hag told a fortune for love and not money. She had not long to tell any, for she died next May and not a soul to cry for her.

They stepped out into the sunshine, their heads high and scarce a word to say to each other, for all three were thinking of the promises as light and glittering as soap bubbles. And Maria would not spare a word to Elimbeth, for not a woman but must walk after the heels of a duchess and she was all for leading.

"The Golden Vanity!" says Elizabeth. "Mamma, what should that be? When I'm a duchess——"

"I don't know and most likely 'tis not worth knowing." Mrs. Gunning was angry. Her fine brows were drawn together. "Leave talking of duchesses, you silly fools, and go get the herrings for tea. I have left the children too long as it is."

So she marched down Britain street like a queen for all her burst shoe—a shabby street it was for such ladies—and the two walked off to Fishmonger's alley and not a head but turned to look at them.

"Faith, they're goddesses and no mistake!" says gay Mr. Councillor Egan on the way from the law courts with his mulberry face and his mulberry velvet coat. It was to Lawyer Curran he said it, and in a small city like Dublin the name held and the two were called the goddesses from that time.

Old Corrigan's words gave them courage for a while, but what can bold up against a diet of herrings day in and day out? And that was all the poor lady could give her family. What was she to do? Mr. Gunning had took himself off to Castle Coote, his beggarly place in the country where he could dice and drink in peace with the neighboring squireens, and live off claret and the skinny fowls that pecked about the avenue, and she had the weight of the children on her spare shoulders.

'Twas about this time that young Harry Lepel, the first man they met, in a way of speaking, fell in love with Elizabeth, the younger. The way it happened was this. She was walking down Mount street with Maria and she let fall her purse and nothing in it but a pocket piece to save her gentility. Harry was strolling off to my Lord Cappoquin's from mounting guard at the castle (for at that time his lordship lived in Merrion square) and indeed Mr. Lepel was as fine a figure of a young man as a girl could wish to see in his regimentals all laced with gold and his handsome head above them—a brown man with dark eyes. And seeing a young madam drop her purse, he stooped for it and coming up behind them saluted very stiff and offered it and the two turned and looked him in the face.

IT is certain a man might come up a thousand times behind a woman's back and not be startled as Harry Lepel was when he saw them, for there never were nor will be two such sisters. It was like a battery suddenly unmasked and what chance had the poor devil that was marching up to it like an innocent? The only thing he could do was to surrender at discretion—but to which lady? That was the trouble. Elizabeth Gunning settled it for him.

"I thank you, sir," says she with a smile that had ruined St. Anthony, for she was one that smiled with her eyes as well as her mouth—a golden sunshine that the heart opened to naturally.

He was stuttering and stammering. "Madam, I thank you for the happiness of touching anything your hand has blessed."

It was sudden, I allow, but then so, too, was her beauty. At all events he dared no more, not having the courage, though all the will, to linger, and was turning off when a queer thing happened. But it was to be.

A drunken poltroon of a bargeman was coming up from Lifley side, lurching and yawning like a Dutch hooker in a gale and, seeing them in a little bunch on the cobblestones, he took an anger at them in his wooden head and, whether purposely or not I know not, but he elbowed up against Miss Maria and drove her into the dirty kennel and she gave a faint scream, for her shoes were destroyed with the mud and it was the only pair she had to her name. So what does Mr. Lepel do but drive straight from the shoulder at the offender and in a minute the shoes and the lady were out of the kennel and the bargeman lying there as snug as snug and the oaths he let out of him blackening the air like a flight of crows. So Mr. Lepel, smiling with set lips like a picture, says to the girls:

"Ladies, permit me to escort you to your home. 'Tis much to be regretted the streets are not safe for beauty unattended, though to be sure I have the happiness to profit by the circumstance. I trust it has been no shock to your sensibility?"

And indeed tears had gathered in Elizabeth's eyes, but Maria was laughing like a Hebe and looking up in his face—the blue eyed lovely rogue!

"We thank you, sir. 'Tis what our own brother had done had he been more than five. But while he is in the nursery we must be obliged to kind strangers for protection."

"Madam, I would not willingly remain a stranger," says Mr. Harry, very eager and touching his cocked hat. "Permit me to present myself for want of a better introducer. My name is Harry Lepel."

"I thank you, sir. 'Twill be remembered with gratitude. May we now bid you farewell?"

Miss Maria sank down in a curtsey so well devised that it showed the littlest foot in the world save only Elizabeth's. A fortunate bootmaker later was to make five guineas an afternoon by showing their shoes at a penny a head to the mob that gathered to stare at them, but that time was not yet come. Mr. Lepel spoke earnestly:

"Madam, you can't suppose—'tis not possible I can permit you to return alone after such an adventure. The sun sinks and the streets are mighty ill lit. If my company is disagreeable I can walk ten paces behind, but otherwise——"

Here Elizabeth interposed with a fine color in her cheek:

"The company of our protector can't be disagreeable—'tis a favor. But, sir, I will be frank with you; we are in Dublin incognito; our lodging is not equal to our pretension to birth, and, in short——"

SHE hesitated, with eyes dropped and the lashes like night upon her cheek. The crimson bow of her upper lip trembled—a seductive picture of troubled beauty. Anyhow, it did Mr. Harry's business for him. He could no more have torn himself away at that moment than he could have embraced the bargeman swearing blue murder at his feet.

"Madam, these are misfortunes that may happen to the greatest, and 'tis easy seen that in your case breeding and birth combine with—beauty. Is it indiscreet to ask the name of the ladies I have the honor to address?"

"'Tis very indiscreet," says Miss Maria with one of her bright side glances, "but yet—should we withhold it, sister?"

"Surely not from so kind a friend," Elizabeth spoke eagerly. "Our name, sir, is Gunning, and we are granddaughters to the late Viscount Mayo and nieces to his present lordship. And when I add that our parents have fallen into poverty you will comprehend——"

Her voice paused on a silver note which had the beginning of a sob, and when Elizabeth saddened the world must sadden with her, so lovely were her long eyes and the drooping head. Pity poor Mr. Harry! Talk of Scylla and Charybdis—he stood between the sirens, and could he have halved his heart (and many men have that power) one-half had gone to either charmer.

"Madam," says he tenderly, "I feel for your sorrows more than I can express. Might I but have the happiness to be presented to your mamma—for 'tis the most prodigious circumstance—I am the son of Sir Francis Lepel of Tarrington, in Yorkshire, and I have heard him speak of my Lord Mayo many a time. His lordship stood second to my grandfather in his famous duel with Lord Ayrshire thirty years since. My name will not be unknown, permit me——"

And again he saluted, very gallant, and the three proceeded down the street, the girls on thorns for thinking of the dingy rooms and their mother down at heel, and the everlasting herrings sizzling on the grate, and Lucy and Kitty screaming for their supper. It was thinking thus that Maria touched Elizabeth's arm as much as to say, "Shall we let him go?" For, indeed, these girls had a perfect language of signs between them, elaborated in the shifts and devices of their life, and Miss Maria at least was an accomplished little schemer. But Elizabeth responded not to the pinch.

"Why, sir," says she sweetly, "the name is indeed familiar. Sitting on his lordship's knees often have I heard him discourse of Sir Francis. You are no stranger. Yet truth is best. We are poor, Mr. Lepel. My sister and I are debarred from all the pleasures of our rank, and our only concern is how to lighten our mamma's burden if we could. 'Tis this makes us hesitate, for we can't offer you the hospitality we would."

"Name it not, madam, I entreat," says Mr. Harry, trying to look into those two seductive eyes. "God forbid I should add to your anxieties. But had I the happiness to know your mamma, whose beauty half Ireland knows by repute, sure I might be permitted to open the way to some pleasures. There is, for instance, a birthnight ball to be celebrated at the castle——"

"Sir, you are all goodness, but gentlemen understand little of the difficulties of poor young ladies of quality. How should they? We have no dresses fit for the eyes of his excellency. Even shoes——"

She permitted a foot to appear beneath the edge of her petticoat and ambushed it again. But it had done its work.

"You tear my heart, madam. But since that little marvel of a foot recalls Cinderella's, permit me to say that a fairy godmother smoothed the way for that young lady to a certain ball, and there she met the prince whose throne she afterwards shared."

"There are no fairies in Dublin, sir." Her voice was like flowing honey, while the little foot so commended was bestowing a sharp kick up the fair Maria, and thus it said:

"Run ahead. Turn the corner and run like a lamplighter and let mamma know what is toward. Hide the herrings. Bundle the children to bed. Fling mamma's Irish lace over her head. I can hold him fifteen minutes. Speed!"

This is much to be said in one kick, and it takes a woman to say and a woman to hear, but Miss Maria was a woman though but eighteen. She smiled like truth's self.

"Sister, if 'tis not disagreeable to you to spare me, I have the message to leave at Mrs. Flaherty's and will go forward and meet with you at our door. Excuse me, Mr. Lepel. My sister is a slow walker and I a swift. I knew not 'twas so late."

Away went Miss Maria. Turning the corner, she picked up her petticoats and legged it along like a hare at dawn.

IT may be thought that the acquaintance ripened in those fifteen minutes which doubled into thirty. Elizabeth's step was slower, her voice more musical, even as a nightingale sings her sweetest to the moon. The shade of my Lord Mayo might hover about them to safeguard propriety, but Mr. Harry drew as near as the rampart of the lady's hoop would permit, bending his head to catch her murmurs and his nostrils inhaling the faint perfume of silken hair rolled back from the whitest brow in the world. They made a pair that many would have remarked but for the ill lit streets.

"I would not go in, sister, lest mamma should scold me for leaving you, and, indeed, I am but just arrived," says she demurely. And since she had not entered, 'twas singular how neat was the appearance of that dingy room, for it was dingy, do what you would.

The fire burned brightly, and if there was a delicate odor of herrings and onions 'twas the worst could be said, for none were to be seen. Indeed, a rich perfume fought with it as if a hasty hand had dashed the odors of Araby here and there to discourage the herrings. A large velvet cloak, the worse for wear, disguised the rents of the sofa whereon sat Mrs. Gunning, majestic in another of faded purple satin, beneath which her dress was conjectural. A noble square of Limerick point was flung over her head and hung, veil-like, by each ear; and, indeed, with the little cherub Lucy at her feet, she might have sat for an ageing Madonna.

Kitty was bundled off to the camp bed in the back room, and sure the picture was homelike if you studied the handsome lady rather than the ragged chairs. It was the best they could do, poor souls, in fifteen minutes and wonderful in the time. It is women for quick thinking and quick acting where men are concerned; and, indeed, the look of astonishment Mrs. Gunning gave as the three entered was inimitable, though already she had every particular set down in her mind. She swept the stateliest curtsey and cast a rebuking maternal eye on her daughters ere she addressed Mr. Lepel.

But when explanations were made, how did her brow clear and a fair weather smile efface the frost! She welcomed him with cordial kindness, with such reminiscences of his family as warmed his heart, and a bottle of generous claret in a silver cup enriched with the Mayo arms. It was given with such good will and served by so lovely a cupbearer, the fair Maria, that the man does not breathe but must feel it worthy of the three ladies who tendered it. He toasted them one and all in turn, and if his bow to Elizabeth was a little longer that circumstance did not displease Mrs. Gunning.

"I leave you to judge, Mr. Lepel," says she, "what it costs a mother to see her dear ones exiled from all the little gay scenes where it would become them to appear. But what can I do? My father's grandchildren, Mr. Gunning's daughters, can't appear except with propriety, and why should I hesitate to tell so kind a friend that 'tis beyond my power?"

It was discussed between them all for an hour as to the Birthnight ball, but Mrs. Gunning was resolute, nor could Mr. Harry dare to make the offers that trembled on his lips. He could have groaned aloud to think on the sums he had wasted nightly on gaming—one-half of which would have adorned these beauties and set them free to flutter their wings in the sunshine of fashion. Later Maria, half smiling, half sad, told how they were promised luck by the old witch of Dublin, though she gave not all the particulars. She built not on it, she declared, nor yet did Elizabeth; and she, a soft sigh parting her lips, confirmed her sister. "The more so," says she, "that none of us can imagine what is the Golden Vanity. Is there such a ship to be the ship of our fortune? 'Tis that it sounds most like?"

He shook his head. Mrs. Gunning softly remonstrated:

"My dears, be not giddy nor let your heads run on such follies. There is no such name and no such thing and 'tis impossible——"

More she would have said, but a man came crying somewhat down the street, and beside him went another with a flambeau that he might read a paper in his hand, and what the man cried was this:

"Let the fashion of Dublin, both ladies and gentlemen, take notice that there comes presently to the theater in

Mary Ann's Man Power

By Ronald Millar

Mary Ann went on, "if the other man started shooting first. . . ."

So that, too, was settled, and the coast guardsman deciding that he would prefer, anyway, to operate on this particular rum runner in a more intimate manner.

MARY ANN, evolving her plans rapidly, had decided to bring together the conflicting forces that were now firmly under her control. Almost every day Jim or Harry Leslie would drop in to call. She had looked forward to their meeting as a sort of turning point. Never, she realized, would they become friends. But, so long as their hostility remained aloof and official, it was a stubborn masculine obstacle. Instinct told her that it would be replaced by more personal and more easily guided sentiments as soon as they met.

At the end of two weeks Mary Ann observed they were intentionally avoiding each other. If one car was parked in the lane, the other would drive on. She laughed gleefully and invited both of the men to Sunday dinner. Leslie was told to come early. Mary Ann knew that the dingy touring car was more sensitive about its associates than the gorgeous roadster.

Aunt Martha presided over the momentous meal with charm, graciousness, and complete ignorance of all stresses and strains. Under her benign eye faces remained passive and voices low. The battle had to be carried on by indirect fire.

"It's getting so," said Jim, "that a man can't drive along the road after dark wihout being followed. Some night," this to Marry Ann, "I'm going to get mad and let one of those snoopers catch up with me."

"Did you ever notice, Mary Ann," countered Leslie with heavy subtlety, "when it's broad daylight little boys throw stones at the graveyard?"

There was a lot more in the same vein. Mary Ann laughed and told the two men to live up to their years.

"If you two had met under different circumstances," she said, "you know you'd have been the best of friends."

They grinned grimly at one another. Was what she said true? Perhaps. But the thing between them now had little to do with prohibition.

There was no doubt at all that Mary Ann's dinner had the effect of reducing the issue of personal terms. Both men began to make love to her insistently, each according to his temperament.

"Listen, Mary Ann," said Jim a night or two later, "I'm crazy about you. I'll quit this racket tomorrow if you say the word. I've got enough now to give us a good start. What do you say?"

"Don't talk about your silly money, Jim," she said. "I want you to quit for your own sake." She patted the hand he had slipped around her in the gentle way that is most discouraging to lovers.

Leslie's symptoms were more obscure but fully as acute. He had fits of silence, broken alternately by attacks of extreme chivalry and harsh insolence. One evening he grabbed Mary Ann violently in his arms. She didn't turn her head, but he found soft fingers between his lips and hers. He said, "O, hell!" and ran down the veranda steps.

"Now is the time for all good girls to come to the aid of their boy friends," said Mary Ann to herself, listening to the violent grinding of Leslie's gears as they were jerked into high. She noticed that her hand still covered her mouth and dropped it impatiently. In all her scheming she had kept as free of her own emotions as an experienced hospital nurse who had to look after two difficult patients in adjoining beds. A little rivalry would help both of them to get well quickly. When they went it would be simply "Good-by!" and wondering who would come along next. She walked into the house, looking very cool and full of resolve.

When Jim dropped in the next afternoon she broke the news to him at once: "I want you to keep your promise right now," she said.

"You mean quit?"

"Yes, you've been putting it off much longer than you said you would."

"I know, Mary Ann, but I can't do it. Things are different now. This lad Leslie has been crowding me pretty close. A couple of nights ago he jumped his bus out in front of me from a side road and I had to go through a fence to get around him. If I quit now, he'd think he ran me out. And besides," Jim added morosely, "there are other reasons."

"Are you going to break your word to me?" asked Mary Ann.

Jim fought back. "That was before Leslie came. Are you giving me the go-quick to help me or him?" he asked with sudden suspicion. "If I beat it, he gets the credit, of course."

Mary Ann took hold of the lapels of his coat. "Look at me, Jim," she said, "and let me see that you're sorry for saying that. There, that's better. Now, answer me, will you quit this ridiculous business and go away, if Harry Leslie goes away at the same time?"

The rum runner frowned over this new notion for a moment and found, concealed somewhere in it, material for a shrewd smile. "Sure I will," he said. "That's not a bad idea. If he gets out of this patrol district, I'll quit and get out, too."

"Then it's a go!" Mary Ann shook hands in serene delight. "I'll fix it up right away and let you know about it tomorrow." She ran into the house and called up Leslie's number.

"Can you come over this evening?" she asked. "I want to talk to you about something. . . . No, never mind about last night. This has nothing to do with that. . . . No, it's just hard-boiled business. . . . All right, I'll expect you."

The best way to remove adhesive plaster (the metaphorical kind as well as the surgical) is to give it a quick jerk. Taking it off gently is much more painful in the end. Unfortunately, this simple fact is seldom recognized by the patient, who regards the performance as evidence of callous brutality. So Many Ann knew what to expect when she made her abrupt announcement that night.

"You told me you intended to give up the coast guard," she said. "I wish you would do it right away."

Leslie flushed like a stoplight. "I see," he said. "It's on account of Barber. You're afraid I'll get him before you do."

Mary Ann flinched but recovered quickly. "He'll quit if you will," she replied. "He doesn't want any one to think he was driven out."

"O, so that's it," Leslie said sarcastically. "The uplift of this nice boy wouldn't quite lift until you get somebody else to stand on. All right, I'll get out, if it will make you any happier."

"Don't take that tone, Harry. You know I urged you long ago to quit for your own sake."

"Yes, I remember. You said there was no future. In other words, no money. But Barber, now——"

"Stop it!" Mary Ann leveled a ridiculously small and curving finger at him. "I told you he was going away, too. If you can't understand my interest and motives in this whole business, at least give me credit for good intentions."

"What are your interests and motives?"

"I'm afraid it wouldn't do any good to explain them to you now, Harry." Mary Ann spoke dully, feeling that the climax of her triumph had in some way slipped away from her. "But later on, if you ever feel that you were wrong in the things you've just been saying to me, I wish you'd let me know. Good-by." She gave Leslie her hand and turned away.

He watched her uncertainly for a moment, then shrugged his shoulders. "Just the same," he muttered, "I'll bet that tramp Barber comes back."

THE real tragedy of life, Mary Ann decided over the belated diary, where she was recording the close of the Barber-Leslie affair, lies in the inevitable staleness of success. It must be, she reflected, that those who have the imagination and ability to control destiny always foresee triumph too clearly. When it finally comes its flavor is gone. And such people, taking the larger view of existence, are sure to be misunderstood. Loneliness in their penalty.

These sublime, melancholy thoughts, carefully confided to a little red book, made Mary Ann feel better. But she could not escape from the fact that she was indeed lonely. The last week had dragged. That exultant sense of power, with which she had sent her two knights riding forth to distant battles, had quickly pined away for want of nourishment. She wondered what those two were doing now. Jim had said he was going to Washington "to look around for a while." Would he ever really amount to anything? Wasn't he doomed to get into scrapes, whatever he did? Perhaps it had been a mistake to send him away; she might have kept him under her eye.

And Harry, where was he? He had left without a word about his plans. Just a note, saying: "I'll take back some of the things, but not all." Which ones did he mean? From the very first moment when the top of his head appeared at that window, how bitter and stubborn and secretive he had been! If she hadn't had her mind on more important things, she probably would have hated him. Jim at least was frank and amiable.

Mary Ann was looking out toward Dixon's turnpike, along which adventure had come and gone, when she heard the sound of a familiar horn and saw Jim's roadster drive in the lane. She ran to the front of the house and met him coming up the veranda steps, wearing a mischievous smile.

"What," exclaimed Mary Ann by way of greeting, "are you doing here?" Her pleasure at seeing him was swamped in astonishment.

"I'm back here to live down my dark past" he said. "And when I start to reform I don't stop half way." He turned back his coat and revealed the insignia of the coast guard.

Mary Ann stared. "You're joking. You don't mean it."

"Sure I do. With Leslie no longer around to protect you, I got to thinking some tough rum runner might come along and grab you off."

"I think you've gone crazy," said Mary Ann, laughing.

"Like a fox. Listen, while I explain the subtle details. As soon as I knew for sure Leslie had resigned, I applied for his job. I persuaded the secretary of the treasury that I knew all about the rum running around here and guaranteed that not a bottle would pass this stretch of road while I was on the job."

"But how about the men you used to be with? You can't be a traitor, even if——"

"Don't be silly, Mary Ann. I wouldn't double-cross the boys. I just explained to them about my change of heart and, as a great personal favor to me, they agreed not to run any rum over my beat. Of course, there's another pretty good road east of here, but that's not my business. I'm keeping my word to Uncle Sam."

"And what becomes of your plan to do something worth while?"

"What do you mean, worth while? That's where the great idea comes in. Here I am—honest, virtuous, and with practically nothing to do. I can devote all my time to making love to you, my darling."

"I give you up," she said. "You're hopeless." But there was a note of tenderness in her voice.

Mary Ann began to feel a little frightened about herself. Absorbed by her interest in other people, she had never bothered to cross-examine her own emotions. Was this tenderness, this maternal feeling she had for Jim Barber, love? Perhaps it was the only kind that could come to women of her temperament, who needed independence and a sense of domination. She knew she could always manage and control Jim. He had charm and brains, but these would get him nowhere without the stamina she could so easily provide. Once she had felt very much like kissing him. She wondered if that had been a symptom of the genuine biological impulse, without which, so they said a woman could not live happily with a man. She decided to wait and see. She was, she reflected with greater wisdom than she knew, still quite young.

Jim took comfort in her uncertainty and became a model of the attentive and moderately patient lover. He took her for long drives in the afternoons and dropped in often in the course of his perfunctory night patrols. So it happened that about eleven o'clock on the night of the particular September day that forever after was distinguished in her dairy by nothing more than a huge question mark, Mary Ann sat in her living room reading a book while she waited for Jim.

PRESENTLY, instead of the customary bark of his horn, she heard the quickly swelling noise of racing motors, rising to an angry uproar and ending suddenly in the desperate cry of clinching brakes, a crash, and then the light tinkle of glass that always sounds like laughter in the moment of silence after an automobile accident.

First Mary Ann sat perfectly still for an indefinite period. Then she found herself running through the grass toward the road. A strange figure loomed up and moved toward her, flashing a searchlight. She called out.

"It's all right," answered Jim's voice. "I'm just bringing you a little surprise.

"What happened?"

Mary Ann then saw the reason for the strange silhouette. Jim was carrying a limp form over his shoulder.

"Is he badly hurt?" she asked.

"No. He came out through his windshield and is just sleeping it off. Nothing broken. Hot water and bandages will fix him up."

"All right, bring him along. I'll get them ready." She ran back toward the house.

"Get ready for a shock, too," Jim shouted after her. He panted up the veranda steps and through the open door. He wore a wide grin as he spoke to his unconscious companion: "I have a hunch, nice boy, that this is going to be good."

"Fetch him back here," Mary Ann called. She was drawing water in the bathroom that adjoined her bedroom.

Jim went in, stripped the covers back with one hand and lowered his burden to the white sheet. It was Harry Leslie, clothes dusty and torn, face pale and streaked with blood from a network of small cuts surrounding a huge lump on his forehead. His eyes were closed.

Mary Ann hurried out with towels, gauze, and a pan of water. She looked and then stared. Wide eyes flashed a quick glance at Barber as if suspecting a hoax, then back toward Leslie.

"Harry!" she exclaimed. "Harry! What does this mean?" But even before the first dazed expression left her face she was sitting on the edge of the bed, bathing the wounded man's head while Jim held the water.

"Why didn't you tell me? I can't believe it. What happened?" Her voice sounded far away.

Jim laughed. "You know as much as I do. I picked up a car running without lights. It tried to get away. I passed it and cut across in front. It tried to run around me and stuck its nose in the bank. I had no idea who was driving until I picked Leslie out of the scrap heap. The back end of his car is loaded with hootch."

Mary Ann didn't reply. Something very extraordinary had begun to disentangle itself inside of her. While her fingers were at work she kept watching the passive face on the pillow. It seemed to be telling her something she had always wanted to know but never before could understand.

"What do you think of your shining example now?" Jim continued in bantering tone. "It looks as if the big reform wave had developed quite an undertow."

"He's waking up," said Mary Ann. As the final bandage tightened around his head Leslie had winced and opened his eyes.

"Wait till he finds out I'm the guy that pinched him," said Jim. "That'll bring him up fighting."

Mary Ann rose. "Will you go out, Jim?" she said. "I want to talk to Harry alone."

Jim hesitated in serious wonderment, but the glance that met his was like a stranger's. "All right," was all he could say.

As the door closed Mary Ann knelt beside the bed. "Harry," she said. "Do you know who this is?"

He opened his eyes and focused them slowly. "My God!" he whispered. "Mary Ann!" He turned his face away. "I didn't intend to come here. I was just driving by."

She leaned over him. "Harry, look at me. Why did you do it?" He shook his head and groaned with the pain of the movement. "Harry, did you think you needed money? Did you think I cared about that?" He nodded and groaned again.

Suddenly a mass of tousled curls covered his shoulder, stifled sobs sounded very close to his right ear, and a tiny pool of tears began to collect in the hollow of his collar bone.

AFTER what seemed to him a broadminded interval Jim stuck his head in the door. For fully ten seconds he remained at gaze, then remarked out loud: "Well, I'll be dogoned! I thought I was the hero."

"What's he doing here?" Leslie asked the curls on his shoulder.

This time Jim said: "Well, I'll be damned!" and withdrew. Three minutes, possibly four, were devoted to solitary meditation, then he sought the telephone and called a number.

"Hello! This Barber. . . . Yes. Take an important message to the chief. . . . Yes. I'm quitting, see. . . . Yes, right now. Tell him I made a pinch and had to drop it. Tell him this was a guy who played me a dirty trick once, so my testimony wouldn't be any good in court, anyhow. Get that? . . . Yes, tell him they could prove I was prejudiced against him. So I'm letting him go and quitting. . . . No, not tomorrow. . . . Right now. . . . All right. Try and catch me."

He hung up the receiver and walked briskly back to the bedroom. "Was that liquor going to the same old place, Leslie?" he asked.

"Yes, why?"

"I just wanted to know. Can't leave it out there in the road."

"O, Jim!" protested Mary Ann. "What are you going to do?"

He motioned her aside with a crooked grin. "I'm a bum hero," he said.

Leslie reached out his hand. "Thanks for everything, Barber," he said. "Thanks particularly for bringing me here."

"Don't mention it," replied Jim, waving farewell. "My mistake!"

The Irish Beauties

By E. Barrington

Aungier street the dramatic company which Mr. Sheridan presents to his patrons in a new and luscious play, by name——"

But here was the speaker's voice drowned by a wagon passing on the cobblestones.

"What is it?" cried Mrs. Gunning, running to the window, for indeed she loved the play as well as did her girls. And as if the question had reached him the man turned towards her and bellowed like the bull of Bashan, "The Golden Vanity!"

The little company within stared transfixed upon one another.

"Lord, madam!" says Mr. Lepel, as they slowly recovered their wits, "'tis clear the angels are watching over their like on earth. Sure never was a stranger event and that old hag a witch that should ride on a tar barrel if right had its own and it was not for the deserved good luck she foretold."

HIS eyes stared like saucers, and Mrs. Gunning was in a kind of amazement that asked for a glass of strong waters had there been any at hand. It was Elizabeth who was obliged to speak, and with her usual good sense.

"Indeed, sir, we must not be hopeful. Every chance of our life tells us that, and who's to say the old woman had not news of this play coming to Dublin and so wove it in with her story? The Irish have a great notion of acting and think more of the playhouse than going to mass."

"But, madam," he pleaded earnestly—would indeed have gone on his knees but for the circle of staring eyes surrounding him—"mayn't it be that my insignificant self might be a little bit of the luck that's coming? For sure if such ladies appeared at the birthnight ball, 'twould stir the world so that something amazing must come of it. It must, indeed!"

He turned to Mrs. Gunning, imperial in her velvet cloak, and spoke lower:

"Madam, I could wish the young ladies absent that I might speak my mind. I would not alarm a blush to their cheeks, but 'tis really easiest, and if you permit——"

She waved a hand to Elizabeth:

"My dears, let you and Maria take the children away. Mr. Lepel has a private word for me."

The two shepherded the little ones into the next room, which was all that was in their power, poor souls!—but it left it in Miss Maria's power to apply a shell-like ear to the door, which she immediately did.

He pulled a creaky chair by the mother of the graces.

"Madam, perhaps the seeing them grow up about you might blind even a mother's eye and for myself I would not speak before your young madams, though my eyes might say what my tongue daren't. On my oath as a gentleman I assure you that never were two such beauties seen alive. You couldn't match either taken singly, and seen together and each setting off the other with loveliness so amazingly different it's a sight that the world would be mad for if it had the chance allowed it. But, sure, beauty must be seen to be admired and if they are buried alive—but I leave it to your own judgment. All I dare say is the birthnight ball at the castle will be the opening——"

Mrs. Gunning interrupted:

"Sir, I take your attention in excellent part and admit that my daughters are as well looking as other people's"—he threw up his hands to heaven—"but when I repeat that, owing to the malice of fate, they have no dresses in which to appear, I am saying but what our surroundings say for me. And therefore——"

Mr. Lepel fell on his knees. It was the fashion of the time thus to address an inexorable lady and not uncommon to accompany the action with such tears as needed the application of a fine laced handkerchief, but he reserved them for the climax.

"Madam, I know—I know, and what heart of adamant but must be pierced with sympathy! But what I would say—my winnings at cards—should I blush to own myself a winner?—all, all, everything is at your service and the only reward I ask is the felicity—the priceless joy to have unbarred——"

But Mrs. Gunning knew her world too well to believe that abstract felicity will content a young man in the bloom of youth and audacity. She drew in lips still beautiful and gazed at him with eyes where gratitude softened reproach.

"Sir, I take your meaning and am grateful. But it is impossible that the daughter and granddaughters of my Lord Mayo should accept money tendered by the hand of pity, however amiable. And therefore——"

Mr. Lepel was on his feet, wild with protest.

"Pity, madam! May God forgive you! I have but known the young ladies an hour or so and yet a smile from Miss Elizabeth—pity indeed; 'tis I am the most pitiable man alive and like to be worse."

A part of Mrs. Gunning's answering smile was calculated, a part spontaneous—such frenzy shone in his blue eyes. She answered with the exact mean between kindness and warning which sprinkled hope with cold water yet did not drown it.

"Sir, I have not to learn that young people take fire easily and forget the circumstance next day. Your proposal is impossible, but yet—I must not forget the friendship between our families and if you care to forsake the scenes of wealth and gaiety and visit those of poverty I can urge no objection—though such a choice will surprise me."

HE fell on his knees to kiss her charming hand adorned only by a wedding ring. Alas, the diamonds that once graced it had made their melancholy journey to the pawnbroker's in Aungier street and reappeared in the shape of herrings, tea and bread, and other such plain commodities.

"Madam, I bless you and will say no more that might be ill judged until you know me better. But I will have the invitation sent so that if the old woman's prediction were in any way to be verified—but on that head I say no more. Would tomorrow——"

Again she could not but smile at those imploring eyes.

"Tomorrow, sir, would be a little hasty. Let us say the day after at the same hour. And now"—she rose as if to end the interview—"children, come say good-by to Mr. Lepel, who is so kind as to wish to know us better."

They trooped in—a perfect garland of loveliness from eldest to youngest and had any painter seen them he might have made his fortune on the spot by merely setting down their features. Poor Harry Lepel, dazzled and undone, could scarce tear himself away, and indeed the children clung about his legs, pleased to see anything young and merry and gaily set off in the midst of their misfortunes.

All crowded to the window to see him picking his way down the street. Hope had come with him—was she also picking her way beside him and deserting the gray purlieus of Britain street?

"Indeed, mamma," said Maria, almost weeping, "when I heard him offer dresses for the ball and you reject it I could have screamed through the key hole for mercy. What would it hurt a rich spendthrift like him, and to us it might be riches and to provide for these unlucky brats that should never have been born if——"

Mrs. Gunning reached over and smartly slapped her cheek. It takes a mother so to profane such loveliness.

"So you were listening, you minx—and you despise your brother and sisters, do you? Well, I tell you once and for all that they're worth six of you, and if you have the mean wanton spirit to disgrace yourself by taking a man's gift of clothes, Elizabeth knows better. Don't you, my dear?"

"It's perhaps better not!" said Elizabeth with dreaming eyes so lovely that they might have been beholding the silver parapets of paradise instead of the main chance. "No—it would not have done this first time. Perhaps later. Mamma knows the world, Maria."

"And a pretty hash she has made of it!" cried Maria with a sparkling glance of fury at her parent. "We have such bushels of chances that it's us to kick the first into the street! Well, go your way. He's Elizabeth's lover, not mine."

"Elizabeth's lover!" and the acquaintance two hours old! If men did but know the concentrated directed power of even a fledgling like Miss Maria would they not call the hills to hide them and the earth to cover them for protection? Not they! That sex was never famed for wisdom in affairs where Maria's wisdom was consummate. They would, one and all, aged and young, fat and lean, tall and short, do exactly what Mr. Lepel did—send a large sheaf of gallant roses pearled with dew to set off the scanty rashers which smoked upon the breakfast board next day, and follow them in the afternoon so sumptuously attired that it bespoke at least two hours dedicated to his toilet and the execrations of his valet who could but guess the cause of this unwonted vanity. Such are men. And Mrs. Gunning could not bring her heart to frown on his transgression.

"UGLY SKIN MADE ME AN OUTCAST"

but almost overnight it was a different story

"Skin eruptions and blackheads repel others. Fussing only made my skin sore and blotchy. I had given up hope of relief when a nurse told me to get Rowles Mentho Sulphur. She explained how its Phenol removes infection as its Sulphur clears the skin and the Menthol soothes and heals the sore, raw tissue. Overnight I looked better. And in a few days my skin was clear."

With amazing ease, Rowles Mentho Sulphur safely clears the skin. It is also good for dry skin, itching torture and eczema. Insist on Rowles Mentho Sulphur for best results. All druggists.

Mrs. McCormick Fights for Toga as Man to Man

Wants No Preference Because of Sex.

(Picture in rotogravure section.)

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

RUTH HANNA McCORMICK'S three pointed star—paternity, personality, politics—has carried her today into tomorrow's history.

For she is the first woman in the entire country to make a serious and a sustained race for the United States senate. She is the first woman from a large, important industrial state to run not as a woman but as a citizen against a man, using a technique that has heretofore been regarded as a man's technique.

Women are no longer a political novelty. There have been women with senatorial aspirations, but their campaigns, however sincere, have been either gentle feminine shadow boxing, just for the exercise, or they have been masculine gestures of meaningless courtesy to a woman who couldn't harm the men.

Anne Martin Beaten.

There was Anne Martin, Nevada's militant suffragist, who would have languished in a London jail for participation in the "Black Friday" demonstration on the steps of the house of parliament if Herbert Hoover, then food administrator, hadn't given bail for her release. In the 1918 primary in Nevada she filed as an independent candidate for the United States senate: was badly beaten.

Minnesota's last senatorial primary had a woman in the field. And there have been others.

In Canada, a month ago, the Mackenzie King cabinet got a round of feminine applause when it appointed the Hon. Cairine Mackay Wilson of Ottawa to the senate, the first woman ever to sit in that chamber.

But in this country it is Mrs. McCormick who, even before Tuesday's primary, is establishing a precedent by her candidacy and her campaign.

The Three Factors.

And three fundamental factors have brought this about.

First, her paternity. She is the daughter of Mark Hanna, the "president maker" and friend of William McKinley. It was this inherited love for politics that set her musing, as she sat in her nursery, on that glorious time when she'd be old enough to march in a torchlight parade.

"As a youngster," she recalls, "it was the ambition of my life to walk in a torchlight parade. And when finally I was permitted to, I walked until my legs nearly fell off; I screamed and yelled until my throat was sore; I waved my torch until it dripped on me and my face got black and burned. But it was glorious."

Second, her personality.

It is an eager combination of great physical endurance and emotional resiliency; of determination and ambition; of a genuine catholicity of interests and a talent for making loyal friends. It was this personality which furthered the work that Mark Hanna's precepts started. It sent her beyond the torchlight parade and into her father's office. It sent her into suffrage work, into the women's organizations, which twenty-five years ago were woman's only medium of civic service. And later it took her out of the woman's organizations and sent her into citizen's work, in politics particularly.

And it was this personality, plus the Hanna tradition, and the added political interest which she developed during her work with her husband, the late Senator Medill McCormick, that sent her into her campaign for congressman-at-large two years ago.

"Hanna" Is Omitted.

But there was still a third step. This is the step that she is taking in the senatorial campaign. Emotionally she is still Mark Hanna's daughter. Politically, she is much more herself than she has ever been. Frequently, in this campaign, she is referred to as Ruth McCormick, and the omission of the middle name may be significant.

She has also cut loose from any great dependence on her personality, which in the last campaign won her a reputation as a woman candidate who campaigned 34,000 Illinois miles in an open car; who made as many as nine speeches a day; who beat her nearest primary opponent by 92,670 votes, and who was sent down to Washington with 1,711,651 votes.

Campaigning as Politician.

All during her campaign she had been urging the voters to regard her as a citizen, not as a woman, saying: "I don't want anybody to vote for me because I'm a woman"—and adding:

"But I don't want anybody to vote against me because I'm a woman."

In Washington her plea was really successful when "that hard-boiled committee on committees" (the words are hers) "which hates to break a precedent" placed her on an important major committee, that of naval affairs.

Then she came back to Illinois to take this third step, the campaign on politics, rather than paternity or personality.

In this race for the nomination she isn't campaigning on highly specialized woman's legislation.

Against a Woman's Bloc.

"I don't believe in a woman's bloc," she has repeatedly declared.

Not once since she opened her campaign on Jan. 13 has she lisped a word about "we women are really Uncle Sam's housekeepers" or any similar commonplace.

She has talked on an international issue, the world court; on farm issues; on the dangers of factionalism. Having chosen these issues, she debates them as a candidate, not as a woman.

Even when the women ask her, as a woman asked her in a north shore meeting the other day, "If you're

Mr. Hodge Finds That Dirt Is His Only Salvation

Theater Patrons Cold to Clean Entertainment.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Two of the clean men of the theater, Fred Stone and William Hodge, are agreed upon one thing: That you have to be dirty if you want to succeed on Broadway. At least that they have reached a stage in their respective careers when being "dirty" is their only hope of real profits.

It is one of the commoner beliefs, strengthened amazingly the last few seasons, that in New York clean plays always fail because they are clean and never because they are poor plays.

Mr. Stone, having found his old public cold to the clean entertainment called "Ripples," which ushered in his return from a year and a half in the hospitals, is leaving for Boston and the road, convinced that Broadway will no longer pay to be wholesomely entertained, as it did in the old days of his earlier successes.

(Ed Wynn please write.)

Mr. Hodge, having failed to excite Broadway with his last two or three clean plays, has come back with a new one called "The Old Rascal," in which he drinks quantities of liquor, goes to bed drunk and wakes up to find a brunette in pajamas sleeping alongside. Mr. Hodge is both the play's star and its author.

This, I take it, represents Mr. Hodge's rebellion. "If," I can hear him saying, "if this is the only sort of stuff that I can sell to Broadway, all right. Here it is!"

The argument as to Broadway's debased taste in theatricals is both old and hackneyed. There are facts and figures without number to be quoted both for and against it. We will not go into that again.

Rebellion of Mr. Hodge.

It is more interesting this morning to consider specifically the current rebellion of Mr. Hodge. Nothing that has happened in the theater the last few years to me has had more amusing results.

You will probably recall that for the last several years, practically from the season in which he played successfully in the comedy called "The Road to Happiness," which was 1913, this comedian has specialized in what were, in effect, sermon plays.

Gradually the legend grew that, having become interested in Christian Science, Mr. Hodge would never again play a part or present a play if either failed to square with his religious convictions. As a playwright he was supposed to be tingling with messages, mostly spiritual, and a philosophy that was mostly trite.

With his pure plays, a majority of them simple domestic comedies written around himself as a drawling native gifted with Yankee shrewdness and wit, Mr. Hodge built up a large following in the theaters of the back country. And if he seldom found a hearty welcome in New York, he has enjoyed a measure of success here also and created something of a local public.

The last few seasons, when the box office has been against him, he has been experimenting. First with "The Judge's Husband," which was a sad farce, and then with "Straight Through the Door," a fairly good mystery comedy, and "Inspector Kennedy," a better than average detective play. In each of these, the last two particularly, he was pleasantly received by the press, but none too generously by the people. Not, at least, the people of New York.

He had foreseen this result, and while he was playing "Kennedy" in Philadelphia, he already had begun work on "The Old Rascal," which, he planned, would finally and completely divorce him from the handicap of being thought a one-part actor and a one-thought playwright. Before "Kennedy" faltered on tour the "Rascal" was ready for rehearsal.

Shock to His Followers.

Now imagine the surprise of the Hodge followers who were first invited to see "The Old Rascal" and probably expected another sermon on the virtues of sweet souls and the rewards of virtue. Here they met Judge Adams, a retired district court appointee of

Hays Works to Educate the Movie Critics

Founds Two Colleges to Teach His Ideas.

By Tom Pettey.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, April 5.—[Special.]—The subject this week will be higher education for movie critics. Mr. Will H. Hays, the man who has given the movies more commandments than Moses wrote into the Old Testament, has founded a college. In fact, he has founded a couple of colleges, one in Hollywood and one in New York. Both of these brain factories are for motion picture critics. Mr. Hays also has found time to found a new code for the talking pictures.

Having a sort of bystander's interest in the subject, your correspondent has been getting nosey. The Hollywood institution, it was learned, is more or less of a girl's school, but the New York seat of learning is to be co-educational in every sense of the word.

In Mr. Hays' college for critics the fundamentals of the talkie will be taught. It is the belief of the organization that the present day motion picture reviewer has a lot to learn about what goes into a talkie. It is even hinted that the boys and girls are expecting too much of young Mr. Talkie and have not given him sufficient time to grow up.

Hays Tells of His Code.

The matter of higher education for critics has been taken seriously by the New York writing fraternity and several of the critics have signified a willingness to enroll in the college. Methods of filming a talking picture, difficulties encountered in making the dialogue fit, casting problems, costs, and the quality of mercy will be taught in the new school. Its location and opening date have not been announced, but undoubtedly will be in the approximate vicinity of Mr. Hays headquarters here. There is, in all probabilities, a close connection between Mr. Hays' new code of ethics for the talkies and his college for critics. The new code certainly needs expert interpretation.

In his new shall-nots for the talkies Mr. Hays demands "respect for law, respect for every religion, respect for every age, and respect for every nation." The three main points of the code are:

Every effort shall be made to reflect in drama and entertainment the better standards of life.

Sympathy shall not be created for the villain.

The use of liquor in American life shall be restricted to the actual requirement of the characterization.

The college students, if they are true critics, will want to know when a talkie is "respectful." There also is a clause in Mr. Hays' pronouncement which concerns profanity in the talkies. "Pointed profanity," it is announced, "is not permitted." The difference between "pointed profanity" and everyday profanity, no doubt, will be made plain to the students. The actual liquor requirements of a

Music Powwow Leaves Topics for Discussion

Teachers Argue About Radio, Hard Times.

By Edward Moore.

It was the week before last that 6,000 music supervisors and other educators and practitioners of music were sitting in conference at the Stevens hotel. During the five days of their sessions speeches, demonstrations, and concerts followed each other so rapidly that it became out of the question to report them completely or even adequately. It was chiefly a matter of selecting a few high spots.

After the dust had begun to settle it became interesting to go through the records again and try to formulate a few general trends. That so many of the speakers were in disagreement with each other had nothing to do with the case. In fact, it was a healthy sign, showing that discussion had not yet settled into definite policy. Curiously, though, a number were content to state problems, leaving the answers to take care of themselves.

Radio Discussed, Pro and Con.

On one matter there was thorough agreement. That one was that the radio is here. Its presence, however, was viewed with pleasure or alarm, depending upon the point of view or personal tastes of the speaker. Walter Damrosch, for instance, told that the number of school children listening in on the course of music appreciation radio concerts which he conducts is estimated at 5,176,960, having been raised from 1,500,000 since last year. He thought that this would have been considered miraculous only a few years ago, which, of course, it would have been, and he desires to raise the number to 10,000,000.

Contrariwise, while the radio was admitted, pleasure in its existence was strenuously denied by Joseph N.

Introduction to Mei Lan-Fang's Week of Wonder

Slants and Angles on Art of Chinese Drama.

By Charles Collins.

THE coming of the Foremost of the Pear Orchard, otherwise Mei Lan-fang, who is both the Douglas Fairbanks and the Mary Pickford of the Chinese drama, provokes a high degree of curiosity. This evening, at the Princess theater, we shall meet this wonder of the orient and strive, in occidental bewilderment, to discover why the Chinese republic regards him as the apple of its eye. Until then we must browse over the admirable brochure compiled by Mr. Ernest K. Moy, an eminent journalist of China, for the initiation of the western mind into the mysteries of Mr. Mei.

Here we may find, for example, what the Chinese dramatic critics think of their favorite female impersonator. He inspires them to poetical effusions about his waist, his eyes, his face, his smile, his head, his neck, his hands, his walk, and his use of the sleeve. Mr. Moy translates their lyrics into direct English, but in a few cases he gives the literal form of these descriptions of the merits of Mei.

"The pines tower above the horison; on the jade waters floats the duckweed."—This refers to Mei's waist; it is a concise way of saying he has a waist as straight as a pine, but as supple as the gentle motion of duckweed floating on calm green waters.

His attitudes receive this neat motion picture caption: "Through the several clouds comes the moon; the startled heavens weep rain."

For his face: "Mei's quiet facial expressions may be compared to the adaptability of running water, which, placed in a square receptacle is square; when put in a basin, round."

For his hands: "Fair they are, but their main charm lies not in their fairness alone, but in their exquisite softness. His fingers taper to dainty points, while his exquisite wrists are the joy of all connoisseurs. His bones are not large; his veins are not prominent. Who, then, besides Mei, has such a divine hand?"

For his use of the sleeve: "Fluttering like a frightened swan, swift like a sportive butterfly."

Apparently, then, the Chinese dramatic critics admire their Mei to the point of ecstasy.

But He's Athletic.

His personality has interesting aspects. He is "gentle of disposition," as becomes a "tan," or female impersonator, and yet he has athletic tastes and excels in the Chinese art of boxing, which is said to be strenuous. He is the author or co-author of about fifteen per cent of the more than four hundred plays in his repertory. He is an amateur painter, and is also fond of the study of gardening, biology, entomology, electricity and machinery. He is one of the leaders of Chinese social life, and has a sumptuous home in Peking, where he has entertained nearly every important foreigner to visit the city during the last decade.

One may also learn from Mr. Moy's treatise upon the miraculousness of Mei that female impersonation has been a tradition of the Chinese stage for nearly two centuries, during which it has crystallized into an elaborate artistic ceremonial. Women were banished from the professional theaters of China by the Emperor Chi'en Lung [1736-1795]. They have been gradually returning since the establishment of the republic in 1911, but in order to hold public interest they are obliged to imitate the falsetto voice and mock female mannerisms of the famous "tans," such as Mei.

Chinese acting and stagecraft is an affair of many symbols. It is a game with a complex set of rules, like chess. The Chinese audiences, naturally, know these laws, which relate to voice, gesture, makeup, properties, costumes, and every minute detail of a dramatic production, as well as the American public knows the baseball rules, and extremely critical of errors in their observance.

To illustrate: here are the rules for beards and whiskers:

Red or blue beards are worn by people of questionable character, masters of black magic, or supernatural beings.

A full beard which covers the mouth indicates that the owner is both wealthy and heroic.

A beard divided into three parts shows that the wearer is a person of culture and refinement.

Mustaches pointing upward reveal a crafty nature, while those drooping downward indicate a dirty or uncouth person.

The importation of exotics has been a feature of American theatrical life for generations. A long procession of foreign geniuses has marched across our boards; we have applauded Rachel, Salvini, Duse, Bernhardt, etc.; we have marveled at German illiputians, Swiss bellringers, Austrian whipcrackers, Japanese acrobats, Swedish ballets, Russian art theaters and what-not. But of them all, Mei Lan-fang seems to lead the list for the glamour of strangeness. He is the most bizarre museum piece to be placed on exhibition before the curious gaze of American audiences.

Dramatic League's Authors.

The Dramatic League of Chicago has announced a subscription season of twenty-four weeks for its second year in Chicago, beginning next October at the Princess theater. Six plays will be selected out of a list of thirteen, the authorship of which can be classified as follows: English, 6; Hungarian, 4; American, 2; Italian, 1.

Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, 75 year old dean of British dramatists, will be represented by a new work called "Dr. Harmer's Holiday," which apparently has no history. Franz Molnar, veteran of the Hungarian school of cynical and fantastic comedy, is another notable of the list, with "Wolf

Month Produces Unusual Number of Fine Films

And from Them Critic Chooses Half Dozen.

THE SIX BEST PHOTOPLAYS OF MARCH.

ANNA CHRISTIE.	SARAH AND SON.
THE VAGABOND KING.	CYRANO DE BERGERAC.
SKY HAWK.	GENERAL CRACK.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

Last month distinguished itself by throwing a lot of good photoplays and one mighty bad blizzard. (Where were you, one might ask, when the latter struck you? Not particularly nice to go through, of course, but another subject of interest to discuss in coming years with one's grandchildren. If you care to look that far ahead.)

Five of the above mentioned pictures are "four-stars." "Sarah and Son" drew three.

"ANNA CHRISTIE" was accorded the following broadside from this department:

". . . It's a pleasure to be able to say that the Garbo voice is just what it should be—deep, vibrant, flexible—revealing and concealing much through inflection. It is a voice that sends a tingle up and down your spine. . . . This picture adaptation of the Eugene O'Neill play is truly splendid, and Miss Garbo, as Anna, gives a great performance. . . . George F. Marion, who appeared as Chris in the play, again gives a memorable performance. . . . Marie Dressler as Chris' dissipated and disheveled light o' love, is in a fair way, at times, to steal the picture. . . . Supporting players show intelligence, and the director has handled the production in a manner that defies criticism. . . . Though a tragic thing, 'Anna Christie' comes as a great relief after the epidemic of backstage and gangland films that has been visited upon us."

"THE VAGABOND KING" we found "a storm of tempestuous action. It is a glorious sunset of color. It is a whole June garden of emotion, thrill, beauty, whimsy, poetry, and music. . . . Dennis King as François Villon is a dynamically romantic personage. . . . You will see some startling sets and camera effects in this picture which, as a whole, will strike you as one of the most unusual and stirring productions you have ever witnessed."

* *

"THE SKY HAWK" was described as a masterpiece. To quote: "Of all the 'flying' pictures so far, it is the best. It tells a thrilling story so simply and naturally that events and people are breath-takingly real. The photography is marvelous and the sets something to get out an extra about. . . . To me the big pull of the picture lies in its portrayal of heroism—without heroics. . . . There's much more I could enthusiastically tell you about 'The Sky Hawk,' but I'll just sum up the subject with two words which I hope you'll believe: IT'S GREAT!"

* *

"SARAH AND SON" was "an intensely interesting picture with marked story value. . . . The acting throughout is splendid, with Ruth Chatterton giving a rather astonishingly clever portrayal of Sarah. . . . Scenery, such as there is, is fine. Sets and costumes are in excellent taste. Di-

Music Powwow Leaves Topics for Discussion

Teachers Argue About Radio, Hard Times.

By Edward Moore.

Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians. He foresaw a future without music and without musicians.

"Unless the modern tendencies toward mechanical music are restricted," he said, "the field of professional musicianship, whose flower is in the theaters, the symphony, and on the concert stage, will become narrowed to such an extent that finally only a few mediocre musicians will be left even for the manufacture of 'canned music.'

"The activities of school and high school orchestras will be eliminated, or at least curtailed because the members will be constrained to be satisfied with lower attainments as musicians. In other words, the members will not desire to attain a professional technic because of the dearth of employment prospects. However, the organization which I represent will continue to voice its protests against the improper use of synthetic music and, I hope, will ultimately prevent its debasing effect."

Economic Disturbance Felt.

A number of the speakers recognized what W. Otto Miessner called the symptoms of a profound economic disturbance in the field of music. He summarized it: "Four out of five professional musicians out of work; many studios half filled; concert bureaus, lyceums, and chautauquas diminishing; legitimate theaters and vaudeville houses closing everywhere except in cities over a million population; only artists of national or international reputation sure of an audience; the sale of pianos and of musical instruments declining precipitously; decline of congregational singing and home-made music."

He then suggested an answer to conditions by advising that since vocational music has reached the economic stage known as diminishing returns, music must be turned along paths leading to self-expression, and the young musicians should be urged to play for their own pleasure and self-culture rather than to make money.

This was echoed, sometimes optimistically, sometimes not, by several others. Edward Howard Griggs held that there has been a disturbing decade since the war, but that the tide is turning from the period of moral carelessness and artistic choas, and that it may carry us to a new renaissance of the spirit, "crowning our now unrivaled material civilization with true humanistic culture in art and intellect."

Remedy Lies in Education.

William J. Bogan, superintendent of the Chicago schools, believed that if people could be educated to enjoy music they would turn from jazz immediately. And Mabelle Glenn, president of the conference, announced: "Perceiving the restlessness of modern life, educators are turning to the work of bringing joy to life through music. Helping to equip the individual so that he will supplement his hours of labor with a rich recreational life is the task that workers in general would assign to music educationalists today."

Mrs. Ruth Haller Ottaway, president of the National Federation of Music Clubs, had some not altogether complimentary things to say about college music. Her subject was, "What Does a College Graduate Know About Music?" and her answer was that it is not much. She put the blame part on college life in general and partly on college faculties, but at any rate with a generally hampering result.

Writing to twenty-three deans of music in the largest and most influential universities asking what percentage of students in the literature, science, and arts departments elected courses of study relating to music, the summarized answer was, "An absurdly small percentage, or one to twenty per cent."

Reasons for Decline.

A later item in the questionnaire gave detailed reasons. The question was: "In your opinion, what are the greatest obstacles to the election of music courses by the general student?" The answers follow:

"Lack of interest, because none has been awakened in lower schools; lack of time; too much social life; crowded schedule; lack of understanding on the part of presidents of schools; lack of money; many available courses based on technical prerequisites which most general students cannot satisfy; indifference of college faculty and student advisers; major interest takes up all time; in college too late to acquire music information; widespread general ignorance of music as anything but a sentimental recreation."

"To quote one prominent dean of music further," Mrs. Ottaway continued: "'It is a curious fact that I can talk intelligently with any member of the faculty on his subject, or at least listen with understanding, but no member of that body of highly distinguished men can talk intelligently upon mine, and that is the rule.

"'Now, it is not at all necessary to urge the study of music entirely from the spiritual and mental side. The financial side really strikes the intelligence of the general public. In making a study of the statistics of the music business, I found the mass of it in dollars and cents to fall only a little short of that of oil or steel—a matter to command a high degree of respect, isn't it?'"

"Rubber Stamp Minds."

Another dean believes that since liberal arts faculties have "more or less rubber stamp minds," the only cure for the situation will be a ruling from the North Central Association of Colleges and Universities that music is a good thing. Mrs. Ottaway, however, announced that the National Federation of Music Clubs was taking up a general informative and advisory campaign to try to create a demand for such courses.

Music is evidently going somewhere, and these 6,000 educators are earnestly and sincerely ready to help it on its way. The next few years ought to show some of the most interesting developments it has ever had. There may be some help in the discussion—or there may be not—in a remark made during the conference by Dr. Harold Rugg. If he is reported correctly, he said that personality is an orchestration of rhythm. No attempt at present will be made to interpret the sentence.

Wagner Festivals May End.

With the death of Frau Cosima Wagner at Bayreuth last Monday, it need not be at all surprising if the coming summer turns out to be the last of the Wagner opera festivals at the famous theater of that small community. Those who claim to know have been saying for some time that their continuance up to the present time has been a gesture in her honor, that the seasons for a long time have been nothing to cause optimism in the heart of an auditor; in other words, that they have been economically less possible than most other opera seasons.

Her passing snaps a link in the chain of history and sentiment, one of the few remaining connections between our day and the age of the romanticists of music. The daughter of Franz Liszt, the second wife of Richard Wagner—as he was her second husband—for a long period of years after Wagner's death she was the controlling spirit of the Bayreuth theater, and until she grew too infirm with age to take an active part in its destinies she ruled it with a strong, if benevolent, hand. Wagnerian traditions had settled into ironclad laws from which there could be no variance. Through it all she sat, courted, adulated, the subject of poems and novels, the object of complete and utter deference.

When I visited Bayreuth in 1925 she was 87 years old, physically feeble, partially blind—she became totally blind later—and receiving practically no visitors. Yet the evidences of her rule were patent everywhere in the performance. I was told that for every music drama in the Bayreuth repertoire a large volume of directions had developed, ordering down to the smallest detail all points of musical interpretation, of staging, of acting, grouping, lighting, what not. These directions were the supreme law.

It was a system that had both strength and weakness. With a company of principals that would have aroused no particular stir on this side of the ocean, the performance, which that particular day was of "Die Meistersinger," ran as smoothly and turned out to be as satisfactory as any I ever witnessed. La Scala in Milan could have done no better.

Thoroughly Drilled Chorus.

The chorus was something to open the eyes of one used to operatic choruses in the United States. It had worked on the fugued riot scene in the second act until it could sing every note without accompaniment and without looking at the conductor, who was Karl Muck. With this much gained, its members could be taken in hand by the stage manager and taught to act. And they acted. In fact, the performance moved with the pace and high spirits of a genuinely amusing comedy, which "Die Meistersinger" is, though many in the audience glared at us in angry horror that we should find it so.

On the other hand, during the apprentices' scene in the first act some one accidentally tipped over a piece of furniture. But not until the entire evolution was over and the singing of that episode finished, some three minutes later, did any one venture to step out of his place and pick it up. This, it would seem, registered as a distinct weakness of iron discipline.

Continuance in Doubt.

The son of the pair, Siegfried Wagner, remains, but it seems doubtful whether he will continue the work. For one thing, he is nearly 61 years old. For another, his life has been one of semi-tragic frustration. His ambition was to be an architect, and he was educated in that profession, but through force of circumstances obliged to take up a position as the son of Richard Wagner, when his conducting ability hardly measured up to that of other conductors and his compositions were by no means comparable with those of his father's. There is still memory of the acrid comment made on one of his works, "Sehnsucht," by a disgruntled German critic, "Nur wer die Sehnsucht kennt, weiss was ich leide," though the word-play is not entirely translatable.

At the time this is being written there is no news indicating that this summer's season will not be given as scheduled. There are probably too many commitments to make a cancellation possible. What is to happen hereafter would seem to be in a high degree uncertain.

Introduction to Mei Lan-Fang's Week of Wonder

By Charles Collins.

Wolff"—a play which was staged by David Belasco in New York in 1914 under the title of "The Phantom Rival," but which is not known here. Pirandello, a modernist of the Italian drama who writes curious pieces dealing with philosophic aspects of the problems of personality, figures as an entry in the league's winter book with his "As You Wish Me." This can probably be found among the translated and published specimens of Pirandellism.

The impressive reputation of Eugene O'Neill in the American drama is evoked by mention of his piece "In the Zone." But this should not worry the Theater Guild, which has staged all of O'Neill's major works. "In the Zone" is a one act play, of use merely as a curtain raiser, and, although the Dramatic league thinks it is unknown here, it has been seen in vaudeville at the old Palace Music hall.

Other authors of distinction cited by the league are A. A. Milne, the British whimster whose "Success" has been acquired, and Rudolph Lothar, the Hungarian author of clever pieces of sinful comedy such as "The Werewolf," "The Duchess of Elba," and "The Command to Love." His contribution [a collaboration] is identified as "The Woman in the Clouds," a title which the league thinks will be changed. The Hattons [Fred and Fanny, formerly of the Chicago press] are making the adaptation.

The league's manifesto says little about the casts for its six plays, but points with justifiable pride to the acting of its past season, which was excellent. It knows, however, that Ivor Novello and his London company will play "A Symphony in Two Flats," and that Raymond Massey and Isabella Jeans of the London stage will have the parts they originated in H. M. Harwood's "The Man in Possession."

Hays Moves to Educate the Movie Critics

character in any talkie also should make an interesting topic.

Certain of Mr. Hays' critics are of the opinion that "art is long and time is fleeting," and that Mr. Hays is taking up a lot of time without doing much for art. Mr. Hays comes right back at them, however, with the assertion that some one has to look after the morals of the 115,000,000 paying movie patrons in the United States.

High Spots in Week's News.

This week's travelogue has a lot of good names. Marilyn Miller, stage and screen star, announced her engagement to a mysterious Irish gentleman and left for Hollywood. Mary Lewis, operatic soprano, came to New York from Hollywood the same day. After three weeks filling opera engagements, Miss Lewis will return to the coast to make a picture based on her own life.

Florenz Ziegfeld is reported getting ready to make a trip to Hollywood and it has nothing to do with "Whoopee," it is said.

Maurice Chevalier is in town and is spending his vacation singing on the stage. It is his first long engagement as a stage attraction in this city.

J. P. McEvoy, the "Show Girl" man, is home from Havana.

Jack Buchanan has left for Hollywood to play in a Paramount story of society life in Europe.

Talkies to the Rescue.

Last week was a life saver for the vaudeville folks and a lot of the regulars got a good workout in the talkie factories in Brooklyn and Long Island. In addition to the feature films under way at the Astoria workshop, there was a considerable activity in filming shorts.

Eddie Cantor made a one reeler between meals. It is a skit called "Insurance." Jack Partington directed a short entitled "Marry or Else" in which Arthur and Morton Havel were featured.

At Warner Brothers Vitaphone studio "Rah Rah Rosalind" was filmed; "Office Steps" and "Round One" were run off in record time and "Strong Arm" with an all male cast was filmed.

Over on the Jersey side of the Hudson the Radio-Keith-Orpheum studio with Louis Brock made "Off to Peoria."

Florenz Ziegfeld's telephone bills always are interesting. Last month he is reported to have spent $1,530 with the A. T. and T., just to keep tab on the filming of "Whoopee" in Hollywood. His calls to the studio averaged more than three a day and some of them lasted more than an hour. Songs and other musical numbers were played over the long distance phone for the Ziegfeld ear, it was reported.

Facts About Films.

Among other instructive matter gleaned on Broadway this week, the following items stand out like a sore thumb on a piano player:

That musical comedy films are dead.

That Rudy Vallee sings through the wrong end of his megaphone.

That the Leviathan has installed sound picture equipment.

That there is a lot of money being made by candy vending machines in theater lobbies and that one out of every seven theater patrons will drop a coin in the slot.

That the click of the subway turnstile has been chosen by Paramount studio as New York's most representative sound.

That the studio property man ran out of change when several hundred players had to pass through a turnstile in the Paramount studio during the filming of "Young Man of Manhattan."

That the money made by a lot of people who bought Warner Brothers stock is paying the company a lot in good will and that the holders of Fox stock are also holding grudges.

That when the curtain goes up these nights on almost any "opening" John Boles, the Texas singer, sits down.

GIRL MAGICIAN

JANE THURSTON

HOWARD THURSTON, the magician now giving exhibitions of the so-called Black Art at the Erlanger theater, believes in keeping the secrets of his profession in the family. So he has made his pretty daughter, Jane, his assistant and co-star. Miss Thurston sings and dances well enough to qualify for the revues, and is also capable of pulling a rabbit out of a hat. She recently married a millionaire's son, but she doesn't intend to retire.

The Armchair Playgoer

By Fanny Butcher.

"THE GREEN PASTURES," which has been current only a few weeks in New York and has already piled up more enthusiasm and more ecstatic publicity than any other play in our memory, was published yesterday. There is thus offered us in the hinterland the opportunity of reading, if not seeing. "The divine comedy of the modern theater" is only one of the encomiums which it has elicited. Superlatives are the only adjectives with which one can possibly describe the play, and they, hackneyed by use for lesser wonders, seem inadequate.

MARC CONNELLY.

"The Green Pastures" is a dramatization of the faith of the American Negroes. It was suggested to Mr. Connelly by that amusing book of Roark Bradford's called "Ole Man Adam and His Chillun'," which is a collection of sermons from the mouth of an old down south darky. Mr. Bradford has a new volume, just out, called "Ole King David an' the Philistine Boys." A few of the phrases are from Mr. Bradford's pen, that situation of Noah, for instance, and his suggesting to the Lawd that since they'll have so many snakes aboard he'd better "take two kags of likker" on the ark, but mostly the play is Marc Connelly.

It is all in Negro dialect. It begins with a group of Sunday school children listening to the Bible tales—and then the Bible itself is enacted on the stage as the simple people of the neighborhood believe it. God is greatly like the local preacher. Heaven is an eternal fish fry. Gabriel, Noah, Cain, Adam, Isaac—they all talk the way that every one else talks—with a rich, broad humor.

It can't be as funny to read as to listen to, and yet it is so funny in print that you laugh out loud all to yourself. There is a chorus in the play which sings beautiful old spirituals. That you miss in the book. But so inherent are the qualities of the writing that the whole spirit of it is caught in the words.

The ending is superb. It is touching beyond words when God says, "Even God must suffer," and sighs as voices cry in the distance, "O, look at him! O, look, dey goin' to make him carry it up dat high hill! Dey goin' to nail him to it! O, dat's a terrible burden for one man to carry!"

"The Green Pastures" is that true blend of pathos and humor which makes a masterpiece. It is deeply, stirringly religious, and yet it is at times terribly funny. It is a true dramatization of a great faith.

"Richelieu," by Arthur Goodrich, is a modernized version of Sir Edward Bulwer-Lytton's famous play, done over for the use of Walter Hampden and lately current on Broadway. In an introduction to the published script of the new version Clayton Hamilton says, "Lord Lytton wrote in 'Richelieu' one of the really noteworthy plays of the English stage. . . . This play, first produced in 1839, was written for William Charles Macready and afforded that great actor one of the outstanding parts of his career. The central character became so celebrated that it was re-created by the foremost actors of the succeeding generation."

This edition includes, in addition to Mr. Goodrich's adaptation of the play, Bulwer-Lytton's original text. An analysis of the two texts (according to a friend of Mr. Hamilton's—he is himself "not of a mathematical turn of mind," he said) produced "the following interesting result: Less than 30 per cent of the lines in this 'Richelieu' are Bulwer's. Approximately 40 per cent are wholly new. The remainder are Bulwer lines which Goodrich has completely rewritten. In other words, Mr. Goodrich has either written himself or rewritten from Bulwer nearly three-quarters of this new version of 'Richelieu.'" . . .

He further says, "Not the least difficult phase of Mr. Goodrich's task—and one that might easily be overlooked—was to keep, in the midst of kaleidoscopic changes, the basic vitality of the old play, the shrew building of its plot, the best passages of Bulwer's verse. . . . Mr. Goodrich has approached the play with such respect and appreciation that the casual listener in the theater will scarcely be conscious of all the alterations. . . . That he has succeeded in bringing to new life a play which of itself was dead for our stage . . . is, everything else aside, a fine and worthy achievement."

Armchair playgoers who, either forced by geography or by the desire to spare their feelings, prefer to read "The Criminal Code" to seeing it in all of its terrible tenseness may do so. Martin Flavin's best play, every one calls it, and it is mentioned again and again as the likeliest candidate for the Pulitzer award. It is a play of prison life, preceded by a prologue explaining how the principal character got into prison.

A boy, on his twentieth birthday, lonely, asking a girl to celebrate with him, going to the place she suggested, drinking the gin that she suggested, defending, in a spasm of drink and chivalry, her name, which had not been for years what could be called "good"; defended by a gentleman lawyer, prosecuted by a state's attorney who set his eyes upon the criminal code and did his stuff, and the boy becomes a number in a prison.

Act 1 opens after six years which have all but broken his morale. The long arm of chance sends the state's attorney as warden to the prison, he remembers the boy, makes him his chauffeur, and the boy comes alive again through his love for the warden's daughter, who is a gentle, quiet girl not given to heroics or sentimentality over her father's charges. How the code of the prison wrecks all of their lives is the theme.

It is meant to be a stern indictment of the political system which makes it vital for the political life of any officeholder that his own record in office should triumph over justice in the larger sense of the word. The blackness of accident, the sickening clutch of fate make of the play a gripping, a terrible tragedy.

B'way Openings

THE most important item on the schedule of Broadway premieres for next week is a musical comedy called "Jonica." The first nights have a decidedly Lenten aspect. Here they are:

"They Never Grow Up"—Tomorrow night at the Theater Masque. A comedy by one Humphrey Pearson which concerns a man who plays cowboy. It is the fifth production of the Theater Assembly, and in it will be Otto Kruger, Anne Sutherland, Claude Cooper, and Mary Fowler.

"Jonica"—Tomorrow night at the Craig theater. A musical show based on Dorothy Heyward's "Have a Good Time, Jonica." Moss Hart has fashioned the book, William Moll the lyrics, and Joseph Meyer the tunes. In the company will be Joyce Barbour, Nell Roy, June O'Dea, Earle S. Dewey, and Harry T. Shannon.

The Folies Bergere Revue—Tuesday night at the Gansevoort theater. Will Morrissey, last heard from in Hoboken, has bobbed up in Greenwich Village, where he proposes to stage another of his informal entertainments. This one, he says, will have music by Eubie Blake, who helped write some good tunes for "Shuffle Along," and will involve both Negro and white players.

Fritz Leiber—Third week of the Chicago Civic Shakespeare society's company at the Shubert. The repertory: Monday, "The Merchant of Venice"; Tuesday, "Macbeth"; Wednesday matinée, "The Merchant of Venice"; Wednesday evening, "As You Like It"; Thursday, "Macbeth"; Saturday matinée, "Julius Cæsar"; Saturday night, "King Lear."

News and Chat of Shows That Open and Close

NOW comes a play with its entire action taking place in a theater lobby. The name of it is "Intermission," and its author is Irving Kaye Davis, who has written quite a lot of pieces. At all events, Mr. Davis' play called for 200 characters when it was first written, but the number has been reduced. Mr. Woods will probably produce it in Atlantic City late in August. An interesting fact about "Intermission" is that, as with "Mary Dugan," the curtain will never be lowered. Till the show closes, anyhow.

William Gillette will end his season in "Sherlock Holmes" in Pittsburgh May 10, except for one final performance, which will take place in Princeton the following week. George C. Tyler, under whose auspices the tour has been conducted, is trying to persuade Cyril Maude to undertake a similar farewell trip. Mr. Maude will soon arrive on American soil, but he is coming to do "Grumpy" for the talking pictures.

Four attractions were removed from the New York list of playbills by last night's closings, which threatened to include Fritz Leiber. "Broken Dishes" went on tour after a run that embraced most of the season, and Mr. Tyler's production of "The Rivals" also went atouring. "The Matriarch" closed after three weeks, and must be set down as a failure. Eva LeGallienne's Fourteenth Street company suspended for a brief visit to Philadelphia. Operations will be resumed in New York two weeks hence.

"Hotel Universe," by Philip Barry, has been produced by the Theater guild, and it will be offered at the Martin Beck theater, New York, a week from tomorrow night, at which time "The Apple Cart" will move to the Alvin. Also coming along that week in Manhattan will be Jed Harris' production of "Uncle Vanya," scheduled for the Cort on April 15. A minstrel show, rejoicing in the name of "Kilpatrick's Old Time Minstrels," is announced for the Royale on Saturday night, April 19. The play called "Virtue's Bed" is also among the probabilities.

A revue called "Corn Beef and Roses" will be put into rehearsal in June by William Rose. That name means "Billy" Rose, well known as a lyric writer and hardly less so as the husband of Fannie Brice. Miss Brice may be in the revue, and she may not—that seems to be undecided.

It costs a little less to see the big musical shows on Broadway these nights. Only four of the town's productions still maintain the $6.60 ticket. They are "Fifty Million Frenchmen," "Strike Up the Band," "Sons o' Guns," and "Flying High."

The play called "Broadway Interlude," which is a dramatization of the novel called "Broadway Interlude," is apparently not to be produced for the present. Its leading figure, it may be remembered, is a prominent New York play producer—barely, if at all, disguised. The play's abandonment was said to have been brought about by the fact that no actor in the town—at least none who was capable—was brave enough to act the rôle. The Lambs club, however, is laughing at this slur at its courage.

A play called "The Solid South," which any number of producers have come close to doing in the last year or so, now seems likely to reach production at the hands of Alexander McKaig. The principal rôle is that of a decayed southern colonel, and Mr. McKaig, it is said, would like Richard Bennett to act it. The author is Lawton Campbell, who once wrote a play about Queen Isabella, acted by Frances Starr a few seasons ago.

St. John Ervine's "Mixed Marriage," last performed ten years ago, will be revived by Harry L. Cort and Charles H. Abramson in New York late in April. In the cast will be Minnie Dupree, Eileen Huban, Barry McCollum, and Ralph Cullinan—the latter being the author of "Loggerheads." Mr. Ervine is now represented on Broadway by "The First Mrs. Fraser," in which Grace George is starring.

Bayard Veiller will work for Charles Dillingham for the next two years—that is, Mr. Dillingham will produce Mr. Veiller's plays. One of them is called "The Night of the Thirteenth," which sounds like a mystery, and another is named "Rubber Face," which may be comic.

The annual prize medal of the Theater Club, Inc., whose members select their favorite American drama each season, has been awarded to Martin Flavin for his play, "The Criminal Code." The medal will be presented on April 22. "Street Scene," by Elmer Rice, was selected by the club last season. In previous years medals have been awarded for "Craig's Wife," "Caponsacchi," and "Coquette."

Harry B. Smith, author of three hundred librettos, has written a new show, with Geoffrey O'Hara as composer, bearing two tentative titles, "Rogues and Vagabonds" and "The Secret Passion." It is now being considered by the Messrs. Shubert. Its story is laid in Elizabethan England and has as its central character Shakespeare at the age of twenty-two.

A combing of the London papers brings out a number of theatrical items. Edith Day, who plays most of the heroines when American musical shows are taken overseas, will perform her usual service for "Rio Rita." Herbert Mundin, who was so good in the first "Charlot" show when it came over here, is a member of the reorganized Co-optimists. There is talk about a London production of "Fifty Million Frenchmen." And the London censor is at last willing to let them put on "The Command to Love" over there.

Marc Connelly's "The Green Pastures," giving the down south Negro idea of the Old Testament stories, is a sensation in New York—but it was turned down in manuscript by the Theater guild. Theresa Helburn and Philip Moeller of the guild's directing board voted for it, but the other four were against. Which goes to show that where play manuscripts are concerned even the wisest heads go wrong at times.

A "TOYLAND" BABE

BETTY BYRON.

PLUMP and pert and pretty is Betty Byron, who has the role of Jane in the revival of Victor Herbert's extravaganza, "Babes in Toyland," at the Majestic theater. In the school-room song, "I Can't Do That Sum," Miss Byron awakens memories of Mabel Barrison, who was the toast of the town in this show twenty-seven years ago.

NEW IN CHICAGO

MEI LAN-FANG, the most famous actor of China, will begin a week's engagement at the Princess theater this evening in short plays and scenes from plays representing the Chinese classic repertory, tragic and comic. He brings his own company and orchestra. The costuming is said to be extremely rich. Mr. Mei comes here after a New York engagement which attracted much attention. His tour is sponsored by the China Institute of America.

The performances will begin at 8:50 p. m. Miss Soo Yong will act as mistress of ceremonies, explaining each scene in advance. The program will consist of four episodes: "The Suspected Slipper," a one-act play of the T'ang dynasty; scenes from "The Exorcising of the Fox Spirit"; the sword dance from the drama, "The Heroic Maid"; and "The Vengeance of the Bandit General," a one act tragedy of the Ming dynasty. A new program will be put into performance Thursday night, for the rest of the week.

"Kolpak Must Dance," a melodrama in the style of the modern German dramatists, written by Hellmuth Unger, will be staged at the Goodman theater next Tuesday night. This will be the first American acting of a play which has been widely successful in Central Europe. The various scenes show a shabby boarding house, a dressing tent in a circus, and a night-life café.

The cast includes Neal Caldwell, in the title rôle, Harry Mervis as a clown, Carl Kroenke, Whitford Kane, Ellen Root, Bess Kathryn Johnson, Bernard Ostertag, and Audrey Baird. The play is being staged by Hubert kropoulos Secte Secret" and "Hollkropoulos Secte Secret" and "Holliday" for the Goodman.

Stage Economics.

An industry in which a penniless man can produce a play with $10,000 of borrowed money with the chance of making some hundreds of thousands of net profit, is obviously one which attracts all sorts of speculators and parasites. Like a stock market built on fictitious credit and imaginary values, it must sooner or later come to a crash. That the American theater is going to ruin we do not believe; but that it is in a phase of forced liquidation we are convinced.—Theater Guild Magazine.

Little Stories of Players on Chicago Stage

BERNA DEANE, prima donna of "Nina Rose," at the Great Northern, has risen to that position within a period of thirty-two months. Her right name is Berna Deane Wuliff; her home town is New Orleans; and she is the first member of her family to take to the footlights.

She studied music at Newcomb college, which is an auxiliary of Tulane university, and then became a choir singer. After being told several thousand times that she sang too well for church work she went to New York to make her fortune. Her first job was in the chorus of "The Love Song." She understudied the prima donna, Evelyn Herbert. Then she joined a touring company of "The Student Prince," and was assigned to the rôle of the princess. "The Vagabond King" came next; she sang the prima donna rôle opposite Dennis King during the closing week of the New York run and for eight months in Chicago. The rôle of Bonita in "The Love Call," the musical version of "Arizona," followed. Which brings her career up to date.

Molly Ricardel, who plays the flaming flapper in "Let Us Be Gay," with Francine Larrimore at the Studebaker, was born in Rome, which means that she is Italian. But her life history relates to this country. She made a stage debut with Amelia Bingham in a play called "Mamma Goes A-Hunting." Then she acted with Leo Carrillo in "Images" and a vaudeville version of "Lombardi Ltd." She was general understudy for the women's rôles in "Broadway," and finally got an active part in that long run play. "An actress of promise," says John Golden, who staged "Let Us Be Gay." He has other parts for her in mind.

Peggy Cornell, who dances prettily in "The Street Singer," at the Apollo, looks like Ina Claire and has the best looking legs that have appeared since Flo Ziegfeld awarded a blue ribbon to Beth Beri's. She fared forth from Poughkeepsie, N. Y., a high school girl with ambitions, and soon got a place in the chorus of George White's "Scandals." There she remained for two years.

Carl Randall observed Miss Cornell's gifted legs, decided that she was what he needed for a dancing partner, and signed her up for a season at the from France she appeared as Randall's from France she appeared as Randall's dancing partner in "Sunny Days," in which she was seen here about a year ago.

Marietta, who dances in George White's "Scandals," at the Grand Opera house, for the amusement of a papier maché gorilla, is almost too young to have a history. She's still in her teens, they say—and yet she has been dancing around as a child prodigy for six years. A Madame Scoville, said to be an original member of the "Florodora" sextet [at any rate one of the sixteen hundred claimants of that title] discovered her in an amateur entertainment in Florida, and persuaded her parents to let her be trained for the stage [by the same Madame Scoville]. George White saw her dancing in a Miami night club and engaged her for his "Scandals." That's all there is about Marietta—there isn't any more.

Edith Scott, who has the part of Contrary Mary in "Babes in Toyland," at the Majestic, was a chorus girl in "Big Boy" with Al Jolson. Then, they say, she was chosen as one of six American protégées of Emma Calve for a course in singing under that diva in France. After that she studied voice at the American conservatory in Fontainebleau. Then she came home to get a job as Sally in "My Maryland." Next she understudied Marilyn Miller in "Sunny"; she served faithfully in "Music in May" and also in "The Red Robe." The part she sings in the Victor Herbert revival was originated by Amy Ricard.

the northwest, who was in New York getting drunk and preparing to get a divorce because Mrs. Adams, his remagant wife, had smashed up his wine cellar out home, and he was mad clean through.

Mrs. Adams, suspecting what was happening, is also in New York, conspiring with a crowd of sharpers to beat Joe to the divorce and get hold of most of his fortune. Fifteen hundred dollars a week alimony is what Mrs. Adams demands.

The sharpers scheme to get Judge Adams drunk on doped liquor, put him in bed, smuggle a girl in with him, photograph the pair of them and force a half million dollar settlement out of court.

The scheme works beautifully. Old Joe, his Galway whiskers waving defiantly in the air, buys himself so much liquor in one speakeasy and another, winding up with Minnie and a lot of other girls, that his legs are uncertain and his mind befogged. When he gets home his valet, also in the scheme, plies him with more liquor, with dope in it. Joe, stripped to his union suit, finally rolls over in bed, dead to the world. Then in come the co-respondent and the photographer, the picture is taken and the trap is set.

Mr. Hodge at His Best.

The scene next morning, when the judge awakes, his head throbbing, his mind a muddle, to find that he has company, is one of the funniest that Mr. Hodge has ever played. He long has been one of the best of native character comedians, but with little chance to prove it playing the parts he has been writing for himself.

First he hears voices. "How are you feeling this morning, dearie?" Then his toes know, or suspect, that he is not alone. He swings to the side of the bed and yells for the valet. Also for a bracer. It is the first time old Joe has ever lost control. He is worried.

Then the girl makes herself known. He had promised her $500 to leave her party and go with him, she says. Now the lawyers come with the picture. And the girl's alleged husband, demanding his right to shoot the judge in true badger game fashion.

The rest follows conventionally. The judge, once he is on his feet and on the wagon temporarily (he never drinks when he has any business to look after), is a match for the sharpers. They tie him in many legal knots and he slips them all.

In the end he has cleared the romance of a nephew who got himself into trouble with two girls at the same time, which is the play's only love interest, and agreed to a sort of compromise with Mrs. Adams if she will buy herself a new hat "for Pete's sake."

The first Hodge audiences don't know what to make of their old idol. They laugh uproariously, but they refuse their approving applause. There is danger, of course, that the comedian will frighten away one public before he wins another. But if he will devote himself assiduously to the play and cast, "The Old Rascal" has a chance.

Chicagoans Warmly Greeted.

Fritz Leiber is here with his Chicago civic Shakespeare troupe. His reception has been friendly and his business bigger than any either he or Shakespeare has done with a repertory troupe on Broadway in years and years.

Some of his reviewers have found it difficult to account for this business. Mr. Leiber, they insist, is a good workmanlike Shakespearean, but he lacks even so much of a palpitant personality as Walter Hampden possesses, and that never has set Broadway exactly a-tingle. We have lately demanded at least a Barrymore with our Shakespeare.

The productions, from the new and envied Civic theater alongside the Chicago river, have also been found a little skimpy and suggestive of road tours and meager budgets, rather than civic enterprises backed by millionaire patrons. But in the main the Leiber receptions have been kindly. His Hamlet was accepted, his Shylock modestly praised, his Malvolio counted routine and formally comic. His voice is tired, and his body, too, I suspect, after the season he has been through.

Of his fellow players I have heard and repeated most praise for Vera Allen, John Burke, and the eager Lawrence Cecil. Miss Allen played Portia and Viola the same day, and came off splendidly. William Courtleigh, successor to that riper Shakespearean, Tyrone Power, who does not travel dependably, they tell me, has filled in acceptably.

There are, it is noted, many more young people in these Leiber audiences than Shakespeare usually draws in this sector. From which fact springs the hope that the younger set, come to maturity in a motion picture age, is being aroused to at least a decent curiosity concerning the classic superiotre which entertained, instructed, and often thrilled its parents.

This Has Sledge-Hammer Satire.

The satirical farce, "Dear Old England" [the "dear" having become "dash" in New York to meet the humor of the reviews], also puzzled Broadway playgoers. A section howled at the picture of British aristocracy living in commandeered train cars on the waste land of "The Towers" after the war. Another section found it blooming silly.

It was not either very funny or good satire to me. I can't stand satirical subtleties that are hammered in with sledges. The tackhammer method is much more effective to me. But there are scenes and the situations in this foolish play that are sure to set any house roaring.

Curiously the attempted travesty of romantic drama, which is played straight with the sex car Cinderella in love with the low born millionaire's son, proved quite to the liking of Broadway audiences, which would be hardboiled and sophisticated if they had the wit.

Gladys Hanson [I know a man who is just hoping this actress will grow large so he can refer to her as "high, wide, and Hanson"] and Edward Bigby came off best in the praise marbots with Mary Vance and Reginald Sheffield following close.

AUDREY MAPLE.

"THE STREET SINGER," now at the Apollo theater with Queenie Smith as the star, is a musical comedy rich in good looking young women. Notable among them is Audrey Maple, who belongs to the aristocracy of blondes. She is a well-known prima donna of the song-and-dance shows, and in this one she appears as the decorative spouse of the Paris prefect of police, in the second act.

"CYRANO DE BERGERAC" made a hit here. Said the review: "Those who have seen or read Edmond Rostand's fascinating heroic comedy will be impressed by the faithfulness of the screen transcription. Cyrano, Roxane, Christian, Ragueneau—move with the fine zest and feeling through the inimitable situations and colorful surroundings of Rostand's imagination. In no place has the director attempted to go the master one better. He has been quiescent, instinctive, inspired, and deeply sympathetic, and the players have responded magnificently to his guidance. . . . Costumes, sets, scenery—the last exquisitely hand painted—enchant; there are some breath taking episodes on the battlefields and moments tense, tender, thrilling, and humorous to sway the emotions of the observer. . . . I found Pierre Magnier fascinating in the rôle of the nose afflicted, gallant poet-philosopher-swordsman. . . ."

"GENERAL CRACK," we thought, not only once more emphasized the acting prowess of John Barrymore but made a Valentino of him. "From start to finish he moves in a golden aura of romance, and I will make affidavit (today) that he is the screen's greatest lover. As far as technique is concerned, there is only George Arliss to rival him. The gods were good to bequeath 'General Crack' to Mr. Barrymore as his first full length talking venture. They were kind in according him the direction and cast that so splendidly enhance his genius. . . . story's a darb, with all the sensuous accouterments the heart of the most rabid movie fan could wish, including some magnificent technicolor effects. . . . In fine, 'General Crack' is ecstatic entertainment. I'm for it."

(Now, we don't have to do this again for another month.)

SAYS "Variety":

"Stunt flyers, now in demand for air pictures, are asking fabulous prices for services because of the extra hazard in flying low enough to keep in range with the recording mikes.

"Heretofore stunt flyers were paid $50 a day, but ascended to an altitude where hazardous tricks could be performed with a more reasonable assurance of safety. Now they're asking $200 for the same work because the altitude is limited to 500 feet because of the microphones. There are not more than six flyers in Hollywood who will take these chances, and they are all asking the same price."

(Not being air-minded, $200 looks mighty cheap to me)

Music Makers Fold Up Tents in Springtime

By Joan King.

NEW YORK, April 5.—[Special.]—It seems that at the first signs of spring, music makers, hereabouts, begin to fold up their tents like the gypsies and the halls of the metropolis, which all winter have done a rushing business, begin to take on the darkened contours of the coming summer. Already two leading organizations, the Schola Cantoruim and the Society of the Friends of Music, have spoken their final words to their respective publics for the season 1929-'30.

In closing another year of substantial achievements the Schola did not, however, omit to uphold established traditions to the end. The program which the enterprising Hugh Ross offered as a finale included several "first performances." Among these was the curious and original "Concerto Spirituale," by Arthur Lourie. The work is scored for piano, double chorus, contrabassi, and brass, with a prologue for solo baritone and six brasses.

Symbolical Concerto.

According to the program annotations the concerto, which was completed something less than a year ago, is "a vision of mystical progression to union with the spring of life spoken by St. John of the Cross." It requires forty minutes for performance. Denyse Molié, a young French pianist already heard here in recital, was the soloist for the Russian composer's work. The other instrumentalists were Philharmonic Symphony players.

The Lourie work was preceded by three madrigals of Monteverdi and "La Rondine," by Puccini. Following it were heard, for the first time here, some Spanish folk songs for women's chorus and piano, also numbers by Maracco, Schindler, and Morera, the second with baritone, and the third with soprano, solo.

Present "Dido and Aeneas."

Mecca temple, one of this town's largest halls, entertained the Friends of Music in their final program Sunday afternoon. For this occasion Arturo Bodansky, the conductor, chose the Purcell opera, "Dido and Aeneas," Margaret Matzenauer singing her final rôle of the season in the chief contralto part.

The opera has been repeatedly offered by the Friends of Music since the season of 1924-'25. On this occasion it was performed with the assistance of a group of soloists, who included, in addition to Mme. Matzenauer, Dorothea Flexer, contralto; Marion Telva, contralto; George Meader, tenor; Carl Schlegel, baritone, and Paul Eisler, harpsichordist.

Mme. Matzenauer's superb voice was, perhaps, never demonstrated more richly than in this rôle and the audience was quick to show its appreciation. It will be a rare occasion now when New York audiences will have an opportunity to hear her voice in operatic rôles, since Mme. Matzenauer resigned from the Metropolitan several weeks ago, causing much concern among her admirers. Her recent appearances in Boston at the Brahms Festival given by the Boston Symphony orchestra and with that organization here at the first performance of Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex" have been greatly praised.

Gotham Hears "Sinfonietta."

Manhattan has had, at last, an opportunity to hear that work of Eugene Goossens which has been played on many occasions in Prague, Rochester, Boston, and the Hollywood bowl for the last seven years, always, however, escaping this town. Arturo Toscanini was finally the one to do the introducing of the "Sinfonietta." It was Mr. Toscanini's own personal introduction to the work, as well.

The "Sinfonietta" was composed in 1922 and first performed by the composer himself in London, Feb. 19, 1923.

Costume Ball on Zeppelin in De Mille's New Picture

By Rosalind Shaffer

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 5.—[Special Correspondence.]—"Madame Satan," Cecil de Mille's present production at M-G-M, with Kay Johnson and Reginald Denny in the leading rôles, contains a de luxe scene, that of a costume ball on a giant Zeppelin.

In true De Mille manner, the costumes are most elaborate, beautiful and startling. Over 100, each more interesting than the others, are worn by a group of beautiful girls and handsome boys.

The costume of Kay, as Madame Satan, is worth mention. It is of black velvet; the cap, skull fitting, has silver horns built of sequins which trim it strikingly. The gown, form fitting in the extreme, leaves Milady bare almost to the waist in front, with elaborate silver sequin scrolling; the back just isn't; and the skirt has two long scrolls over each hip and one over the stomach, while a long skirt with a voluminous train is edged in a series of points embellished in silver sequins, giving the impression of a forked tail with scales. It is beautiful beyond description.

Among the attire noticed on the set were some national costumes. Men garbed as ancient Britons covered with bull's hide, wearing leather sandals and strings of elk teeth about their necks; huge ruffs of horse hair on their ankles, neck and wrists and animals' horns on their heads, provided a most bellicose picture.

The most beautiful gowns were those of several Venetian ladies and were entirely of silver cloth with enormous skirts.

Gilded with Safety.

Another triumph for art! Ernie Westmore, makeup man at R-K-O has invented a system of applying gold paint to the bodies of the dancing beauties which will not cause any harm if left on all day. The first step is the application of a white paint and over this is laid the gold, which lets the skin breathe right through it and all's well. "The Cuckoos," R-K-O's big revue has a chorus of 200 so painted.

The Spanish public is probably lying awake nights, now that Stepin Fetchit has mastered sufficient Spanish in two weeks for his rôle in the Spanish version of "The Big Fight," which Jim Cruze is making. Few people know that Step is a right smart boy and his best scenes are ones in which the director outlines the situations and lets Step improvise his own lines and action. This was true in "Hearts in Dixie," in which the ginger colored actor made his big hit.

An Appropriate Name.

The Fox company always throws open the naming of a new picture to all employés and then the best title is selected. An inspired title written by one who had observed how nervous John McCormack was during the making of his film was "The Unstrung Harp."

Doris Kenyon and Milton Sills, both out of pictures for quite a spell, are doing well in the talkies. Doris is now playing opposite another he-man, George Bancroft at Paramount, in "The Cave Man."

Earle Foxe, screen villain who was featured for years at the Fox studio is returning there to play the heavy in "The Fatal Wedding." Foxe announced his retirement from the screen some months ago, when he became interested as a partner in a military academy in Hollywood. The villaining in the picture was too juicy for him to pass up, however.

Fern Andra, who started out as a little Indiana girl and went to Germany and married a baron, after making a big success in films and on the stage abroad, is to play the leading rôle in "Eyes of the World," for Inspiration, directed by Henry King. Nance O'Neill plays another rôle in support.

Seems that the story, "Billy the Kid," now being made at M-G-M and adapted from Walter Noble Burns' book, "The Saga of Billy the Kid," was one written as a stage play in which Joseph Santley played the lead, George Melford was the heavy, and Sidney Olcott was the comedian.

Animals Get Seasick.

MANCHESTER, England.—(AP)—A ship load of 60 lions, 13 horses, 9 ponies, 2 tigers, 6 bears, a dog and 12 monkeys arrived here from Germany with all the animals suffering from seasickness. Bertram Mills, owner of the animals, said the monkeys suffered most.

In Defense of Greta Garbo.

Dear Miss Tinée: This letter is meant for "A Mae Tinée Fan," so I hope she sees it. My vocabulary isn't extensive enough to tell her just what I think of her, so I won't attempt it.

According to her, it is only Greta's face which is keeping her on the screen, but I'm afraid that she isn't a good judge of beauty because Greta certainly couldn't be termed beautiful. It's her acting and nothing else that is keeping her in the limelight and even ten years on her face wouldn't make any difference.

And as for "A Mae Tinée Fan's" insinuations about you and politician's tips—I can't make my remarks too strong.

Your criticisms are reliable enough and I only hope you can keep up the good work. Of course there are times when I disagree with you, but they are few.

The public wants Greta and they are going to get her. JUST MR.

New Universal Insulation reduces exterior oven heat 45 per cent —Saves oven gas

Last summer, when you lighted the oven, the kitchen temperature used to climb to an unbearable point. Do you remember?

Of course you do. Streams of perspiration trickled down your face and back. Your heart became flushed. And your heart pounded under the torturing heat.

And no wonder! The average outside temperature of your oven at that time was 185 degrees. Think of what that means! Only on the coldest days is the water in your radiators heated to 185 degrees.

Universal has perfected a new Insulated Oven which eliminates this waste and suffering. The insulation keeps the heat inside the oven where it belongs.

Tests made with an inside oven temperature of 350 degrees prove the average outside temperature of a Universal Insulated Oven to be only 101.25 degrees. Compare this with the average outside temperature of 185 degrees for your old-fashioned, uninsulated oven.

The Universal Insulated Oven also saves oven gas. Reduces the time needed to heat the oven. Maintains a much more uniform temperature in all parts of the oven. And retains the heat two and a half times longer.

Secure one of these new Insulated Universal Ranges and enjoy a cooler kitchen this summer.

Universal In-a-Drawer Broiler makes healthful broiling amazingly easy

Pulls in and out like a drawer

Another wonderful improvement of the Universal Insulated Gas Range is its patented In-a-Drawer Broiler.

This new feature makes the preparation of savory, nourishing broiled foods easier and safer than frying.

The In-a-Drawer Broiler pulls in and out like a drawer. It moves on roller bearings. At a touch of the finger, the entire broiler rolls into view. There is no bending or stooping.

against the world court, does that mean that you want our boys to go to war?" she doesn't make her reply an essentially feminine protest.

She answers quietly:

"Of course I mean no such thing. I am against this court because I think it is the inevitable vestibule leading us into the league of nations, and because I firmly believe the league is a war weapon, not an instrument of peace. I am for peace. In my campaign two years ago I was the only candidate in the United States that had the courage to come out for an outlawry of war program; the only candidate."

And the women clapped.

McKinley Is Elected.

In spite of the fact that she has gone far since those early days when she wanted to walk in a torchlight parade, those days laid the foundation for her present zeal.

When she was a girl in her teens, her father's friend, McKinley, was running for the presidency. She was at school at Dobbs Ferry, but she begged so hard to go to New York on election night that an aunt came on from Cleveland and took her down to Madison square.

"I can see the whole scene now," Mrs. McCormick recalls. "Thousands and thousands of frenzied people jammed the plaza and whooped and yelled every time a lead of seven or eight was thrown on the wabbly screen that hung suspended against a building. McKinley was elected, and I went back to school happy."

"In my own campaigns," she remarked the other day, "I never get excited until the very night of election. O, say about 7 o'clock, when the phones begin to jingle, then I know what real excitement is."

Sat in Senate Gallery.

Shortly after this Madison square election night, she finished school and detoured around the drawing room which was then the destiny of every debutante, and went into her father's office, spent a summer in the coal mining districts of Pennsylvania, another in the iron ranges of Minnesota. She sat in the senate gallery [it was her father, then, who had the seat on the floor]; listened to debates; made digests of bills; was present at many of her father's conferences.

When any one challenges her position on the world court, arguing that then she must be for war, she says solemnly:

"I remember one cruelly long night I spent, crumpled up in a big arm chair in the East room of the White House, watching two men pace up and down the floor. One man was President McKinley. The other was Mark Hanna. Never were there two more devoted friends. But the country was about to go to war with Spain, and these two friends held different views. I come of Quaker stock. So you know how hideous I think war is."

She's Been Heckled.

Although she grew up in this atmosphere of politics, she denounces, with a deal of mirth, that very wabbly platform by which some women expect to be elected to office, because, as a child, they sat on a senator's lap.

"That's just plain ridiculous," she declares.

Her marriage to Medill McCormick in 1903 brought her to Chicago, where she turned to work in women's clubs, settlement, and suffrage.

"Yes, I've been heckled. That's where the suffragists have the advantage over the men. They know how to take heckling, or they should."

A few weeks ago, speaking at a student meeting, a professor began to heckle her.

"There's no use getting mad, you know," she has long counseled women running for office. "That's the trouble sometimes; it's hard for a woman to have patience. We're so likely to think that if a person disagrees with us we ought to fly off the handle right away. Politics takes patience."

Uses a Little Humor.

In this case she used a little humor, too. She happened to be wearing a tailored blouse with cuff links. Quickly she snapped open the links and pretended to roll up her sleeves, saying, as she did so:

"I was invited here; I believe these students want to hear me. Do you want to fight it out with me like a man?"

A roar of appreciation went up from the students. The meeting went on to an enthusiastic conclusion.

In 1913 Medill McCormick went to the state legislature for two terms, and Mrs. McCormick returned again to politics. In 1916 Mr. McCormick was elected congressman-at-large, just twelve years before she was to win the same post, and she went back to Washington, where presently her famous Sunday night suppers attracted as much attention as had the famous Mark Hanna breakfasts in 1897.

Washington, the capital of our democracy, is the most European city in the United States. Rank and title, ritual and precedence abound there.

Solves Ticklish Problem.

But Mrs. McCormick solved that ticklish problem of "who sits at the right of the host" by giving buffet suppers at which the British ambassador had no more rank than a junior congressman from one of the Dakotas. Everybody liked the informality; everybody took second helpings of the corned beef hash and apple pie.

Women won the vote and the suffrage days were over. In 1917 Mrs. McCormick was elected national committeewoman for Illinois and held that position until 1924. In 1919 she was made chairman of the first women's executive committee of the Republican national committee.

In 1926 her husband died, just as he was finishing out his term as senator, and Mrs. McCormick, with their three children, went to their farm in Byron, Ill. Life was lusterless, "but I forced myself to get to work."

Then, one day in September, 1927, she announced her intention of running for nomination as congressman-at-large; not, as so many before her had said, "because my public has prevailed upon me to run," and not with any feminine Cupid commentary of "This is so sudden!"

Her statement was staccato and matter of fact. She was running because she wanted the job. "For thirty years I've been studying my profession, and now I want to practice it."

Later she expanded that statement:

"I lived on a farm in Byron. Nobody had ever even suggested that I run for supervisor. Not a single politician was ready to indorse me. But I started downstate, worked up, and when the votes were counted at the primary I led my nearest opponent by over 92,000 votes."

It was during this campaign that those factors in her personality that we have already mentioned began to attract attention.

Shows Up Retinue.

First is her sheer physical endurance. The only woman that has ever tired out reporters in any comparable way is Queen Marie of Rumania, who romped royally through this country a few years ago.

"Ah, yes," Mme. Lahovary, lady in waiting to Queen Marie, stifled a yawn and went on wearily, "her majesty is so full of energy. She may kill us"—another yawn—"but her majesty, she never gets tired."

Mrs. McCormick, whose business is something more serious than just looking like a queen and going to parties, has, nevertheless, that same faculty for showing up her retinue by her own activity.

"I've noticed," she told an audience the other night, "that the colder the weather got the more insistant some of my workers were that it was a great deal better for me to have them precede me by train rather than to ride with me in my open car."

And she laughed.

Variety of Transportation.

Some of her trips furnish a variety of transportation. During the blizzard weather she started out, downstate, in her automobile. It landed in a snow drift—stayed there. She transferred to a lumber wagon, jolted to the railroad tracks, and went riding up the rails on a handcar. When the driver of the handcar got too cold she got off, found a friendly freight, and came into town in the caboose. But she made the meeting on time.

As a matter of fact, she has missed only one meeting. That was during this same blizzard. She telephoned Hoopstown, where the meeting was scheduled, that she'd ride a freight, but the voice at the other end of the wire said plaintively that it wouldn't do any good, for Hoopstown itself couldn't get to the meeting.

How does she do it? Everybody asks her that.

She tells them her vitality is due to two safeguards—sleep and food.

Catches Sleep Where She Can.

"I can sleep like a log whenever and wherever I can."

Fifteen minutes of sleep, snatched in a bumping motor car, will relieve her fatigue, she says. Twenty minutes? No, that's too much; that would make her feel groggy. But fifteen minutes is fine, if she ever gets fifteen minutes.

"For my food I try to live largely on dairy products."

She can go to sleep quickly, and she can get up quickly. She is no pampered candidate requiring an hour and a quarter to arrange her hair.

A few nights ago she got on the train at Rock Island. It was nearly 2 o'clock in the morning.

"Madam," the porter inquired, "the train gets into Chicago at 6:59 in the morning. What time shall I call you?"

"At a quarter to seven, please."

"But, madam," the porter stuttered, "that gives you only 14 minutes to dress."

"I can do it in ten," she said.

Wears Attractive Clothes.

But let no radical dress reformer take this as ammunition for her side of the argument, for Mrs. McCormick wears attractive clothes and wears them well; but she forgets them. She'll go to a meeting in what must be a carefully considered costume, say a long skirted, tailored suit of wine colored tweed, with a long waisted blouse [she is tall and this style particularly pleases] of ivory satin, and a small brimmed, smartly plain hat of wine felt.

But as she talks, she's just as likely as not to toss the coat on to an unswept platform and never shudder if the dust rises. Or she'll pull off her hat, without the comfort of a squint at the mirror. Her hair is fluffy enough to allow her to do this trick with it.

Another, and an important, element in her personality is, of course, her technique in making a speech. She is frugal of her gestures, and frugal of excesses in her tones. At the beginning of a speech, which she starts quietly, usually with an anecdote, she often keeps her hands folded in back of her.

Avoids Flowery Speech.

A little backward movement for two paces, and a short one step forward, is a characteristic, but not especially frequent, movement on her part. As she works to a climax she is likely to use, but sparingly, the long, slim forefinger of her left hand.

When she is explaining some sequence of steps, she uses both hands. She avoids fluttery draperies in her speech as carefully as she avoids geegaws in her dress.

When she laughs, shoulders bent slightly forward, and her head tipped down, she seems to enjoy herself immensely. Just the other day she was in a hurry to speak to her manager. She called her headquarters and asked the girl for Mr. So and So.

"Who's calling, please?" the girl demanded.

But Mrs. McCormick wasn't ponderous about her dignity.

"This is Mrs. McCormick; ever heard of her?" and she laughed impishly.

The Farm Relief Issue.

This, in part, is the personality that has been building since the early days of political training at Washington, as her father's secretary, and up to this present campaign.

Her present campaign, however, is founded, she emphasizes the point, not on her ability "to ride miles in an open car and make seven speeches, but on my policies."

One of her issues is farm relief. She urges the farmers throughout the state to give the federal farm board a chance, and to welcome any change for the better. As a minor advantage she points to the bureau's promise that it will make scientific research readily available to the farmer.

"O, I know there are plenty of bulletins," she told the farmers at Port Byron, "telling us how to make a rat trap or rock a cradle. But we farmers are too tired and sleepy at night to wade through pages and pages of dull material. More vital information is buried in bulletins and packed away in pamphlets. I want to bring it out of the bureau and on to the farm."

The World Court.

Of course, her main issue is the world court, or, as she prefers to call it, "the league court," for she feels that it is definitely a product of the league.

More specifically, she is opposed to the Root formula, that revision of the former fifth reservation, which Elihu Root, she scornfully asserts, "went to Europe to rewrite so that our reservation, mind you, our reservation, would be written to please them."

The Root formula says, in substance, that before the league can ask the court an advisory opinion on any question in which America has, or claims to have, an interest, the league must get permission from America. But, America declining to give permission, the league may go ahead and ask for the court's advisory opinion, anyway.

"Then," Mrs. McCormick gets very sarcastic when she comes to this in her speech, "America, stripped of her power of veto and given only the privilege of futile complaint, can take up her dishes and withdraw from the court. Not a very dignified position for us, is it?"

No Hard Feelings.

A pause, then, crisply:

"And the next paragraph assures us that after this performance there will be no hard feelings."

Another pause.

"As if one could legislate about hard feelings."

Then, in conclusion of many of her speeches, she urges her audiences to bear two things in mind:

1. That the United States should never reduce its army or its navy to a point where it is outranked by that of any other power.

2. That the United States should ever be mindful of George Washington's last warning, that America should at all cost beware of foreign entanglements.

Since Jan. 13 Mrs. McCormick has talked her policies in every one of the 102 counties of Illinois, from the cotton districts of the far south to the manufacturing localities of Waukegan; from Lake Michigan to the Mississippi.

To Make Radio Talk.

But tomorrow night she will go back to Byron, Ill., and conclude her campaign with a speech made over the radio from her own farm. Her 9 year old daughter, Ruth Elizabeth, and Medill, her 13 year old son, will be in Washington attending to their studies. But Katrina, in her teens, has come from school just as her mother, in her teens, came up from school, thirty-four years ago, to watch the votes come in.

Only this Tuesday it won't be the political fortunes of "my father's friend, McKinley," that the schoolgirl will be watching. It will be the political fortunes of my grandfather's daughter and my mother, Ruth Hanna McCormick, the first woman in this entire country to make a serious and a sustained race for the United States senate.

A "SCANDALS" GIRL

SVEA TINGDALE.

THE girls who make George White's "Scandals," at the Grand Opera house, a beauty show are mostly of the blonde type, and among them is one who is definitely Nordic of origin, Svea Tingdale. The chances are that when you have selected your favorite blonde from the procession, you will have voted for Svea. She's worth looking at.

Johnnie: "Well, yes, I do the aerial work."

Business man: "What's that?"

Johnnie: "I blow up the footballs."

Lovely—yet lonely!

"B.O." hurt her until . . .

HER MIRROR told her she was attractive. Men seemed to think so, too—at first. Eagerly they sought to meet her—then soon lost interest.

For years it puzzled her. But "B.O."—body odor—isn't keeping her lonely now. Read how she discovered her fault and how to end it.

A common mistake

"I thought I couldn't be guilty of 'B. O.' But I was! Millions are deceived, my doctor explained, because we become insensitive to ever-present odors. But pores give off a quart of odor-causing waste even on cool days. And others are quick to notice the least hint of 'B. O.'

"Now, with Lifebuoy to safeguard me, there's no fear of offending. Lifebuoy's refreshing antiseptic lather purifies pores. You actually feel cleaner, fresher—and so safe!"

MR. AND MRS. WILHELM LUDWIG BAUM and DROLLER.

THE roving camera's eye caught these glimpses of society folk strolling one recent bright Sunday morning. Dr. and Mrs. Wilhelm Ludwig Baum and their German police dog were walking down the Lake Shore drive, after the Baums had attended morning services at St. James' cathedral. Miss Gloria Chandler was on her way to St. Chrysostom's, and Mrs. Henry Faurot Jr. and her son, Bobby, were taking the air on Astor street. Mrs. George R. Nichols and her son, George, were headed northward along Dearborn parkway.

Gotham Enjoys Orgy of Buying Easter Array

And Prepares to Answer Europe's Call.

By Nancy Randolph.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, April 5.—[Special.]—Have you bought your Easter bonnet yet? Here in New York the week has been one mad orgy of clothes buying, for not only is Easter Sunday close in the offing, but Europe beckons as well.

It wasn't an entirely successful southern season. A great many of the regulars never turned up at Palm Beach at all, and the weather, which when it is good, is superbly good, wasn't up to scratch. There were so many cold and rainy days, and when Florida gives vent to weeping skies there is no place so dishearteningly dull as Palm Beach.

But Europe remains the same irresistible magnet. The new competition in shipbuilding has added another bit of zest to sailing, and the partisans of the French and German liners are arguing pro and con concerning the virtues of their own particular favorites, while the old guard still clings to its determination never to sail in any but English ships, where, if the doo-dads aren't so generous, and even the delicacies too few, the service is always impeccable.

Ships Vie with Prohibition.

In fact, one is hearing more heated and prolonged argument about ships these days than about prohibition. It's the sole topic of conversation from the University and Colony clubs uptown to the bankers in the financial district.

Don't think, however, that there is nothing doing in town. Belmont threatens soon with the opening spring meet of the united hunts and the accompanying perfectly glorious outburst of clothes. I have a feeling that this year's united hunts spring meet will be blessed with bright and kindly April weather. Most of the united hunts spring bats have been unfortunate with spectators shivering themselves almost to bits trying to keep warm within the confines of the turf and field.

French Take to Air Route for Touring

By Mae Birkhead.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS. — [Special.] — Interest is rapidly growing in France over the possibilities of using light airplanes as a means of touring. Already a number of amateurs in this sport think nothing of a trip to Mont Blanc or Morocco. With four cylinder 100 horsepower light planes the tourists may fly low enough without undue risk to see clearly the details of landscapes and cities.

Among the enthusiasts of large scale air touring the Vicomte Jacques de Sibour and his wife, the former Violet Selfridge, daughter of H. Gordon Selfridge, the well known London merchant who still keeps his American nationality.

Flight Adventures.

The vicomtesse is said to be writing the experiences of their recent flight around the world. She contented herself with one dress and the vicomte with one shirt which she cleaned with an eraser or bread crumbs. In Burma, where it changes from day to night in fifteen minutes, they had to make up their minds quickly one evening about landing. Several hundred hostile natives surrounded the plane. Finally the vicomte guarded the machine while she accompanied an English speaking Hindu to a village several miles distant and finally got the plane safely out.

A few weeks ago Vicomte and Vicomtesse de Sibour enjoyed a short visit in Paris, then flew to Egypt and are now spending some time on their farm in Kenya, East Africa.

The development of tourist aviation has centers in many countries around the Mediterranean. Technical devices, which not only insure greater stability but transform the plane and parachute are a prelude to organized sightseeing.

The French air minister, M. Laurent Eynac, is working actively for the foundation in the near future for an aviation touring club in Paris. The indications are, when it is once established, that it will soon have a large membership.

Americans at Horse Show.

Far from abating, the Paris horse show is marked each year with increasing interest. Since the opening last week it is daily drawing a fashionable crowd. Among the Americans taking part are Miss Eleanor McCarthy, daughter of T. H. McCarthy, and the well known Chicago niece of Mrs. George Swift. One of the best women riders is Bell Baruch, daughter of Bernard M. Baruch of New York. These two American girls are the only ones who ride "a l'amazone" or astride. The French women always use a side saddle.

Edgar H. Stanton and his wife are among the Chicagoans now visiting the capital. They are planning to sail on the Olympic April 9. Madam de Soriano, the former Ethel Blair, after visiting England, is stopping here at the Ritz for a short stay. Charles Rhodes Clow, cutting his honeymoon short, just arrived from Sicily with his bride who was the former Linda Lee Doan. They are sailing April 5 to visit his mother, Mrs. C. O. Pfiel, in Memphis before going to Chicago to make their home.

Plenty of Alluring Walks in City, but Few Enjoy Them

By Mme. X.

A FRIEND of mine called my attention to something I had not realized because a ten-dollar-a-visit doctor tells me I mustn't walk: this is the fact that, although we have some of the most beautiful promenades of any modern city, hardly any one of the socially conspicuous in Chicago takes real and regular weekday promenades. When you consider those fine footways along the very edge of the lake, both on the north side, from Oak street up to the northern limits of Lincoln park, and down in Jackson park for another mile or two, it seems incredible that our gilded youth, our fashionable leaders, all of the varied throng that composes our society, do not, as do their kind in London and Paris, have regular hours when they may meet each other in promenades.

About their only representatives, according to this fair and indefatigable pedestrian friend of mine, are nurses wheeling baby carriages and butlers or valets parading the family pet dog on a leash. Almost never does she meet a familiar face, any one with whom she can exchange a bow or pass the time o' day. This is because a majority of the smart set is playing "contract" in their steam heated houses or their overheated clubs. Many men daily in their stuffy offices when they might prolong their lives by walking home. No other great city in the world gives its citizens such a splendid chance to breathe out the miasmas of indoor life and take in the health giving air of heaven as Chicago.

No Feeling of Open Spaces.

In New York, where walking is much more popular among the smart set than it is here in the same sort of social circle, the pedestrians have to walk along 5th avenue, with its ramparts of high buildings on either hand, or along the wider, but still enclosed, spacious sidewalks of Park avenue, or else dodge automobiles in Central park. Nowhere do they have that God-given joy of a wide horizon such as we get for miles and miles on both the north and south sides of the city when strolling along those charming parkways.

To be sure, on Sundays in this era, as you can see by the pictures on this page, some of our well known citizens still take the air on foot, though no assemblage so numerous as used to meet on their way home from either the Fourth Presbyterian, St. James' Episcopal, or St. Chrysostom's, the three most popular churches in Chicago's S. P. [socially prominent].

On the other six days many of us are certainly unappreciative of one of Chicago's greatest claims to gratitude. It offers us all such a setting for daily wholesome outdoor recreation as you'll not find anywhere else in the world. Yet this is passed by unused by those who much need it. Had Londoners or Parisians anything like our outside walk along the very margin of the lake they would not neglect it as we do. No; they'd throng it daily at certain hours, dressed in their smart attire and discussing the topics of the day, the weather, the latest gossip, and so on.

They would all, men as well as women, note the new frocks and hats and other marks of passing modes.

Cards Come First.

Why don't we Chicagoans do something like this? Isn't it because both men and women are becoming more and more addicted to cards? The men at their clubs and the women in their salons devote these hours to making no trumps and grand slams. Not that I don't enjoy "contract." I delight to spend an evening at it; but not hour after hour of daylight scanning those pieces of pasteboard, invented centuries ago to amuse a mad French king. Especially is it wasting that period when the sun sinks in splendor, casting as it goes those lovely violet reflections on the eastern sky over the lake.

It was many years ago—about twenty-five, I think—that Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick first instituted the mode among the folk of the north side who were on her calling list to walk each Saturday afternoon up the Lake Shore drive and into Lincoln park, striking diagonally across the park's lower end and all meeting at the tea house on the edge of the little lakes that are such a pretty feature of this pleasure ground. Those who did not care for so long a stroll came on wheels, either on bicycles or in pony carts those elegant victorias in which the truly chic, from Queen Victoria on down to the newest new rich, used to drive.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

At this rendezvous there was music and tea, the latter served in the thick white tea cups which are to be found in all public restaurants. Those were pleasant reunions. Mrs. McCormick has instituted them since several times, but there is something in today's jazz atmosphere that does not consort well with these simple but charming affairs. Perhaps we are getting less noisy and excitable and better adapted to such rather stately affairs. If so, I hope that Mrs. McCormick and her little court will institute them again when the milder weather comes.

Cocktails Versus Tea.

To the student of the passing time, who notes how gambling has driven out other simpler pleasures, it also seems as if cocktails had expelled that social cup of tea from the daily program. It is with an effort that most Americans invite you to afternoon tea. They are apt to explain that the doctor has forbidden them to take it.

The same people who obey the doctor so faithfully in this direction will also say that this arbiter of their daily lives has forbidden cocktails, but almost without exception those quoting this medical divinity will conclude this remark with the phrase: "But I'll make an exception this time. Just a wee bit. O, not so much, that's really too much, but, of course, I can't waste it in these hard times."

O, Volstead, Volstead, why did your father ever meet your mother?

A Glance at Greek Styles.

Last Sunday the W. G. N. noted in its fashion department a Greek tendency in today's modes for women which interested the writer greatly. If the frocks depicted on that page are really coming into vogue it's going to cramp the style of many of our ornamental dames. It is not a fashion to be lightly adopted by the short and plump, nor by the tall and husky. You may say that no fashion makes those of these proportions beautiful, but the recent modes have done more for them than any previous ones in the entire annals of fashion.

This proposed Greek style may have been just the thing for those ancient classic times when ladies sat on long couches and put their sandaled feet up, careless of the fact that their toes had or had not been manicured (you can't wear leather footgear with the peplum). But neither our climate nor our inherited ideas as to what is beautiful prepare us at all for these high waisted garments, these flowing skirts, this classic coiffure, nor for any of the other features of the Grecian or the empire style, for that is what it really is.

Our mode of existence is not adapted to such a—what shall I call it?—"sloppy style" strikes me as the best way to term it. Heaven protect us from having to order our daily lives to accord with these proposed new modes!

Apropos of the Hellenes.

Apropos of this Greek fashion offered us by the Parisian dressmakers is the fact that Thornton Wilder, the famous author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," "The Cabala," and "The Woman of Andros," has come to live in our midst. Not that you didn't already know this, but it struck me that this new Greek mode might not be unconnected with the extremely classic quality of his offerings to literature. His latest, "The Woman of Andros," is so exquisite, so utterly in the spirit of the ancient era when Greece was at the height of its rarest, most choice civilization, that it is almost poignant in its appeal to the imagination of the thoughtful reader.

How a man with such a beautiful world inside of his cranium can live in Chicago, the utter antithesis of that far off era, is one of those psychological problems which, since we of today discovered psychology, is most puzzling.

Inquiring of some of those among whom his lot is for the present thrown, for he is an instructor at the University of Chicago, I find that the impression he has there made is that of a man who is inclined to hold himself somewhat aloof from his kind, and even when he is in contact with them gives out little of Thornton Wilder. Perhaps that's the way he keeps up for himself the illusion of the atmosphere of those classic times of which he gives such a sense of vivid reality to his readers.

It adds distinction to us of Chicago to have such a man in our midst, even if we don't come much in contact with him. He was, at this writing, to give a reading or talk before the Arts club last Friday afternoon. A large attendance was promised. He has certainly excited the interest of his present fellow citizens.

"A. E.'s" Son Is Here.

Another newcomer of literary antecedents who has lately arrived in Chicago is a son of George B. Russell, one of the most distinguished Irishmen of today, a writer and a patroit. The son's name is Diarmuid Russell; quite Irish, the first name, isn't it? It's pronounced simply "Dermid." The senior Mr. Russell is best known among us as an Irish poet and writer. He usually signs himself "A. E.," and is much read by the intelligentsia of both sides of the Atlantic. He visited this country two years ago and made many friends here.

His son is tall, good looking, silent, and appears to be mutely studying the new scenes in which he finds himself. Unlike most of his countrymen, who seem to find the air of this robust young democracy to agree with them, he doesn't seem quite sure of it yet. Ever since they first came here the Irish, or most of them, have not only seemed to understand and like us; they have adopted us so thoroughly that it seems as if they were the real Americans, we the newcomers. Not so with this scion of a noted family. He's not yet sure whether or not he likes our glad hand and hearty greetings. But he'll be sure some day.

Comes to Provident Hospital.

Still another newcomer to our city is Admiral Norman Blackwood, who is coming to take the direction of the new Provident hospital. Until recently he has been in the American navy. Now he has been retired by the rule that our army and navy have to lose their well trained and able officers at an age when they are perhaps most valuable, but which has to be done in order to make room for the officers below them in rank.

So, he comes from many years of experience to make this, the latest addition to the great medical department of the University of Chicago, a living and splendid reality. Julius Rosenwald made it possible by his great gift of money a year ago, with the proviso that the Provident hospital should become an integral part of the university.

Dr. and Mrs. Blackwood will make their home on the south side so as to be near the hospital, which is to be part of that splendid array of buildings on the Midway. How that fine parkway has grown in importance since the days of 1893, when the Esquimaux, Tahitians, Indians, old Vienna, and all those other attractions and side shows of the Columbian exposition lured thousands daily to visit it!

The writer discovered last Sunday a Chicago musical institution that has existed here since 1914. This is the Civic Music association, which has developed an orchestra of fine quality. The association was founded by Frederick Stock, the late Fannie Bloomfield-Zeisler, and Mrs. George A. Carpenter. Its object is to bring the best music to thousands of people who would not otherwise become acquainted with it. Also to give an opportunity to many an obscure and incipient young musician to get good training and sympathetic musical associates.

The enterprise has succeeded so well that now the organization has 800 members and has developed an orchestra of eighty young men, with three young women among its players. The society has introduced community singing and has inculcated in thousands of people a love of good music, which is one of the most to be desired tastes in the world. Its orchestra gives four symphony concerts a year. It also holds a spring festival, an annual event, in which a chorus of 1,000 children take part. Perhaps the association's best work is among the youngsters of the city, whom it teaches to know and love music. They learn and sing old folk songs and get that understanding of music which can best be acquired in early years.

Until four years ago this civic orchestra used to give concerts regularly in our public schools, thus enabling the young to learn to know and to love early in life the world's best music. Then came members of the musicians' union and insisted that these stop. Probably many of the young thus deprived of a priceless privilege were their own offspring, whose chance to become acquainted with the works of the great composers was thus cut off.

The spring festival of this music association comes May 4 this year. Felix Borowski is the managing director of the association and its two conductors are Frederick Stock and Eric DeLamarter.

Northern Tour Planned.

Last week I recorded the coming departure of the John T. McCutcheons to London and Stockholm, and now I have to announce the summer trip of Mrs. McCutcheon's mother, Mrs. Howard Shaw, and her youngest daughter, Miss Theodora Shaw, on a tour that will include Iceland, the North cape, Norway, and Sweden and Finland, and then Russia, with a carefully guarded trip to Moscow, the bolshevik capital. Nothing lures the tourist of today so much as Russia. I wonder why it is. Is it the same fascination that makes people climb volcanoes to look down into their craters and watch the fires seethe and bubble?

Really, such visitors can see practically nothing of the heart of the country they visit. They do not speak the language and therefore can ask no questions as to what is actually going on in that land of a tremendous experiment. They never are permitted to view anything but a carefully set exterior, an exterior as much like the reality as is a woman's face thickly powdered and painted, with eyebrows plucked, cheeks lifted, and hair dyed and curled. But even this is absorbingly interesting to the adventurous of today.

Did they know even a few words of Russian these tourists would not find it so easy to gain admittance. I don't think that the bolsheviks are quite ready to invite the rest of the world in yet to see the success of their great experiment.

Dinner-Dance on Tuesday.

Lacking sympathy for those at present in power in Russia, here's hoping that the dinner dance to be given on Tuesday evening at the Petrushka, that gay little resort at 165 North Michigan avenue, to raise money for the association of Russian officers invalided in the world war will be a great success! Those interested in making it so are so prominent in our social life that they insure a brilliant evening. The committee in charge of the affair consists of the Mesdames Walter S. Brewster, William Mitchell Blair, John Alden Carpenter, Howard Linn, Arthur Meeker, Potter Palmer, Joseph T. Ryerson, John R. Wintersbotham Jr., the Princesses Michael Cantacuzene and Rostislov, Miss Frieda Foltz, and Col. Michael Lasaref.

They have chosen their date with good judgment, as it is election day, when everyone will be glad to have an opportunity to meet and discuss the results of the day's voting.

Don't fail to turn out for that day's summons to express yourself as to the desirability of the various candidates. Those who don't go to the polls that day can never again find fault with the candidates who arrive at their goals, and have charge of the public welfare. By the way, I hope you all listened in on that lively speech Mrs. Medill McCormick made over the radio last Sunday, wherein she gave a talk that she entitled "The Record of Twelve Years in Politics." It was a pretty unanswerable bit of work. Had her political adversary been riding in a boat and had every point she made against him been a pick driven into his craft below the water line, he'd have had to summon the coast guard to save him from drowning in about two seconds.

Also, I'm sorry for those who did not hear the capital speech I listened to her make on Tuesday at noon in the Adelphi theater. It was a masterly bit of argument and eloquence and made with such a gay, confident air as to win the hearts of her audience. The house was full to the topmost gallery, and mostly with men. They gave her the closest attention possible, and only those who had to depart, on business left, left the theater. Usually at such meetings there is a constant coming and going of folk on the outskirts who just drop in to satisfy curiosity, but that day there was more attentive silence and fewer departures than I remember ever to have seen on a similar occasion.

From the comments heard on that occasion I think many an uncertain voter there and then made up his or her mind to vote for that brilliant, smiling, persuasive woman, ready with her swift thrust, apt with her sizing up of a situation, capital in making her points. The young, handsome Ruth McCormick, whom I first met when she came to Chicago as a bride of the late Medill McCormick early in the present century, ready to make friends, but not over eager, independent, high headed, and altogether a memorable personality even then, has now become one of the most brilliant and remarkable individuals in the public life of the country, a woman of clear head, great abilities, and unending charm. Here's wishing her the attainment of her present goal and others even higher as she climbs the political ladder!

Who Owns the Raphael?

If you have not yet forgotten the picture of Raphael's painting called "The Portrait of the Parmesan," a canvas that has been printed in several papers together with the information that it was purchased recently by an unknown Chicagoan, I'd like to suggest that this unknown purchaser, as to whose identity there has been much speculation, may possibly be Max Epstein of Chicago, whose collection of paintings of the pre-Raphaelites and renaissance artists is famous the world over. When I had the privilege of visiting it, last autumn, in his house on the south side, I noticed that Raphael was practically the only one of those famous artists of the 14th and 15th centuries who was lacking from his catalogue. What more likely than that he has now filled this hiatus? Let us hope so, for this is probably as fine an example of the great Urbino genius as can be found today on the market. To have it in Chicago would add greatly to our prestige as a custodian of art treasures.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Patten sail April 20 on the Vulcania from New York for Italy and southern Europe. They plan first to visit Corsica and Elba, those two historic islands so closely associated with the beginning and close of Napoleon Bonaparte's life. Mr. Patten is an indefatigable traveler. He has contributed to and visited personally many famous historical excavations. He was recently elected a trustee of the American Classical school at Athens to take the place left vacant by the death of Horace Oakley. He well merits such distinction for his continuing interest in and support of archeology in its many manifestations.

China's Famous Actor.

No one who enjoys exquisite, exotic, and rare acting should miss the performances that will be given in Chicago this coming week by that much heralded Chinese actor, Mei Lan Fang. He is China's most famous actor, and all who have seen him think him marvelous and without an equal either in Asia or in this country. He usually takes the rôle of a young girl to which he seems to impart a flowerlike and delicious quality that entrances his audiences. If he is half as delightful and beautiful as report says, he will be well worth seeing. Mrs. Charles Hubbard of Winnetka is giving a luncheon for him today.

Another oriental of most prepossessing appearance is the sculptor, Noguchi, whose remarkable collection of sculptured heads in stone, bronze, nickel, and wood is now on exhibit at the Arts club. He is a charming youth with gentle air and perfect manners. His work is striking and excellent.

German Beer and Malt Sold to U. S.

BERLIN.—(AP)—Germany exported beer to the United States last year to the value of $4,000, states the federal statistical bureau in its annual report.

What kind of beer the report does not specify, but an explanation may be found in the fact that in Germany the term "beer" includes even those brewery products strong enough and thick enough to be called malt tonics.

Malt to the value of $14,000 also went to the United States.

to take place at the Park Lane on April 26 and will mark the end of the winter season.

The Belgravia dances, sponsored by the irrepressible Englishmen of the British educated Prince George of Russia, insisted that it was improper for any man to attend a formal dance without being arrayed formally, and barred every male from the dance who did not wear tails.

Lots of people said the edict would not hold, but not only did all the men about town gladly array themselves in white ties and tails, but the idea has caught on so strongly that it is predicted that next winter will see the dinner jacket almost entirely disappearing from smart dances.

At any rate the last of the Belgravia bats for this season takes place on the 26th and the committee in charge includes Lady Harry Gloster Armstrong, Mrs. Herbert Brookes, Mrs. F. W. Mordaunt Hall, Mrs. Leslie Howard, Mrs. Sumner W. Taylor, Mrs. Schuyler Orvis, Mrs. Philip Merivale, Madeline Du Parcq, H. S. H. Prince George of Russia, Maj. Vincent A. Gillam, O. B. E., Capt. James Black, M. C., Capt. Jock Hanchett-Taylor, Beverly Furber, Charles Stuart-Linton, and Richard Reeder-Harris.

More About the McMillans.

It is only a few days ago that town became all bothered to hear that Isabel McMillan was possibly the Princess Murat now—though she still denies that she has married the ex-husband of the one time Helena Stallo.

Now another member of the McMillan clan, Emerson McMillan III., has startled New York by leaping, of all places, to Flushing, L. I., and there marrying Mrs. Olga Kohler Florman Miglietta at the Reformed Dutch church, with the Rev. Thomas Hanna performing the ceremony.

Emerson is a most amazing man. I've known him for ages and always though the grandson of the late Emerson McMillan was a confirmed bachelor whose interest in pretty women was purely platonic—or esthetic, if you like. A talented musician, he has long been a favorite about town, though rather quiescent for the last three or four years.

Every one knew that Emerson and Olga were seeing a lot of each other, but so far as marriage . . . well.

Olga's History.

Olga is heiress to the Kohler piano millions. Quite a long time ago she eloped with the amazing Nils Florman, who at one time was engaged to Helena Stallo who later became Princess Murat, having broken her engagement to Nils to marry Michael Murat. And Helena, sister of Princess Rospigliosi, is, as you will recall, the ex-Princess Murat who was such a good friend of Isabel McMillan's before the latter either married or did not marry Prince Murat.

But Olga and Nils didn't agree. They were divorced and Olga married one Romeo Miglietta in London. The name, it would appear, didn't suit Olga, for she divorced her Romeo and has been living quietly at the Park Lane for some time.

The wedding of Olga and Emerson was quiet, only Mr. and Mrs. Carroll R. Alker being present as witnesses. The couple are sailing for Europe shortly, where they will visit Emerson's mother, Mrs. Ubaldo Traverso, in Florence, Italy.

New Yorkers' Naivete.

You know, I think we New Yorkers are frightfully naive, no matter how much we may pride ourselves upon our savoir faire and sophistication.

Some years ago there burst upon us a most amazing person with a delightful Oxford accent who announced himself as Prince Dmitri Romanoff of the czar's family.

New York accepted this prince and he was seen all around town. Then he managed to do several things which weren't just right—a few swindles and such—and was finally sent to prison after being exposed as a bogus prince, and what is more, definitely located as the son of an Illinois tailor.

The story went all over town. Every one compared notes, marveled at the man's impudence and at the way he extricated himself from embarrassing moments, for—if you please—he doesn't speak a word of his so-called "native tongue." It was a nine days' wonder.

"Prince" Holds His Own.

But the sequel! I have met "Prince" Dmitri at no less than four places in town within a month. Every one knows he is an imposter and no one does a thing. People bow to him, ask after his health, call him "prince" and listen to his charming conversation as if he were everything they know he is not.

Is this sheer stupidity on the part of New York society, or a delightful sense of humor?

Monte Carlo Raises Money by Guest Tax

MONTE CARLO.—(AP)—Because the national treasury is lean, this tiny principality has added a luxury tax to its other means of taking money away from visitors.

A new charge appears on the restaurant bills. An odd 6½ per cent. Why that figure? An old Monagasque gave this reply:

"They need the cash, but they don't want you to know that you are parting with it."

Cat Tax Pays Bills.

DRESDEN.—(AP)—As a means of overcoming the city's money troubles the city council here approved a tax on cats. One cat costs a family $4.50 a year, but each additional feline is taxed $9. The income is figured at $75,000 annually.

Poem Displaces Clever Slogan in Berlin Ads

Prospects Respond to Peppy Rhymes.

BERLIN.—(AP)—Poets make the best salesmen in Germany.

In the merchandising of a ham sandwich or hot water bottle in this land of mathematical and scientific achievement it is not necessary to hurl long columns of facts at the prospective purchaser. Nor is it necessary to punch him between the eyes with a slogan. One gets better results by tossing him a nice round rhyme.

Hanging outside a downtown café here is a sign which might in some American city read "Refreshments for the Discriminating." But this being Berlin what the sign says is:

"Step a little nearer!
Here's the Beer House Dreher."

* *

Proves Effective.

And it is remarkable to observe how many people follow the suggestion.

A large manufacturer of writing paper jollies his public along with:

"Write to me or write to her,
But write it on M-K paper."

The underground trains here are full of rhymes extolling rival brands of shoe polish. One of them, freely translated, confesses that:

"Before I heard of shoe-paste Kane
Shoe polishing gave me a pain.
But now I must admit it's fun
To start a task so quickly done."

The state itself is not backward about addressing its citizens in verse. An appeal for wider use of the public employment bureau says, in effect:

"Whatever the kind of help you require,
We'll furnish the proper person to hire."

* *

Sells Safety First Ideas.

Even safety first ideas are sold to the public on the pound-it-in-with-poetry plan. Placards displayed in the street cars urge parents to:

"Warn the child of actions rash;
Save him from a traffic crash."

As for vendors of women's wear, scan this doggerel:

"In this year's styles the hips are bigger.
Back again to the feminine figger!"

So far the bards of commerce have not gone in for free verse. When they do they'll probably form a commercial poets' union and solemnly adopt the slogan:

"Push It with Poems!"

WHEN CHICAGO WAS YOUNG

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Oct. 14, 1871.

DEAR JULIA: I know you will be anxious for news of your Chicago friends, so I will write you a few lines to tell you of our safety. Will has been able to reach his family in Philadelphia, by telegraph, and I have got a wire through to father and mother, who stopped in Ohio on their way home from Boston.

I'll begin at the beginning so you will understand it all better. Saturday night, Oct. 8, there had been quite a serious fire on the south side and we had been disturbed a good deal, so we were tired Sunday night and retired early. About ten o'clock, just as we settled ourselves to sleep, the firebells rang, and, looking out toward the southwest, I saw an ominous red glare in the sky. I called Will and we both dressed hastily. Will felt, in father's absence, he must go down to the office, at Dearborn and Lake streets, and get some valuable papers from the safe. So sure was he that the fire would not leap the barrier of the river to the north side, he did not give me any instructions as to what to do in case we should need to fly from our house, but set off on foot for town. Our horse (Dexter's successor) was kept in a livery stable three blocks north, so Will said he could get to the office more quickly on foot.

Soon after he had gone people began to run past the house and I got little Martha up, dressed her in her new plaid merino, packed my silver in a trunk and then went out to see what I could learn from passers-by. Every one was so excited, it was hard to get advice, but there seemed to be a definite movement to the north and west. I returned to the house, wrote a note to Will telling him I should try to find some friends on Erie street. Packing a few things in a small bag, I turned the gas down to save expense in case we should be gone some hours, and taking little Martha's hand I went forth into the street, now lighted as bright as if it were day with the unearthly glare of the fire.

As we hurried along, I felt as if we were fleeing from the wrath to come. It seemed truly as if the judgment day was at hand. Dante's pictures of hell couldn't be more terrible than the weird sky. As we came to Erie street, I found our friends—Mrs. Giles and her family—preparing to leave their boarding house. Mrs. Giles told me her husband had gone, as Will had, to his downtown office. Mr. Giles owns a jewelry store and had in his safe many valuables belonging to customers—rings left for resetting, etc. Although he was ill, threatened with typhoid, he had set off downtown, to try to save these valuable articles for which he felt responsible. They had not thought when he left them that they would need to fly from the flames, so they had had no advice or instruction as to where to go. Mrs. Mead, who owned the house in which they were boarding, led the way as we left the house and advised us to come with her to Warren avenue on the west side, where her sister lived.

The little girls each had some treasure. Kate Giles had seized her buttonhook and also carried a painting, by Verboekhoven. Mr. Giles has an art gallery and this is one of his fine pictures, which they happened to have at home. Annie, one of the other children, had a New Testament. My little Martha had snatched "Little Women" from the bookshelf in her room. Mrs. Giles had packed a clothes basket, but it could not be got through the door easily, and no conveyance could be found to transport it, so we set off with only what we could carry in our hands.

In the distance I saw a neighbor, dear young Mrs. Frederick Crosby, who had her mother and aunt in her phaeton, while her husband and some one else followed riding on a wagon in which they had evidently saved some trunks. We lost sight of them in a moment. We walked north to Chicago avenue, then west to the bridge. To make a long story short, in the morning we came to Warren avenue, and the house of Mrs. Mead's sister. A neighbor of hers gave Martha and me a room and here we stayed, waiting anxiously for Will.

Will thinks that the city will be speedily rebuilt and that we shall come out of it all right. Indeed, stores are already reopening on the scarcely cooled ashes of downtown lots. Will heard today that Mr. Cyrus McCormick, inventor of the reaper, had telegraphed his wife, who happened to be in New York and in whose judgment he has great confidence, asking her opinion on rebuilding. She replied by a telegram urging him to rebuild at once. This great industry means much to the city, of course, and we are glad to know that it will continue to manufacture its machines here.

Will said he met Lieut. Gov. Bross today. Mr. Bross is one of Chicago's most enthusiastic citizens, trumpeting its glories far and wide. His beautiful Terrace Row home went with all that fine block but his spirit rose above this loss. "You will find, my son," he said in clarion tones to Will, "that this fire is a blessing in disguise." "Deacon," said Will, "the disguise is perfect."

I shall write you again in a few days, to tell you where we are to live while our home is rebuilding. We think we shall go back to the near north side eventually, but we must get settled for the winter.

With love,
Your old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Fobtnotes

The Verboekhoven painting which little Kate Giles saved from the fire hangs in the home of her son, Cyrus Giles Hill, on Scott street.

Mrs. Frederick W. Crosby, whom Martha saw driving her pony, on the night of the fire, lives in Lake Forest.

Children of the Cyrus H. McCormick family living in Chicago are Cyrus H. McCormick and Mrs. Emmons Blaine. Cyrus McCormick III. is a grandson.

Recitals, Teas and Lectures Fill the Week

Society Brightens Up as Travelers Return.

By Mildred Jaklon.

THE week's schedule of social events promises a gayer period ahead than the last few months have offered. Many of the winter travelers are back from their sojourns in the south or west and the social activities of the city are benefiting thereby.

The Arts club, which has had an unusually large number of interesting programs and events this season, announces a lecture recital for tomorrow afternoon by Aaron Copland on "The Younger Generation of American Composers." Tea will follow the lecture. The fourth and last of the series of programs sponsored by the arts and interests committee of the Junior league is to be given tomorrow afternoon also. Ellery Walter, who bummed his way around the world with sixteen cents in his pocket, or some such amount, and is now capitalizing on his glorified hoboism, is to be the speaker. His subject is "The World on One Leg."

Election of Officers.

The American Friends of China are having their annual meeting and election of officers at the Tavern on Tuesday afternoon. Tea Honors Chinese Actor.

The appearance of the Chinese actor, Mei Len-Fang, in Chicago for performances at the Princess theater, beginning tomorrow evening, is occasioning great interest in society. Mei caused a great sensation in New York City, and he will doubtless be equally successful here. The Friends of China are arranging for his entertainment, and the Playwrights' theater, of which Alice Gerstenberg is president, is giving a tea at the Casino tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. The hostesses for the occasion will include Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Howard Van Doren Shaw, Mrs. John W. Root, Mrs. William Nitze, Mrs. Ernst Freund, Mrs. Erich Gerstenberg, Mrs. Robert Curtis, Mrs. Graham Aldis, Miss Sarah Hinde, and Mrs. Helen Walton.

Cold Weather Fails to Check London Hospitality

LONDON.—[Special.]—The week of mourning for the late President Taft observed by members of the American delegation to the naval conference and by the personnel of the American embassy naturally caused a gap in the round of entertaining, during which time a number of the delegation ladies took the opportunity to attend the dress shows that are occupying smart women morning, noon, and often night, and to witness the Grand National at Aintree.

Lord Wimborne, by the way, was the only man to be seen at one of the dress shows and she displayed great interest in the new long all round skirts for evening wear which English women have certainly adopted for next summer with enthusiasm. His daughter, the Hon. Mrs. Gilbert Hay, was one of the most proficient members, before her marriage, of the dressmaking class that Lady Wimborne held once a week at Wimborne house, Arlington street, and frequently helped to cut out and sew her own evening frocks.

At least fifteen members of the American delegation and their wives decided to go up for the Grand National, coming back the same evening, instead of joining any of the many house parties which were held for this classic race.

King Was Absent.

King George, in view of the bitterly cold weather that has visited England recently and the fact that Aintree is always a cold place, decided not to attend the Grand National, but Princess Mary and her husband, the earl of Harewood, Prince George, and the Duke of Gloucester, all keen racegoers, were there.

New spring tweeds in gay shades of yellow, green, and red were given their first airing, and frocks had three-quarter length coats. Draped and tucked berets and caps of the same patterned tweed as the coats were worn in lighter weights, and blouses of satin, or hand knitted jumpers, were popular.

One of the gayest parties for this race was that given by the duke of Westminster and his new duchess, formerly Miss Loelia Ponsonby, who came back from their honeymoon at Mimizan a few days before to get ready Eaton hall for the occasion. This was the first public appearance of the youthful duchess since her romantic marriage.

To return to the week of mourning for Mr. Taft, which ended with a beautiful service at St. Margaret's church, Westminster, with Canon Carnegie officiating, there were two receptions later that week, to which most of the delegates contrived to go, both being held in lovely, ancient surroundings.

The Hon. Mrs. Fitzroy, wife of the speaker of the house of commons, was at home at Speaker's house to members of both houses of parliament, members of the diplomatic corps, and of the five power conference delegations, and the welcome innovation of dancing took place in the state drawing room to a most excellent band.

Reception for Delegates.

The treasurer, Justice Horridge, and the masters of the bench of the Middle temple were hosts at a reception that same evening to the delegates in their Elizabethan hall, of which they are so justly proud. None of the other Inns of Court can boast of such a carved oaken roof, which has been suffering from the attacks of the terrible death-watch beetle and causing its owners some anxiety. Refreshments were set out on the long oaken tables where daily men and now women barristers and students lunch and dine, sitting on benches without backs.

Members of the Liberal party council were given the opportunity to meet the American delegates at a reception held by Mr. and Mrs. Runciman in their house in Westminster, which is two charming little Queen Anne houses skillfully combined into one. Mrs. Runciman is a former M. P., but retired in favor of her husband at the last election.

Briton to Visit Washington.

An interesting visitor to Washington will be Sir Lionel Earle, permanent secretary of the office of works, who, with Lady Earle, is sailing soon on an official visit. Sir Lionel undertakes the work of keeping in order the royal residences as well as of superintending the planting of all flowers in the royal parks, such as Hyde park, Kensington gardens, and Richmond park, and it is part of his duties, also, to make tours of England and Scotland to see if castles and monuments of historical interest are being properly looked after.

Mrs. Dawes, wife of the American ambassador, was one of the guests at a luncheon given at the American Women's club in honor of Lady Isabella Howard, wife of Sir Esme Howard, the recently retired English ambassador at Washington. The guests included Viscountess Bryce and Mrs. Philip Snowden and about a hundred members of the club.

ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN.

The East Bay club in Berkeley, Cal., is the only club of its kind in the United States for blind women. All officers are blind.

According to a statement issued by the United States women's bureau, many married women are forced into industry by their husbands' low wages.

HARD OF HEARING ARE AIDED BY LEAGUE

Founded in '16, It Carries on Valuable Work

Theaters Asked to Co-operate with Deaf Patrons.

By Roberts Nangle.

THE Chicago League for the Hard of Hearing, since its incorporation under the laws of the state of Illinois in 1916, has been working steadily for relief of persons who suffer from total or partial deafness. In order to encourage the hard of hearing to feel that they need not regard themselves as outsiders in the conventional social and economic relations of the rest of the world, the league has promoted an extensive study of lip reading, has planned and organized recreational activities, conducts a free employment service, and is carrying on through the courtesy of the board of education and its board of otologists a series of hearing tests of children in the public schools.

In connection with this admirable program, the league has recently organized a hearing aids committee to launch a project, which, if successful, promises to be a means of bringing a large share of enjoyment to the deaf. This committee's plan calls for the installation of hearing aids in the churches and theaters of Chicago. There are 300,000 deafened people in the city, many of whom would be eager to attend both theaters and churches if these institutions would equip some of their seats with hearing apparatus.

Hopes to Get 25,000 Names.

The league hopes to obtain 25,000 signatures of interested people for a petition to this effect and has asked for coöperation from both men's and women's clubs. The first tangible result of this campaign has been the announcement by Mortimer H. Singer of the Keith-Orpheum circuit that hearing aids will be installed in the near future in the State-Lake theater. If the experiment proves successful in the State-Lake, all of the R. K. O. theaters in this vicinity will be similarly equipped.

The Chicago Laryngological and Otological society is assisting the hearing aids committee in this work. Mrs. Louis Pelton is chairman of the board, Miss Abby Hosmer, vice chairman, and Mrs. Charles N. Pease, secretary. The associated societies include the Chicago Woman's Aid, the Chicago Woman's club, the Woman's City club, the Illinois Club for Catholic Women, the National Council of Jewish Women, the Woman's Auxiliary of the Chicago Medical society, the first district of the Illinois State Nurses association and the Chicago Teachers' federation.

Membership Drive Is On.

The league is affiliated with the American Federation of Organizations for the Hard of Hearing, with headquarters in Washington, D. C. Membership is not restricted to the hard of hearing. Any one interested may become a member or contributor. The annual membership drive is now being conducted.

National hearing week will be celebrated May 1-8 with a varied program, details of which are not yet complete. Open house will be observed at the league rooms at 64 East Lake street during the week and special events are being planned for each day.

CLUB ETHICS

"JOINT committees may be a good thing, if they work out," commented the community welfare chairman of the East Brook Woman's club. "But they don't always work out."

"You must be thinking of the proposed joint committee on community welfare work," guessed the committee secretary. "I'm anxious to hear about that."

"I went to the meeting yesterday," the chairman reported, "and so did delegations from every other organization in town working for the welfare of our community."

"That was a propitious start, any way," voiced the committee treasurer.

"The trouble was that about every delegates came to the meeting with the intention of making her own club's work the main object of the joint committee," continued the chairman.

"Some peoples' idea of coöperation," put in the committee secretary.

"The Sunshine league delegate was bound we should concentrate on the Lake street infant welfare station; the Sorosis club delegate insisted that the Children's hospital be the big work, and the Mothers' club delegate was sure her club wouldn't join unless we made the more play parks move our objective."

"About as flexible as some of the delegates to the arms conference," suggested the committee treasurer. "How did it end?"

"They appointed a committee of three to consider the matter and report at the next meeting. I'm chairman."

"We had a similar case in the city I came from," remembered the new member. "We spent days arguing over the various projects insisted upon. Then some one proposed a community chest, which was a new idea to us. Our troubles were over. Every delegate lined up for it."

"I guess that's our only solution," sighed the chairman, "to find a new common cause that we'll all support."

Question.

"We juniors sometimes think we are not allowed enough freedom. How much should we have in carrying on our organization?—JUNIOR.

Reply.

As much as you can use to the advantage of all concerned.

Goodman Stages Membership Drive

Civic Theater Now Ready for Co-Operation

Sets Goal of 10,000 Subscribers.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE Goodman theater is the center just now of a great deal of altruistic effort. It is conducting a drive for supporting members, and it is offering an exceptional opportunity to every one in Chicago who has even the remotest interest in things theatrical or civic.

As is so well known that repetition is farcical, the Goodman is the theater to the east of the Art institute and is connected with the Art institute, physically as well as spiritually. It was given to the people of Chicago by Mr. and Mrs. William O. Goodman in memory of their son, Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, the playwright, who died while in service during the war.

The Goodman was opened in October of 1925 under the direction of Thomas Wood Stevens. It is, to emphasize a relationship already touched upon in the preceding paragraph, a unit of the Art institute, the first museum in this country to recognize the idea of a civic theater as a necessity equal in importance to other forms of art activity. At the beginning of the undertaking a policy of careful and substantial growth was determined upon. Following resolutely along lines laid out for it, the Goodman has developed rapidly from a small, almost private affair, to its present strong position as one of the leading professional repertory theaters in the country.

Ready for Independence.

The final step is now about to be taken. The Goodman is ready to stand side by side with the Art institute, independently stable, not a drag or a liability but an asset of incredible value. The Art institute has for five years generously helped the theater. Mr. and Mrs. Goodman undoubtedly stand ready to back it further. This perfect playhouse, to the memory of a Chicago writer and built by a Chicago poet, Howard Shaw, the architect, has grown too big for private backing. It is filling a public need; it is becoming a public property; it stands now eager for a public coöperation.

In the pamphlet about the Goodman we read that the Art institute will guarantee the Goodman theater assistance in an elaborate program of expansion designed to give Chicago one of the outstanding producing theaters of America. The Goodman in return must secure direct evidence of public coöperation to the extent of 10,000 subscribers for the coming season. Here comes in the generous nature of the opportunity—10,000 subscribers for the coming season at less than box office prices.

Magnificent Chance.

It is a magnificent chance to do something for art, the drama, Chicago, and yourself at a small expense. The Goodman company is good. The settings are beautiful and the costumes perfect. Individual members of the company have made their mark. They act well together and they show up well alone. We have a gorgeous adventure going on here right under our noses—and too few people are awake to it. The Goodman is sounding a trumpet to stir us to a new sense of duty and romance. A pleasurable jaunt, this that they have prepared, the actors for crew and the audience for passenger! Can we possibly play them false?

This practical information tells you exactly how the proposition stands: Subscription memberships for the eight productions (season 1930-1931) are now available at $14 for the first ten rows and $10 for the remaining nine rows. The seats are for any evening from Tuesday to Sunday and the Friday matinée of the first two weeks of each play. Assignments of location will be made strictly in the order of receipt. A deposit of 25 per cent must accompany each order or be paid on receipt of bill. The balance is payable Sept. 15. An exchange bureau will be maintained for the convenience of subscribers who wish to exchange their regular tickets for another performance.

"AN EARLY FASHION PLATE," from the collection of Mrs. Helen Benton Minnich of Minneapolis, on display in the Children's Museum at the Art institute. The illustration is out of the "Journal des Demoiselles," dated February, 1870. Mrs. Minnich has made an interesting thing of this fancy of hers for children's dress. The exhibit is charming.

A Japanese doll in the center of the room adds to the value of the show from a little girl's point of view and so, too, do the tiny toys contributed by Miss Macbeth and the "Running Colt" and "A Rabbit," the gifts of Charles H. Worcester and Frank G. Logan, respectively. The exhibition will continue into May.

At the Chicago Galleries.

There are a number of interesting exhibitions in the various galleries this week. Possibly one can get the most pleasure from the Chicago Galleries association exhibit and the Arts club show. The Chicago Galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue, offer paintings by James Topping, Theodore J. Morgan, and Holger W. Jensen. The Arts club offers contemporary Chinese paintings, sculpture by Isamu Noguchi, paintings by Pablo Picasso, and gouaches by Ossip Zadkine.

Of all these, two stand out. Together, the paintings by Topping and the sculpture by Noguchi are a noteworthy achievement. James Topping is a Chicago painter, and few people interested in landscape are ignorant of his name. He has a genius for great skies and rolling country. The wind is often a factor in the atmosphere he so breathlessly contrives. Wind, clouds, sun and shadow, field, soft rolling hills and trees—those are his subjects. As clearly as glass rings to a sudden blow do his paintings ring against your consciousness. They are virile, independent, masculine canvases which admit no philandering, no ineptitude, no plagiarizing, no weakness. They are clean-cut, definite, brilliant examples of a contemporary art that stands by its standards, is itself, and steadily grows bigger.

The Noguchi Sculpture.

We have the same resonant quality in the Noguchi sculpture that the Topping landscapes boast. Here again there is an individual interpretation, a clear intelligence, and a dominating simplicity at work. Noguchi, I have been told, is the son of a Japanese father and a Scotch mother. The Scotch explains a great deal of the robustness and sincerity of his sculpture. In the circle of his portrait heads you feel distinctly the flow of conflicting personalities. It is a great thing he has done! These portraits live. They reveal the several characters to you as though you met the people face to face. The longer you study the various heads the more extraordinary they become.

The contemporary Chinese paintings at the Arts club do not impress one with more than a feeling for beauty and a delicacy of touch. They are not particularly important, except as illustrative of the fact that the Chinese artist of today has not yet found himself.

The Picasso paintings are already an old story. They are, for all their bizarre notes, commonplace. The most striking is the "Guitariste" lent by the Art institute. The "Dinard" painted two years ago is a gay frivolous trifle, rather amusing. The "Supper Party," dated 1913, is a bit gruesome, a little stressed in its macabre use of bilious green and yellow.

Ossip Zadkine is a colorist. He has a certain technique that is entertaining. His still life arrangements have an undoubted delicacy of line and color. His figure studies are banal. His painting of horses is atrocious. He abuses them in the same way that he mocks the female form. Is Zadkine a woman hater? Or is this his idea of a compliment to woman to make her with a long drawn out torso, short and clumsy legs, stubby feet, thick neck, and insipid head? He monotonously harps on this one view of woman until his figure studies grow boring. There is never a letup in the ribald beat of his conception.

Two Pleasing Exhibits.

Holger Jensen and Theodore Morgan, who complete the exhibition at the Chicago Galleries, have a story worth telling. Mr. Jensen has a number of livable and likable landscapes. The "Rock River at Grand Detour" is an attractive canvas, summery and warmly green. "The Old Rock Crusher" is fine and "The Fish Boat Arrives" is another picture with an alive and restless feel to it. His four water colors are thoroughly delightful.

Theodore Morgan is, slightly, an impressionist. Most vivid and most picturesque of his paintings is "Glimpse of the Bay." "Gossips" is chiefly a white house and pink roofs with the figures which give title to the painting, the most insignificant detail in a really charming color scheme. "Making the Turn" is richly flavored with the romance that seems an inevitable part of any tree lined canal. "Road Across the Dunes" is a broad reach of green, the more impressive the farther one retreats from it. "Sails" is a night painting, somberly beautiful. "Corpus Christi Bay" is decorative and colorful.

Zorn and Whistler Etchings.

The Knoedler galleries have on exhibit etchings by Zorn and Whistler, Lepere and McBay, which are fine. In another room they have a curious flow of unintelligible and futile chatter taking up wall space. Rifka Angel, with nothing to say, chitters profusely. The synopsis of her life that prefaces her catalog impressively gives the reason for her being. She is the "discovery" of Ganso and Matulka, and were I these gentlemen I should put her right back where I found her. She is dangerous. Brushes in her hands are dangerous. She is positively wicked with a box of paints. She should not be allowed alone with a smock. It's frightful, this jumble of her manufacture. It's incredible. But more incredible is it that the public should be given it to look at in a serious gallery. If Rifka Angel wants to play with a studio, let her play. Let her friends play with her, but for heaven's sake keep her out of the way of every one mentally over the age of three.

Ramon Shiva is enlivening two rooms in the Knoedler gallery. His first room is given up to paintings in his old manner; the second room illustrates his new technique. His biggest loss is beauty; his greatest gain, strength. The "Nocturnes" in the first room are lovely. The "Easter Lilies" in that room is an intriguing canvas. In the second room the big interiors with the full length negress lying on a couch are provocative, stubbornly simplified, heavily realistic. They are well done, perfectly good exhibition pieces, but there is no depth, no spiritual quality to lighten and quiken them. It is entirely surface work, a tour de force to prove he can do it. The abstractions in this room are facile and flimsy. The symbolic "Chicago" is well drawn, the conception not new; it is rhythmic but only partially satisfying.

News of Art and Artists.

The Walden-Dudensing galleries opened an exhibit of paintings by Buk last Tuesday to run the month.

The South Side Art association opened a member's exhibition of water colors, etchings and sculpture last week to continue through April.

Josephine L. Reichmann has a one man show of paintings at the Cordon club. The exhibit opened Friday and will contiue to April 25.

The North Shore Art league opened its annual exhibition of work by members in the rooms of Community house, Winnetka, last Thursday evening. The exhibit will continue until May.

The Chicago Antiques exposition will be held at the Drake hotel from April 21 to April 25 and promises to be a most interesting and valuable exhibit.

An unusual exhibition will be placed on view in the main hall of Burnham library, Art institute, this coming week. It will consist of views of historical bridges collected by Charles S. Whitney, consulting engineer for Milwaukee.

The brilliant water color exhibit in the east wing galleries of the Art institute is meeting with great success. It is one of the best exhibits we have seen there this year. Decorative, colorful, varied—all of these words suit it. There is something there for every taste and every eye. It is a remarkably able and popular show.

Germany's Winter Causes Number of Freakish Events

BERLIN.—(AP)—Cat's fur was shorter, tailors were poorer, ice was thinner, and pneumonia scarcer in Germany this winter, the mildest on record for one hundred years and immediate successor to the coldest winter for a like period.

News of the cat fur crisis came from a pet farm near here which specializes in Angora and Persian felines. Due to the mild weather farm managers said their tabbies did not grow the luxurious coats for which they are famous.

The wail from the tailors arose in all Germany because so few people bought that winter coat. Youngsters bewailed the lack of skating, but nobody kicked about the scarcity of pneumonia.

This King Is Much Decorated

STOCKHOLM.—[U. P.]—The announcement of the impending conclave in Barcelona of the Order of the Golden Fleece, the first to be held since the days of Emperor Charles V. in the sixteenth century, has recalled here that King Gustaf of Sweden, who is a member of the order, is one of the most decorated sovereigns of the world.

In addition to the Golden Fleece he holds the following foreign decorations: The Royal Abyssinian Order of Salomo, the House order, Fidelitas, of the grand duchy of Baden; the Berthold I. of Zaehringen order; the Royal Bavarian St Hubert order; the Royal Belgian Leopold order; the Royal Danish Elephant order and the Dannebrog order; the Estonian Liberty Cross; the White Rose of Finland; the French Legion of Honor; the Royal Greek Order of the Savior; the grand duchy of Hessen Ludvig order; the imperial and royal Hohenzollern House orders, and the Royal Intalian Annunziata order.

Also the imperial Japanese Chrysanthemum order with chain; the grand duchy of Mecklenburg House order; the Ducal Nassau House order; the Golden Lion; the Royal Netherland Lion order; the Royal Norwegian Loeve order and the St. Olav order; the grand duchy of Oldenburg and Merit order with chain; the Royal Persian House order; the Peruvian Solo order with diamonds; the Polish White Eagle order; the Royal Portuguese Kristi de Aviz order, as well as the Sao Thiago order and the Tower and Sword Order of Portugal; the Royal Prussian Black Eagle order with chain and the Red Eagle order.

Also the Royal Rumanian Star and Crown order and King Carol I. order; the Imperial Russian St. Andreas order, the St. Alexander Nevsky order, the White Eagle order, the St. Anne order and the St. Stanislai order; the Emperor Nikolai II. Coronation medal and the Memorial medal over Emperor Alexander II.; the Royal Saxonian Rautenkrone order; the ducal Saxonian Ernestine House order; the grand duchy Saxonia Weimar White Falcon order; the Royal Siamese Mahi Chakri order; the Imperial English Order of the Garter and Order of the Bath and the Victoria Chain; the Spanish Turkish Imtiaz order and the Osmanieh order; the Royal Hungarian St. Stephan order; the Royal Württemberg Crown order; His Highness the Prince of Monaco order, St. Carlo; the Royal English Memorial medal and Coronation medal, and Emperor William's Memorial medal.

In addition to this King Gustaf is automatically grand master of all Swedish orders, has many foreign royal memorial medals and is honorary member of the Johannite order.

Successful Career of Laundry Fisher Curtailed by Jail

MARSEILLES.—(AP)—Fishing for laundry that was not his own brought a comfortable living to Antoine Monti for several months, but caused him also to go to jail.

Householders in the tenement district here hang the family washing out of windows on cords across the streets.

Monti, with a fishing pole over his shoulder and a covered basket on his back, picked off the best linen, stuffed it in his basket, and wandered on.

Farmer's Field Disappears.

GLEISSENFELD, Austria.—(AP)—When a farmer's field dropped out of sight here scientists decided it had gone through the roof of a cave in which were thrown the bodies of Janisarries who attacked Vienna in the 17th century. The pit was filled with human bones and dust.

Famous Luther Bible of 1530 Is Located at Lena

Silas Clay Family the Owners.

By the Rev. John Evans.

IN 1530 A. D. a visitor to Baden Baden, Germany, might pass through the public square and discover a group of people gathered about a large book. He would discover that by paying a small sum of money he would be permitted to read the book for a short period of time. All day long, it is said, people would approach the owner of the book and pay the required fee and read during his allotted time.

The book was a Luther Bible. It was revealed to THE TRIBUNE last week that the identical Luther Bible used in the public square of Baden Baden, and published in 1530, is now in the possession of the Silas Clay family of Lena, Ill. The book has been in the possession of the same family through the generations since its publication.

According to Mr. Clay's description of the historic edition, the Baden Baden Bible is 17 inches long, 12 inches wide and 7 inches thick, and is bound in leather with brass corners. He stated that it is still in excellent condition despite its 400 years. It is written partly in Latin and partly in German.

Bigamy Legal in Germany If Planned Right

Recognition of Soviet Law Makes It Possible.

BERLIN.—[U. P.]—Bigamy is not a punishable offense in Germany if one knows how to go about it.

This has been definitely established by the Berlin courts in the case of a shoe factory official named Schultzenstein.

In 1903 Schultzenstein married a German girl and lived with her for 20 years. Albeit, the marriage was not a happy one and in 1923, after his wife had attacked him with a carving knife, he left her without going through the formality of obtaining a divorce. In 1926 his company sent him to Leningrad to study shoe manufacturing methods there. In Leningrad he met a young lady from Libau, with whom he fell in love. They set up housekeeping together and registered themselves under the Russian laws as man and wife.

Bigamy Returns to Germany.

A year or two later, his Russian mission ended, Schultzenstein returned to Berlin, bringing with him his second wife. In compliance with German law they reported to the police upon their arrival, announcing themselves as Herr and Frau Schultzenstein. After a few months the first wife discovered her successor. She laid the facts in the case before the Berlin prosecutor. Schultzenstein was arrested and charged with bigamy.

At the trial a prominent lawyer, who is also an authority on foreign laws, testified as "a friend of the court" that an alleged offense committed in Russia was punishable in Germany only when it was also punishable according to Russian law.

Status in Doubt.

In the new Russian criminal code there is no penalty for bigamy, the only relief available to the offended party being the privilege of bringing civil suit for the purpose of having one or the other of the marriages declared invalid. Moreover, unlike most other countries, Germany recognizes Russian law. Hence Schultzenstein could not be punished by a German court.

Having apparently no alternative but to accept this view, the court acquitted Schultzenstein and ordered the state treasury to reimburse him for the expenses he incurred in defending himself.

Meanwhile it remains unclear as to whether he has two lawful wives or only one.

Rumanian Prince Legally Protected from Criticisms

BUCHAREST.—(AP)—A new law forbidding public criticisms of members of the government has raised a big stir in Rumania. It is understood that the chief sponsor of the measure was Prince Nicholas, one of the regents, whose assaults on drivers of vehicles who blocked progress of his automobile made a lot of talk.

One writer who was especially outspoken was sentenced to two months' imprisonment. But the prince, who visited America with his mother, Queen Marie, and his sister, Princess Ileana, a few years ago, thought that this was not sufficiently severe.

More drastic penalties are imposed by the new statute. Its passage brought newspaper comment that it might even be used to prevent editorial opinions on acts of dominant political parties, and Grigore Iunian, minister of justice, resigned from the cabinet when it was enacted over his protest.

In some quarters it was said that the statute might cause a split in the coalition of the National Peasant party and the Transylvania Nationalists. The peasants are opposed to the law, a humble carter having been one of the victims of Prince Nicholas' temper. If they follow Iunian's lead the cabinet of Juliu Maniu will be in a perilous position.

U. S. Training Aids Chinese in Proving Racial Superiority

AMOY, China.—(AP)—Miss E. T. Chen, graduate of Columbia university, is trying to discover the chief mental differences between the Chinese and Caucasians. She is making tests in the psychological laboratory of the college of education, Amoy university.

Miss Chen has already proved to the satisfaction of her superiors that the Chinese boy or girl of high school age has a more retentive memory than the average occidental youth. Tests have shown that the young Chinese can look at a printed page for a few minutes and repeat it verbatim the next day.

Miss Chen worked this out in class rooms. She found that the average pupil here could memorize 1,062 words of prose or 702 of poetry in less than an hour. This is equivalent to four pages of an ordinary sized book printed in English.

The experiments are now being conducted with adolescents. These are all natives of Fukien province, but later she hopes to extend her researches into all provinces of China.

Another line of work which she has in mind would determine the color preferences and the percentage of color blindness among her people.

SOCIAL DISEASES present one of our greatest health problems. They are widely prevalent. People are often infected without their knowledge. The results are dangerous and if uncared for may prove destructive to health and efficiency. They are frequently the cause of obscure symptoms and puzzling ailments.

Thorough medical examinations including blood and other laboratory tests will disclose the presence of a social disease and proper and persistent medical treatment will prevent serious results.

According to high authorities social diseases are responsible for thousands of deaths every year, many of which are attributed to other causes. In addition thousands are sent to hospitals and institutions with insanity, heart disease and other disabling afflictions which result from social diseases. Many serious operations also may follow these diseases.

Good medical attention is essential to disclose the presence of a social disease and to obtain relief from it. Such medical attention can be secured within your means from Your Doctor or from the Public Health Institute. Treatment also is available to those without funds through the Institute or charitable clinics.

The Institute was organized more than ten years ago to combat social diseases in Chicago. Its medical staff are state registered physicians, who administer all treatments.

Fee for first examination, which includes blood and other necessary laboratory tests to determine the presence of a Social Disease, is $3.00; Urological and Gynecological treatments $1.00; six such treatments consecutively, $4.00; Intravenous injections of Neosalvarsan or Tryparsamide $3.00. Other tests and services necessary in the treatment of social diseases are available at moderate cost.

"Quick Comebacks" by Speedy Waiters

IF you have ever watched the clock in a hotel dining room until a slow waiter came back with your order, you have realized the vital importance of speed in restaurant service.

Saving Minutes in the Boston Oyster House

In the Morrison Hotel kitchens, the plan and equipment effectually prevent "lost motion" by attendants. For example, a Boston Oyster House waitress travels only 80 feet in serving a complete meal. Speed in filling orders is a prime factor in restaurant routine at the

NEW MORRISON HOTEL, CHICAGO

The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel—46 stories high, with 3,450 rooms.

MORRISON HOTEL

MADISON AND CLARK STREETS CHICAGO

A similar promptness marks the service in the Terrace Garden—in keeping with the vivacity of the colorful scene presented here. Lively groups of dancers, keeping time to the catchiest music, always present a bright and merry spectacle in full view of the "terraced" tables.

Easiest to Reach in Chicago

Not only while at table, but even on your way to the building, the absolute minimum of time is lost. The Morrison lies within quickest reach of downtown offices, railroad stations, theatres and stores.

(At Right) Corridor Between the TERRACE GARDEN and BOSTON OYSTER HOUSE

Rooms $2.50 Up, Each with Bath

Every room is outside, with bath, running ice water, telephone, bed-head lamp and Servidor. The exceptionally low rate-scale reflects the unique character of the location, which has developed subrentals that make these economies possible.
